ANNOUNCED IN THE TRADING PLACES.

A Married Man Kisses Twice with a Girl and About Two Weeks Ago Edwin DeWitt of Great Barrington, Mass., left his wife and three children, in desolate circumstances, and with Nellie Wilcox, aged sixteen years, fled to Albany, being pursued by the father and brother of the girl, he went to Canada, where they were found at St. Catharines, living together at a hotel. Officers got a clew of their whereabouts by DeWitt's ordering the Berkshire Courier sent there under an assumed name. They caught the girl and the girl was induced to return home, DeWitt remaining there, as the officers had to power to arrest him. Since returning home, the girl has privately corresponded with DeWitt, and a plan was laid for a clandestine meeting upon a lonely road 10th of Great Barrington to West Stockbridge, on the State Line railroad. A brother-in-law of Miss Wilcox in some way becoming aware of it, notified four officers who had laid a plan for his capture. The brother-in-law got the confidence of the girl by saying she could get with DeWitt and he would accompany her to the place of meeting. Arriving there DeWitt was found, and taking the girl went up the road, where he had a carriage in waiting. Officers sprang that moment from the bushes and commanded DeWitt to stop, but with the girl he began to run. Another officer was undressed, and then another officer fired upon the eloping party. DeWitt returned the fire and there was a general exchange of shots between the parties. The night being dark to one was thought one of the officers had a narrow escape, the ball going near his face. At length DeWitt, after a desperate resistance, was captured and disarmed. He was handcuffed and shackled and brought to the village, while Miss Wilcox was conveyed home. The arrested DeWitt was arraigned before court in the presence of many people. Miss Wilcox was brought in closely veiled. DeWitt being charged with adultery and common-law marriage, being fully prepared the case was continued until Monday, in default of $1,000 bail the prisoner was committed to the jail until then. It is stated that the girl married because she did not get away the second time.

A FATAL EXPLOSION.

Railroad Laborers Killed and Injured by a Premature Discharge of Powder.

A terrible accident occurred on the West Shore railroad, at 2:30 yesterday afternoon, about one mile south of Milton, N. Y. The Cameron A. Fagan's contract were twenty-eight laborers. Mostly Italians were employed. Thomas Egan, the foreman, was in the act of tamping a hole for a blast, in which were about two kegs of black powder, when suddenly there was a premature explosion. William Flowers, a laborer, was at work on the line at the time, and under Egan's feet there were a number of other laborers. Powers saw Egan sitting upright, with a stone weighing about one hundred pounds on his feet. He hurried to him and threw it off with an iron bar and then went to the assistance of the others. He saw two Italians lying dead and two alive, one of the latter expiring shortly, with his legs crushed by a stone weighing fifty pounds. They got up and crawled to the edge of the stone, but found it impossible. The man will die. Powers says the twenty-eight men were at work there and he knows that eighteen are dead. Egan and a man named Mike Callahan, were brought to Milton on a boat. The others were cared for as well as possible. The bodies of a number of the killed are buried. No. 119, an Italian, died of death shock. No. 117, missing, supposed to be buried under debris. Injured: Thomas Egan, foreman, badly hurt internally and about the face; John Fontana, laborer, leg broken, in four places, skull fractured and hip broken, will die; Michael Callahan, right arm broken and head hurt, case serious; Jas. S. Edgus, slightly injured; Barry Hogan, badly injured and case serious; No. 187, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 188, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 189, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 190, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 191, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 192, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 193, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 194, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 195, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 196, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 197, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 198, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 199, Italian, leg crushed, will die; No. 200, Italian, leg crushed, will die.

MARRIED AT MIDNIGHT.

A Wealthy White Woman Weds a Colored Man at Washington.

"Little" Washington is greatly excited over a case of miscegenation which involves one of the most prominent families. The contracting parties are John Miller a hotel porter—black as they make the name—and Miss Virginia Colby, an attractive lady, 35 years old, who controls considerable wealth in her own right and belongs to one of the most respectable and wealthy families in the county. For the past two years she had been secretly receiving visits from her black admirer, and she had admitted to some friends that she loved and intended to marry him some day. She kept her word, and at midnight of Wednesday the two were joined by Rev. Mr. Ross, a colored preacher. Some years ago, the friends of the couple had advised her to marry a white man, but she had refused to do so, and she had made this assertion merely to allay their suspicions. Immediate steps will be taken by her friends to sever the knot which the colored preacher tied.

Robbing the Cradle and the Grave.

Philadelphia Times.

Men may come and men may go, but Jay Hubbell and his voluntary contribution assessment circular go on forever. Not content with sending notices to Indians not taxed and the schoolmaster who teach them, both the cradle and the grave are relentlessly laid under tribute to satisfy the greed of this commercial congressional committee in its eager demand for more. Two instances have lately come to light in the Brown Navy yard which illustrate the contemptible meanness of this ruthless exaction.

A little boy two years of age, who does errands in the yard and is paid one dollar per day for his services, has been served with a circular requiring six dollars and twenty cents. The boy is an orphan and his small pittance aids to support his widowed mother and one or two other children besides himself. This is the cradle contribution. The grave is taxed in the same way in the person of a man eighty years of age, who does sweeping and such light work when it can be had, for which he receives one dollar and a quarter per day and gets work about one hundred days in the year. He is asked to voluntarily contribute seven dollars. Another instance of the cradle contribution to this congressional fund is found in the case of the water boys who serve the workmen on the Davis Island dam, below Pittsburg. They receive seventy-five cents a day, and have been asked to contribute six dollars and twenty cents. These are only specimen levies cutted among the multitude of such instances which are constantly coming to light. But it was reserved for Field

Marshal Cooper to assess the ex-officio-tender. One of his persuasive circulars with the little postscript attachment calling for nine dollars was sent to an ex-deputy postmaster in Eastern Pennsylvania, who has not been in office for a year and who never received any salary for his services when he did serve, he having been appointed that he might give a little gratuitous assistance to the regular postmaster who was a personal friend and a cripple. Perhaps when Hubbell and Cooper exhaust their list of schoolmasters, Indian children, old men and absentees, they had better send a few circulars to the deaf and dumb and blind asylums. The dumb couldn't talk back and the blind couldn't see to read the documents, and perhaps the naughty newspapers would never find out how the bosses raised their money.
