RESERVED FROM DEATH.
The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is remarkable, and we beg to ask for the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1871 I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not walk by myself. In the summer of 1872 I was admitted to the City Hospital, where the doctor prescribed a course of medicine, but a friend told me of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. I laughed at my friends, thinking my case incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy my curiosity. I commenced to feel better, and began to revive. A day or two later I felt better still, and I have not since had any return of my complaint. I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with diseased lungs will be induced to take Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, and becoming cured, they will be able to testify to the fact that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles, and can positively say that it has done me more good than all the other medicine I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared, and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by H. B. Cochran, 137 North Queen street.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.
Getting Ready for Work—Defining Its Powers.
WASHINGTON, July 6.—The tariff commission assembled at the Ebbitt house at noon to-day. The opening address was made by John L. Hayes, president of the commission. He said the commission has no other functions than those provided by law, and that the objective point of its labors is the establishment of a judicial tariff or a revision of the existing tariff upon a scale of justice to all. No special industry can have undue advantage and the relations of the industries to each other no less than the special necessities of each must be considered. A radical or subversive change in the present general economical policy of the country is virtually interdicted, and a judicious, not a revolutionary tariff, a revision, not a destruction of existing tariff laws—is declared to be the object to which the labors of the commission should be directed. We may also find a solution of many questions of opposite individual or sectional interests and may avoid many difficulties by remembering, while not unmindful of the heavy department, Mr. Robeson referred to the investigation carried on by the committee on naval affairs of the forty-fourth Congress, and without mentioning him by name alluded in terms of deep contempt and insult to Mr. Whitthorne (Tenn.). Speaking of the men who headed the committee in that Congress he said that "If there was a man who was accused of stealing school funds in his own state he came to the front." At these words up started Mr. Whitthorne, and Mr. Robeson in the space in front of the speaker's desk exclaimed: "That is a lie, whoever tells it or who ever repeats it."

A Cat Whipped by Blackbirds.
The following extraordinary and touching scene was witnessed in the garden of a gentleman in Malden. A fledgling blackbird, evidently just escaped from its nest close by, had with some difficulty fluttered from a tree into the overhanging branches of a lime tree. A cat also had observed the young blackbird and was busily gnawing at the stem of the tree, thus the intention of getting on to the branch to obtain her prey; but meanwhile the parent birds had come upon the scene, and seeing the situation of their nestling, attacked the cat with their most powerful, trying to prevent her crawling on to the branch. They kept alternately flying at her, using their beaks and wings incessantly with the utmost fury and getting fearfully within range of the cat's claws, and while one was pouncing at her head the other would execute a flank attack, both of them keeping up all the time that continuous, noisy, angry chatter which blackbirds so well know how to make on an occasion. This bold, strategic movement confused the cat very much, as her position in the tree was not advantageous, but she kept snarling and striking out with her talons whenever an opportunity occurred. The interested observer tried to help the birds, but the lower branches of the tree were intervening, and he was not of much use. He was obliged to leave the exciting scene, but after a long absence returned and found the combat still going on, and a person who had watched during the interval said he had kept on the attack without ceasing for two hours to keep on the defense only; and the desperate struggle kept on for two hours till the birds were completely exhausted, and sat "all in a heap," looking as though they had just finished their fight. But the bird kept on the defense from their little fledgling, and their friend at last managed with some trouble to dislodge the cat. In the afternoon the birds seemed quite to have recovered themselves and were singing victoriously in the garden.

LOVE IN CHICAGO.
Would Not Bet on a Sure.
Chicago Tribune.
"I do not believe you."
Ethelbert McGuire winced as Myrtle Hathaway spoke these words—cruel, bitter, words, that seemed to pierce his very heart. He had been there in good time, the time of silence and shadows. The swallows were twittering among the leaves as their noisy way, the ice cream lairs were casting their baleful light across the broad thoroughfare from which the rattle, the roar and crash of life in a great city had just departed.
