PROMPTLY REJECTED.

THE INDEPENDENT'S PEACE PROPOSALS.

The Regular Candidates Decline to Withdraw.

At a meeting of the Republican state executive committee in Philadelphia yesterday there were present besides Cooper, General Negley, Horace A. Beale, of Parkersburg; George W. Mahaffy, of Marietta; S. Newton Pettis, of Greenville; General Frank Reeder, of Easton; Michael Schall, of York, and Amos H. Slack and Isaiah C. Wear (colored), of Philadelphia, Isaiah M. Pherson, of Towanda, and James P. Coburn, Bellefonte, who were absent for what reason was not stated.

When Chairman Cooper called the committee to order there did not seem to be much probability of protracted discussion. Everything was serene; the members pushed complacently at their cigars as if the affair were merely matter-of-form and nothing was to be decided. Gen. Frank Reeder was appointed secretary. The three communications, the first from Chairman McKee, the second from four of the five Independent candidates, and the third from William McMichael, which were read several days ago, were formally read. After a little quiet talk the chairman submitted a letter, signed by all the candidates on the Beaver ticket, dated the 15th instant and addressed to Chairman Cooper, as follows:

"We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, through you, of a communication addressed to us by the Hon. John Stewart, Colonel Levi Bird Duff, Major George W. Merrick and George Junkin, esq., in response to certain propositions submitted by the Republican state committee, representing the Republicans of Pennsylvania, looking to an amicable and honorable adjustment of whatever differences there may be among the various elements of the party, without accepting any of the propositions submitted by your committee."

"This communication asks us, as a condition precedent to any recommendation on the part of the writers thereof, to declare that, in the event of the calling of a new convention, we will severally forbid the Republicans of Pennsylvania to call upon us for our services as candidates for the various positions to be filled by the people at the coming election. To say that in the efforts to determine whether or not our nomination was the free and unbiased choice of the voters, we have pledged ourselves to call concurrently with your committee and are bound by its action. We therefore respectfully suggest that we have no power or authority to act independently of the committee or to make any declaration at variance with the propositions submitted in accordance with its action."

"There ought to be and can be no such thing as personal antagonism in this contest. We severally and emphatically disclaim any intention to proceed to a feeling of this kind towards any person. We fraternize with and are ready to support any and every citizen who loves the cause of true Republicanism, and with this declaration we submit the whole subject to your deliberate judgment and wise consideration."

After the reading of this letter there was a slight difference of opinion as to whether action with regard to answering the notes from the Independent candidates should be deferred. General Reeder gave his emphatic opinion that the matter should be postponed to which Isaac C. Wear said "amen." Chairman Cooper then arose and spoke in favor of setting "the letter business" then and there. He thought that, as a matter of courtesy, this should be done, letting alone the question of the importance of the writers being informed as possible of the contents and future action of that committee. "This branch of the party," added Mr. Cooper, "can only come to one conclusion. It is to decide at once what that is to be."

S. Newton Pettis spoke in the same strain and pointed out to the committee the folly of a vacillating and uncertain course. He thought that if the party did not at once take action it would be "placing itself in an anomalous position."

After the arguments of Messrs. Cooper and Pettis, General Reeder was induced to change his opinion and retract what he had already said about the advantages of postponing action. He also remarked, speaking in behalf of setting up the controversy by an immediate reply, that anything that might be done towards deferring would look like sitting the doors and refusing to be reconciled."

General Negley feared that all discussion with regard to the ultimate resolution might be misunderstood. The question of asking candidates at present on the ticket to withdraw he thought was one which the committee should not touch. He was against the disfranchisement of any citizen. If the people were to be given a chance of expressing their opinion and electing their own candidate, there should be no disfranchisement. He thought that anything that would look like withdrawing the nominees "would commit the executive to business."

Michael Schall, of York, was the only member in favor of the withdrawal of candidates. He said that if it was for the good of the party he was willing to humiliate himself so far as to ask them not to stand for re-nomination. Nobody else, however, seemed to approve of such a course. Eventually General Negley read the draft of a letter to be forwarded to Chairman McKee and the Independent candidates, which was unanimously adopted and signed by all the members present.

The Committee's Decision. Subsequently the letter was addressed as follows: "To the Honorable I. D. McKee, Chairman of the State Committee, and Messrs. John Stewart, Levi Bird Duff, George W. Merrick, George Junkin and William McMichael, Candidates of the Independent Republicans."

"GENTLEMEN: Your three several letters have been received and the executive committee of the Republican state committee has given them full consideration. We are also in receipt of the accompanying letter from our candidates, which we forward as part of the general proceedings. All of the communications which you have received in this connection and cannot be reconciled with each other. The differences between your candidates are so wide that they practically bar any further attempt at negotiation on the basis proposed by them. Our action in submitting the propositions, which embodied all of the methods and principles ever asked by all those whom you are called to represent, exhausts the powers entrusted to us by the convention of June 21, which authorized the Republican state committee 'to adopt all honorable means to harmonize the Republican party so as to secure success in November."

These letters, then, are the result of the general belief that the action of the "Stalwart" executive committee had put an end to peace negotiations. True, the Independent state committee has yet to hold its meeting of the 27th instant and formally accept the "Stalwart" proposition, which all the Independent candidates have rejected, but nobody can be found who expects the Independent committee to approve any of these propositions.

BEAVER AT BRISTOL.

He Would Give $10,000 to Be Out of 44-Cameron a Small Man.

Gen. Beaver was at Bristol, Bucks county, yesterday, and having been surrounded in the evening by his political friends he said in his speech: "I have not sought office of any kind. I have not sought the office of stand nominated for to-night. I would rather give $10,000 in cash now—if I could mortgage something, for my bank account wouldn't stand it—to be let alone, to apply myself to my private affairs, to my family and to the occupation to which I am attached and the profession in which I am concerned and the profession which I love. But I regard it as the part of every man to obey when duty calls. I have never shirked my duty. I did not wish it in 1861 when the country called its people to arms."

The general wished that he were up higher and that there was more light, so that the people might look into his face and see whether he was fit to be their governor. "I do not like the word," said he, "I would rather say, your servant."

Beaver's Opinion of Cameron. General Beaver then told the crowd that he would be glad to answer any questions. There was silence. The general, after looking out on the scene of faces, was about to resume when he was interrupted by the crowd. It was that of Harold Peirce, son of a member of the firm of C. W. & J. Peirce, wealthy manufacturers of Bristol.

"General," said he, "I shall not vote the Republican ticket, but will vote for the Independent candidates, unless I am satisfied that your administration will not be organized in the interest of Cameron." "That's a very fair question," said the general, "and I'll answer it. I said when I was nominated that I had not made a pledge to a living man, and I say now that I cannot make any pledge. Why, what is one man? That is the trouble with our Independents. They have magnified a little man into a big man and think he fills the whole of the Republican party and the whole of this great state of Pennsylvania. Don Cameron, my friends, is not a big man, but a very little man. [Great cheering.] He has no hold upon me. [Cheers.] When a man is wrong the thing for you to do is to defeat him. Now, I can make no specific pledges, but I want to pledge myself to organize an administration against Mr. Cameron. He would not want me to organize an administration in his favor. I cannot be expected to organize an administration that will control the representatives and senators of the state Legislature. I did not come into Bucks county to make pledges like that. Such things are only worthy of the post-house politician. Let our friend fight Mr. Cameron if he likes, but let him stay in the Republican party and do it."

General Beaver's allusion to Don Cameron was soon the talk of the town.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Minor Tragedies and Other Sensations.

Willie O'Brien, of Pottsville, aged 10, who shot himself in the hand with a toy pistol on the fourth of July, has died of lockjaw.

William Deisher, a Philadelphia & Reading brakeman, living at Frankville, while coupling cars at the foot of Mahoney place fell under the wheels and had both his legs taken off. He has a wife and two children.

In the Rochester driving park yesterday W. H. B. Colman drove Colonel Parson's team, Saint Cloud and Valley Chief, one mile in 2:23. The pair were timed by the watches of five prominent horsemen.

Mrs. Hugh Evans, her young son and a little girl also named Evans were drowned in the Hildegarde canal. The children died beyond their depth and the boy's mother in attempting to assist them was drowned as well.

A colored man of Philadelphia, named James Emery, dropped dead yesterday morning while sitting in the Spring Garden hotel at Schuylkill Haven. Just previous to his death he complained of great pain about the heart. He died of heart disease, with which he was troubled for many years. The deceased was an old brakeman on the Colburn line.

On Monday Constantine Speakman, of Kennett Square, arrested in Maryland George Hoopes, who severely injured Evan Dixon and his sister, a few days ago, by beating them. After striking down Mr. Dixon with a club he struck his sister in the face, knocking some of her teeth out and otherwise injuring her. Hoopes then fled and went over to Maryland. He was taken yesterday to West Chester and lodged in prison.

In Bethlehem, William Sowers was arrested in a circus tent on suspicion of having shot a young man named Geo. Acker, aged seventeen, at Cataasqua. Acker received a pistol ball in his chest, which, passing under the tongue, lodged in the neck, inflicting a dangerous and probably fatal wound. The shooting was done on a tent at a circus. Sowers disappeared on Monday. A search party was organized from Cataasqua shortly after the shooting and when arrested here, though denying that he fired the shot, said he feared he might be roughly handled at Cataasqua.

ON THE HILL.

More About Arabi Pasha.

The correspondent of the News telegraphs as follows: Arabi Pasha is still issuing orders and making appointments in the khedive's name. Arabi's forces on the canal are estimated at 10,000, including a tent at a circus. Sowers disappeared on Monday. A search party was organized from Cataasqua shortly after the shooting and when arrested here, though denying that he fired the shot, said he feared he might be roughly handled at Cataasqua.

The last Englishman who left Cairo and arrived at Suez, describes the people as wild and threatening. He thinks the European portion of the city will be burned. The Ulemas are preaching war for Arabi Pasha. The latter said when the last shot of the bombardment was fired, that all the principal traitors to his cause must be put away; there were only about forty, and ten minutes would suffice. The loyal ministers naturally felt anxious.

Arabi Pasha threatens to cut the Mahoudak canal, which supplies the town with water. He now presents provisions from Catania, so that, as members of Europeans are retreating, there is likelihood of a famine. An unsuccessful attempt has been made to fire Cairo. An attempt to seize an Englishman's house there was frustrated by the loyal governor.

It is reported that Arabi Pasha is preparing to move. Disappointment and indignation are most keen at the moment of allowing the favorable moment for ending the revolt at a stroke to slip by while the troops are engaged in insubordination by orders from him.

Native state that during the retreat of Arabi, one of the shells burst in the midst of a body of soldiers and killed 200.

A New Spectacle. A driver boy named Staples, employed on the Chemung of the Mount Pleasant colliery, was dragged to death at the heels of his horse. He mounted the animal at quitting time to ride to the barn, but the horse took fright and leaped down a steep embankment, throwing the driver, whose leg was caught in the harness. The efforts of the spectators to stop the runaway, together with the shrieks of the hapless boy crying for help, made the horse wild and he dashed across the railroad track and over an adjoining fence in the direction of the barn, where he came to a standstill. Staples was lying when he expired in a few minutes.

"These Warnings are Prophecies." Was the touching inscription placed upon the tombstone of a husband and wife. There is nothing but the most medicine made, and the domestic warfare as it health; and especially domestic in the face, loss of physical power, an early breaking down, and the loss of one unit to attend to his business. Then comes anxiety, and the temper comes ruffled, and peace flies out of the window. Behold the great restorer, Hunt's Remedy! Quietly it comes to the man's relief. One bottle searches out the issues and begins its cure. Two or three more take on the good work, and the man is restored to his proper functions, the weakness is gone, the blood is renewed, the blood of health returns, and the old-time mental vigor in one's business affairs and there is no more trouble, but lasting peace. All hail to Hunt's Remedy!
