JULY JOKES.

The Funny Men in Mid Summer. Hostility to New England has not died out entirely in the South. A Georgia paper states the rumor that Oscar Wilde is to be married to a Boston girl.

A Vermont man has invented a gu which will send a bullet through nine men standing one behind another. During a battle men always stand thus to let the enemy have a fair pop.

"Why don't you grow a mustache, Edwin? You would look much better." don't want one. I've got a pair of criketer's "Cricketer's whiskers! What are they?" "Eleven on each side, dear." It is stated that, since the Hon. Tug Wilson declined to be knocked out of time in four rounds, the movement to change the name of Boston to Sullivan City has been abandoned.

"There is nothing like settling down," said the retired merchant confidentially to a neighbor. "When I gave up my business I settled down and found I had quite a comfortable fortune. If I had settled up I should not have had a cent."

The chapsome rams of tender age Frisk gally o'er the lawn, The sweatful farmer smites his mules,

And plows the growing corn,
The city cousins packs their trunks,
And coo their soltest "coo,"
"Dear uncle—We'll be down next week,
And bring the children, too."

"Ma," he asked, "what's them ?" and he pointed to "hors d'aucres" on the bill of fare. "Oh," said ma, "them there is one of the fish they give folks as don't care to eat soups; but I wouldn't eat none

if I was you.' One of the younger Coquellin's stories relates that during a visit to Brighton, Sarah Bernhardt lay down on the beach dressed in white. She was brusquely him at the Presbyterian church up there, awakened from her reveries by a washerwomen, who picked her up, having mis-taken her for a bath towel laid out to dry.

In alluding to the death of a pig from sunstroke, the Chicago Inter-Ocean says during one visit to that melancholy place that "we must all be more careful and they had agreed to leave town together wear sponges or green leaves in our hats." It isn't often that a confession so frank in her admirer proposed to join some band its nature emanates from Chicago. - Boston of Western border outlaws. She was to

"Didn't you tell me, sir, that you could hold the plough?" said a farmer to an Irishman whom he had taken on trial. "Arrah! be aisy now," said Pat; "how the deuce can I hould it and two horses that had, "said. "He was a good man, always used me well and was liberal." They had arranged to fly the day before the McClure killing occurred. "Nig" told her he formerly belonged to Jesse James' band of drawing it away from me? But give it to me in the barn, and bejabers ! I'll hould it with anybody."

Two boys sent into the country by a "fresh air fund "thus conversed: "Say, Pat, will we see apples on trees?" "Ho! of course you will," said his companion, with a tone of conscious superiority. "But I don't like them," added he; "I ate some in the country last summer and they were sour. Apples that grow in barrels are best."-New York Telegram,

An a:tful juryman, addressing the clerk of the court while the latter was administering the oath, said: "Speak up; I cannot hear what you say." "Stop," said baron Alderson, from the bench. "Are brother. you deaf ?" "Yes, my lord, of one ear." "Then you may leave the box, for it is necessary that jurymen should hear both

The Deacon's Daughter.

Chicago Tribune. "My darling papa!"

As she spoke these words to her father, the only father she had in all the wide, wide world, Myrtle Hathaway placed about his neck a pair of dimpled white arms and looked into the bearded face with a trusting, I-would-not bet-seven-to-three-on-you look that told more eloquently than could any words of the deep love she bore him. Bending over his daughter, and kissing her tenderly where the Bloom of Youth was thinnest, Mr. Hathaway seated himself on a fauteuil, the girl kneeling by his "Do you love me very much, papa?" she asked, smoothing with her soft white hands the bronzed forehead over which the furrows of time were beginning to

"Why, what a foolish question for my little, one to ask;" was the reply, and a kiss stopped the prattle of the pretty lips. "You know, my darling," the father continued, "that my whole life is wrapped up in yours; that your happiness is my joy, your disappointment my bitterest

"And would you do anything to please me, papa?" "Of course I would, my child. Why do you ask such a foolish question?" Then," said the girl slowly, every word telling by its pathos of the earnestness with which it was spoken, "take me to the races to morrow."

Reaching silently around to his pistol pocket Mr. Hathaway drew forth a quarter-stretch badge and placed it in his daughter's hand. The girl looked at it eagerly, gave a little cry of joy, and kissed her father again.

Rising from the fauteuil, Mr. Hathaway went to the window and looked out upon the night. "God help me," he said in husky tones, choking down a sob that was welling up from his supper, "I shall be broke to morrow night, for there are two pacing races and a free-for-all trot on the programme.'

Something New in Politics.

Pittsburgh Post. The letter of the Democratic candidate for governor, Robert E. Pattison, accepting the nomination, is eminently characteristic of the business qualities of the man and is something decidedly new is politics.

There is no gush here—no loud profes sions or a wealth of captivating promises, It is a characteristic of the Philadelphia reformer, precisely as a long letter full of worn out platitudes or discussing antique issues would have been out of place from him. In the great work he has done in Philadelphia, his course has been that of a business man, thoroughly informed of his duties and responsibilities. He has allowed his acts to speak for him, and been

A LITTLE GIRL'S ADVENTURE. Married at Thirteen and the Compe Thioves and Europers—A Strange Story.

A young girl named Susan Atkins was arrested at Irwin Station, near l'ittsburgh, whose history as told by herself is peculiar and romantic. The arrest was made at the instance of the girl's grandmother, who lives in McKeesport. The young lady is thirteen, smart and quite pretty. When brought to headquarters she answered quickly and intelligently all questions put, and in the story of her adventures gave evidence that she had dealings with the perpetrators of the McClure trag-edy, which occurred in Dead Man's Hollow on the 2d of last August. She narrated to Detective Bowden that last September she became the bride of Bill Fattenberg, at McKees port, the ceremony being performed by a preacher of that place, and in this connec-tion made some bitter remarks about the preacher for officiating. Evidently she had grown into a dislike of her husband. But when she came to refer to Ward Mc Conkey, now in jail and convicted of the McClure murder, and Heenan Lightner. "Reddy" Baskin and "Nig Lee," who are wanted for the same crime, her face brightened up, for she claimed them as three of her friends. They had flirted to-gether and "Nig Lee" had developed into her sweetheart. At this point Detective Bowden opened the large front office in which are kept records of crimes and pho-tographs of thieves and murderers. When the tin-types of the three worth-ies just mentioned for whom she expressed so much admiration were arrived at, the young fema'e exclaimed "Oh, that's them!" and then she narrowed her glances and remarks to her chief attrac tion, "Nig" Lee's image, and she took this occasion to extol the good qualities of her "Nig." She said she had in company with "Nig" Lee paid several visits to Dead Man's Hollow, and only two weeks before the murder she was with and before the services they had taken a walk through the grave-yard. She had been to the graveyard numerous times with him, and and go to some Western country, where cut her hair off. "I liked that man," she bandits, and had helped in frequent mur-ders and robberies. He had shown her a picture of Frank James. As to the vic tim, McClure, she has very favorable recollections of him, and was, she declared "the nicest man she ever knew." He had been her Sunday school teacher. Ac cording to Susan there is no use in look ing for "Reddy" Baskins, as he has had his hair dyed black. She knew so, for she had read a letter from him only a short time ago and had seen a lock of the jetblack hair. She was willing to go to the reform school.

Regarding her flight from home Susan gave as the cause that her younger
