PETTY PLEASANTRIES. From "Punch" and Other Alleged Con

"My brother-in-law," said Mrs. Ramsbothem, "came back from the Derby so sunburnt and red that he reminded me of Julius Casar after he had crossed the Rubicund."

The rector (to Irish plasterer)—"That mortar must have been very bad." Pat (with a grin)—"Faix, ye can't expict the likes o' good Roman cimint to stick to a Protestant church, sor !"

Materia Medica: American physician (to English ditto)—" Now in Vienna they're first rate at diagnosis; but then, you see, they always make a point of confirming it by a post-mortem."

"My dear," said a husband to his wife,
"what kind of a stone do you think they will give me when I am gone?" She answered, coolly: "It might be brimstone, John."

"Nothing," said an impatient husband, so reminds me of Balasm and his ass as two women stopping in church and obstructing the way, to indulge in their everlasting talk." "But you forget, my dear," retorted his wife, meekly, "that it was the angel who stopped in the way, and Balaam and his ass who complained of it."

An Austin Sunday school teacher was examining his class as to their Biblical knowledge. "Who was it that betrayed his master?" First boy: "Abraham batrayed his master." "That's not right, Next!" Second boy: "It was Judas Iscariot who betrayed his master." "That was right." A good little boy looked reproachfully at the teacher and said: "I am going to tell my ma you said it was right for Judas to betray his master."

In order to make the agricultural course in Delaware college, Newark, Del., more generally useful Prof. Reinhart, in a letter to the Wilmington News, makes this proposition: "Why should it not be practicable to form in some of our farming communities local agricultural reading circles, in official connection with this ing communities local agricultural reading circles, in official connection with this department of the college, whose aim shall be the home study of agricultural science?" Nothing more beautiful than this blending of literature and farming could be imagined, and promine at men interested in agricultural pursuits would doubtless be glad to contribute papers on topics with which they are familiar. An essay by Mr. Schenck on "How to Raise three Kings" is already talked of.
