SLAIN BY HIS STEP-SON.
 A MAN OF MOST BRUTAL INSTINCTS.
 The Youthful Murderer Leaves the House With the Instrument of Death.
 A murdered man lay on the sandal floor of the German saloon, No. 531 North Front street, Philadelphia, Sunday evening, and his horrified wife stood on the front door steps, shrieking as only a terrified woman can. A few minutes later the house was filled and surrounded by a throng of excited neighbors. Wilhelm Kremer, the victim of the tragedy, was alive when he was carried into the room, but he died a few minutes after being laid upon a lounge in the back yard. Kremer was forty-five years of age, six feet two inches tall, and had a temper. He came to America fourteen years ago and worked as a laborer until 1875, when the met and he married Anna Bertz, a prepossessing widow, who managed the lodging house and saloon in which Kremer was murdered. Mrs. Bertz had six children, three girls and three boys, when she and Kremer, who was at that time acting as her landlord, were married. They lived happily together about six months, and then Kremer, who appears to have been a chronic drunkard, revealed his bad nature and began systematically ill-treating his wife and her children.
 Evidence of Brutality.
 He took entire charge of the business of the lodging house and saloon and the police say that he was rarely sober. On several occasions his wickedness compelled his wife and step children to leave the house, and the neighbors say it was no uncommon thing to see the children running out of the house to escape beatings. Four years ago another child was added to the family and for a time Kremer sobered up and behaved respectably. His love of drink and natural brutality, however, soon caused him to drift back into his old habits, and the police were often called upon to protect his family from his drunken wrath. Two or three weeks ago his wife was compelled to leave the house and go live with her relatives, but two weeks ago Kremer, by his promises of reformation, induced her to return to 531 North Front street. The two eldest children of the family—Herman Bertz, aged 18, and Charles, aged 16—have for many months been counted among the most regular and industrious of the people employed in the city's wood turning establishment, No. 1021 North Front street. Their stepfather compelled them to work every day that the factory was open and every Saturday night they gave to him their earnings. The boys were apprentices and their combined wages usually amounted to about six dollars per week. All Saturday Kremer was saturated with liquor and when the boys returned from work about six o'clock he was pacing up and down the saloon scolding his wife. The past week was an unusually dull one for the boys and their combined wages amounted to but three dollars.

A Desperate Assault.
 Herman, who is short, slender and delicate, entered the saloon in advance and placed his and his brother's meagre wages on a beer table in front of Kremer, who at once wanted to know why the amount was so small. Herman explained, but Kremer became frightfully enraged and declared that the boys were loafers and no-od-wells, who did not bring home enough money to pay for their keep. Mrs. Kremer sided with the boys and this infuriated Kremer's wrath that he dashed the money to the floor, pulled a heavy blackjack from his pocket and attacked Herman, the eldest stepson. Mrs. Kremer screamed, Charles endeavored to catch his father's powerful arm and Herman retreated to a corner of the room vainly endeavoring to shield his head from the murderous blows of the blackjack. Herman's head was dreadfully cut in half a dozen places by the blackjack, and twice he was felled to the floor by the same weapon. Kremer literally wore out the blackjack on the unfortunate young man, and later in the evening the police found pieces of the covering and head scattered about the room. Blinded as he was with the blood that ran from the wounds on his head, Herman at last succeeded in striking his past Kremer and ran into the dining room, which is part of the rear of the saloon. Kremer followed, waving the then useless handle of the worn-out mace in his hand. On the oil-cloth-covered dining table in no corner of the room was a master courier's knife with a blade fully two feet long, which was used by the family in carving and cutting bread.

A Fatal Knife-Thrust.
 Herman seized this terrible weapon and chopped his wicked pursuer on the right side of the neck with it, completely severing the jugular vein. Kremer fell groaning and fell head foremost across the table. The cutting was done so quickly that neither Mrs. Kremer nor Charles got into the dining-room in time to see it. The blood gushed from the three-inch gash in Kremer's neck in torrents, and when his wife saw it she ran to the front door, shrieking murder. Charles led his wounded brother into the yard and washed his head at the hydrant, after which they went out through a back gate and escaped. Two hours later a little girl named Smith found the sabre-like weapon with which Kremer was killed lying in the yard of No. 524 Beach street. The brothers spent Saturday night in a railroad car and surrendered themselves on Sunday. The room in which the tragedy occurred was filled with blood when the dying man was carried out into the air to await the arrival of a physician, but before one came he died. From ten to fifteen minutes elapsed between the cutting and the victim's death. The police of the Seventh ward district, in which the tragedy occurred, say that Kremer was an exceedingly quarrelsome and dangerous man. His wife declares that last week he threatened to poison the whole family.

SHOT BY AN OLD ENEMY.
 Almost a Tragedy in Camden—The Cause of the Shooting.
 Philadelphia Times.
 A few minutes after nine o'clock Saturday night, Albert Green rushed into the City Hall, Camden, and asked hurriedly for an officer. His right hand was bleeding freely, and as he proceeded through the long corridor he left a track of blood upon the floor. When interrogated by an official he said he had been shot by Frank Collins before a house on Carpenter street while attempting to compel his wife to leave his assassin's company. The police were not long in crossing the lots which intervened between the headquarters and the scene of the shooting, and found the neighborhood of Eleventh and Market streets in a state of commotion. Upon their arrival at the place indicated the officers found it impossible to learn much concerning the affair or the whereabouts of the would-be murderer.
 It appears that Collins and Green hail from Lancaster, Pa. Collins was an old man of Green's wife before her marriage and rumor has it that the old attachment was nursed by her after her vows at the matrimonial altar. Shortly after Green removed from Lancaster to Camden he was followed by Collins. Both men found employment with Moro Phillips & Co., and a deadly enmity sprang up between them at once. Their quarrels were so frequent that Collins was finally discharged. This happened about three months ago, at about the same time, it is alleged, that Green found his wife to be false and Collins her betrayer. This circumstance caused Collins to leave his home for awhile and during his absence the man and his wife were preparing to reconcile their differences. An agreement had been made by which the two were to have met. Mrs. Green, however, did not fulfill her promise with her husband and he proceeded in quest of her. As he passed the house, No. 531 North Front street, he saw his wife seated on the steps conversing with his old rival and several others. As he approached the steps he made an attempt to seize his enemy, but before he could accomplish his purpose Collins drew a revolver and fired twice. The first shot took effect in the hand, which was held up before the face as a protection, and the second sped by, doing no harm. Green, who boarded on Market street a few doors below Eleventh, was taken there and medical aid summoned. It was a half hour his assailant had not been apprehended.

MINOR TRAGEDIES.
 The Daily Budget of Crime and Calamity.
 In Decatur, Ind., Alonzo D. McCarthy, attorney, was killed when he was married on Saturday, but committed suicide by shooting. A row of stone tenement houses near the Reading railroad, at the western end of Potstown borough, were partially destroyed. A waterspout in Tazewell county, Missouri, extended over half mile in width and swept away many fields of corn and wheat and much stock.
 The house, barn and outbuildings of Captain T. Ames, at Hampton, N. H., were burned. Loss, $8,000.
 Friday night Charles Penn, a farmer, who lives six miles from Frankfort, Ky., was assassinated by some unknown person.
 The mill-grinding mill and storage house of the Berger & Engle brewing company, on Thompson street, above Thirty-first, Philadelphia, was partly destroyed by fire on Saturday. Loss, $20,000.
 Mrs. Mary Herman, aged 52, cut her throat at her home in the southwest section of Baltimore and died. She was in comfortable circumstances.
 Patrick Lyons, aged 35, a minor employed at the Philadelphia coal company's No. 3 colliery at Lost Creek, was instantly killed by a fall of top-rock. He leaves a wife and five children.
 Frank H. Tracy, nearly two years old, whose parents reside at 1721 South Sixth street, Philadelphia, was the victim of a compression of the brain, caused by a tumble up in the pavement in the morning from a coach, in which he was not securely fastened.

Quantities of dead fish were seen on the streets of the Schuylkill river, between Reading and Birdsboro, on Friday. It is believed that the water has been poisoned by some substance poured into it.
 Ten years ago a grain of corn lodged in the ear of the son of Samuel Hoffman, of Lykens, Dauphin county. All efforts to remove it failed until a few days ago when the boy picked it out with a horshoe nail.
 Albert Weake is 80 years of age, but he considered himself young enough to lead a cow down National avenue, at Milwaukee. The cow certainly had a contrary opinion, and gored him to death.
 James H. Kuder kissed a neighbor's young wife while assisting her to move some furniture, at Ontonagon, O. Her husband brought suit for damages, and Kuder, on hearing of this, immediately cut his throat.
 Kilgore, the escaped convict, who shot Marshal Bryant at Belmont, Ill., last Saturday, was found dead on Thursday about one hundred yards from the scene of the fight. His body had been nearly devoured by hogs and buzzards.
 Twenty more bodies of the victims of the Sciota disaster were recovered on Saturday. This makes a total of thirty five bodies recovered thus far. A fleet of 25 yachts started from Miami, Florida, yesterday. They will drag the Ohio river from the point to Wheeling, a distance of 20 miles. The bodies recovered on Saturday are all those of persons living in East Liverpool and Wellsville. The excitement in the vicinity of the sunken steamer is gradually subsiding.

Nathan Osborn, aged 14, ran away from the East Greenwich academy, at New London, in April, and was not heard of until last week, when he was found wandering in Stuyvesant park, ragged, barefooted and homeless. He was taken to police headquarters and his mother telegraphed at Chelsea, Mass. He stated that he had been west as far as the Missouri to shoot Indians, but was tired of being independent.
 Patrick McCool, a laborer employed on the Pittsburgh & Yonghiughen railway, now building, was the victim of a premature blasting explosion. He was thrown fifty feet in the air, receiving internal injuries from the effects of which he died. Two co-workers, named James Kelley and Albert McKnight, were also seriously injured, the former perhaps fatally.
 Death of a Pittsburgh Journalist.
 Dr. David Palmer, a well known journalist of Pittsburgh, died at his home on Bedford street, on Saturday of brain fever brought on by overwork. For some days previous to his death he was subject to paroxysms of insanity, when it required the strength of several attendants to restrain him from doing violence. He was well known over the state from his newspaper attack on Speaker Ben Howel, two years ago, when the latter had a resolution passed expelling him from the floor of the House. At that time he was Harrisburg correspondent of the Pittsburgh Commercial Gazette, on the staff of which paper he has remained since his illness.
 Extraordinary Riding.
 Miss Myrtle Peck, of Michigan, aged 14 rode at the Rochester driving park 20 miles in 43 minutes 24 seconds, beating the best recorded time by 3 minutes. She rode seven horses, none of which were considered fast, and two or three of which were considered slow.
 At San Jose, Cal., to 10 mile race (horse back) between Miss Bell Cook, champion of America, and Miss Ida Rogers, of Santa Clara county, for $1,000 aside and an additional $1,000 from the agricultural society, was won by Miss Cook by a quarter of a mile in 21 minutes. Each used five horses.
 Repeating her Foxy.
 Miss Ada Deyser, of Camden, Ulster county, N. Y., a white girl of respectable family ran away with a burly negro named John Wesley Sampson, to whom she had been secretly married. The event caused much excitement at the time. The girl's relatives were wealthy and held a high position in society. The poor girl has bitterly experienced the folly of her act and is now an inmate of the Sullivan county poor-house.

Other's Misfortunes.
 A French wit has said: "We are all strong enough to bear the misfortunes of others." A kindred sentiment is found in Aristotle. Ward's willingness to sacrifice all of his second estate in the purchase of a horse, and the misfortunes of others? Why see others sacrificed to the Moloch of disease kidneys or liver, broken down in health, weak, wasted, hastening to the grave, when we know that Shiloh's Kidney is just the specific that will make a perfect cure? That man with weak back, sore loins, distressed feeling, lost energy, has disease of the kidneys, and Hunt's Kidney is just what he needs. Let him not be sacrificed, but let him the good news of this wonderful medicine.
 Nervousness, peevishness, and fretting, so often connected with overworked females, is rapidly relieved by Brown's Iron Bitters. For sale at H. B. Cochran's drug store, 137 North Queen street.

 health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?
 You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.
 How? By getting one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, and taking it regularly according to directions.
 Manufactured, Ohio, Nov. 23, 1881.
 Gentlemen—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in my side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.
