

With Bismarck for his trusty agent

He'll keep the watch upon the Rhine. With vine clad hills and all that follows : We love thee, spite of beer and wine . "Oh ! Deutschland, Deutschland, ueber alle

Long live the German Fatherland ! Long live the;cause of Gallic freedom God raise a brave, inne-hearted band To guard and sately lead them !

Old Ireland is a blessed clime. Let Johnny Bull take solemn warning : For should she rise another time She'll choose St. Patrick's day and morning.

That patron saint will help her through ; Of toads and snakes he cleared old Erin . And, with the aid of Patrick, too, She'll send him cross the channel steerin'

On woman's rights we tune our song. But griet breaks up its fountains, The blessed cause has suffered wrong Among the Rocky mountains.

In vain the gallant Susan B., The maid of by-gone ages, Traversed the mountains and the lea With other Kastern sages

And Miss, or Mrs. Lucy Stone. Expounded laws divine and human. They failed, we sing it with a moan. To tranchise lovely woman.

Alas ! in all the book of fate, We find no greater slaughter ; To think the young contennial state nould snub Columbia's daughter.

But fair Wyoming lets her vote. Oh hie ve to her borders ! The land of sage hens and coyote Shall heal your sad disorders.

But, jokes aside, there's fun ahead. If men won't lead they'll sure be led Prepare, my lads, for changes great In Forum, Field, in Church and State

The times demand a president. Who, on Reform and Freedom bent Shall promulgate a firm decree To make entire equality.

No more distinctions vain of sex, Stateman or student then shall vex The coming man, as matters go, Will be done up in calico.

No weaker vessel, coving ruaid, Shall crave our sympathy or aid. No better halves humiliate Our pride, or squander our estate

No student then, his precious time, Shall waste in love or silly rhyme, But lofty thoughts all souls engage Amid that grand Utopian age

Deny it, if we dare or can, The woman is the better man : Then why not vote and legislate, Yea, head affairs in church and state !

Why longer tret and foam and rage ? "Tis thus we'll reach the golden age ; No more we'll stand up in the cars No longer bear the brunt of wars.

The ladies then shall equal be In all respects with you and me ; For they'll bear arms on tented field The glittering sword with valor wield.

And we'll bare arms at tub and tray When comes the female suffrage day The baby nuisance ne'er shall vex When cease distinctions vain of sex

But still I like the good old ways, The former were the better days, Grandmother's way, to me it seems WAS better than these suffrage dreams.

No use the bow without the cord. "Not good alone," thus saith the Lord, The girls will always want their beaux And draw boys in, as I suppos With silken cords, oh happy state ! Where each may find their destined mate.

Now Gothean brothers, brave and true, Too long, I fear, I've worried you ; But ere I close my festal lays I glance at past and future days,

And then my testal song is sung.

Ye vet'rans of the hoary past ! Wegroot, God make it not the last ; Long flourish here your earthly house And blessings on your frosty brows.

With joy we hall the grand old man amental hosts, the van, Of sac He led in trying days of yore, Sweet peace be his forevermore

With grief we miss the honest face Of one, who ran his earthly race, Who, ever true to triendship's call.
