A JEALOUS WOMAN.

CRIMES RECALLED BY A SUICIDE.
Lizzie M. Kane, the Wife of a Convicted Murderer and Reputed Wife of a Local Politician, Kills Herself in Her Own Home—Details of the Case.

With a single shot from a glistening new pistol Mrs. Lizzie M. Kane, in her bed, at 4 a. m. yesterday, in Philadelphia, executed an oft repeated threat to end her life. The deed was the result of jealousy and the man of whom she was jealous was Harry Hunter, the well known local politician. When the pistol was fired Hunter, who for eight years has passed as the husband of the woman, was by her side. He was awakened from his sleep by the sharp report of the weapon to find Mrs. Kane in the agonies of death and the white bed covering imbrued with her blood, which trickled from a wound in the head.

The suicide was 32 years of age and lived in the house with her brother-in-law, William R. Lott, who also resided here three brothers, named Young. Mr. Hunter, though nominally residing at Twelfth and Fitchwater streets, in the Third ward, where he had a room and took his meals, passed the greater part of the time in the Christian street dwelling, No. 1044, in the neighborhood of which he was well known. Previous to eighteen months ago the couple boarded together in a house on Girard street.

The intimacy was formed eight years ago, when James Kane, the woman's husband, was sentenced to the penitentiary for the term of seven years and eleven months for the killing of Jimmy Dougherty, August 25, 1872. Dougherty was an associate of Hugh Mara and, with him, was convicted and sentenced for a murderous assault upon Levenue Detective James Brooks in 1869. Upon their release from prison Dougherty and Mara attacked Theodore J. McTurk, Esq., at Fitchwater and Twelfth streets, and beat him brutally, finally leaving him for dead upon a lot in the neighborhood. The purpose of the attempted murder was understood to be the silencing of McTurk in regard to the concealed oil fire at Ninth street and Washington avenue, in February, 1875. The killing of Dougherty grew out of his knowledge of or connection with crimes in which Kane was a participant.

Harry Hunter, as he is familiarly known, and Mrs. Kane lived together until about two years ago, when Kane being released from prison, Hunter took a trip to Europe to escape, it is said, the husband's vengeance. Kane soon got into trouble again and disappeared from the city and has been looked for by the police, who desire his presence, to answer the charge of highway robbery. He is now thought to be in Pittsburgh. Hunter returned from Europe after an absence of eighteen months and resumed his relations with Mrs. Kane, who has since been in Philadelphia with Mrs. Hunter. The couple have not lived harmoniously on account of the extreme jealousy of the woman and quarrels were not infrequent. Mrs. Kane was possessed of a very high temper and became very violent when aroused to anger. Mr. Hunter's absence from the house over night was sure to be followed by a war of words. Finally when he desired to sever the relations between them she followed him almost everywhere and badgered him to such an extent that he was constrained to resist her.

When he went to Harrisburg as a delegate to the recalled state convention which nominated Marriott Brocius for congress man-at-large, she followed him and led him such a life that he was compelled to get a substitute for each of his suits and months ago Mrs. Kane led her sister, Mrs. Lott, to believe that she had obtained a divorce from Kane, but that this was not a fact is shown by her recent application to James H. Heverin, the well known lawyer, to take steps leading to a legal separation. This was but a few days ago, Mr. Heverin informed her that in order to serve the papers it would be necessary to ascertain the whereabouts of Kane. She replied that she thought he was in Pittsburgh. As she was leaving the office she reportedly said: "Wait a few days and you will hear something that will surprise you. I intend to kill Hunter and myself."

Whether, when she shot herself yesterday morning, she was attempting to put the whole of her throat into execution it is impossible to say. Mrs. Kane, who was in the house about half past seven o'clock, Thursday evening, to carry a dress to a dressmaker at Eleventh and Ellsworth streets, and returned home at half past 11. Mr. Hunter, who had come home several hours before, lay in bed. The woman, who is said to have been in her usual spirits, and gave no intimation that she contemplated taking her life. After retiring to bed she arose several times during the night and nervously paced the room.

About 4 o'clock in the morning Mr. Hunter was awakened by the report and discovered that the woman had shot herself in the forehead over the left eye. He summoned Mr. and Mrs. Lott, who occupied a room on the same floor in the front of the house, and a member of the family was sent for. The woman was lying on the bed, bleeding profusely from the wound in her head and in an unconscious condition. Her right hand, which held the revolver, was lying across her breast. Dr. John S. Pearson, of 1306 Christian street, arrived in a few minutes, and removing the pistol, laid it upon the mantelpiece. It was found to contain loaded cartridges in four of the five chambers, the size being .32 calibre. Dr. Pearson at once perceived that the woman was beyond human help, but he advised that another physician be sent for. Accordingly Dr. Spooner, of 1439 Spruce street, and Dr. Simon, of 1439 Spruce street were summoned. Mrs. Kane lingered in an unconscious condition until after eight o'clock when she died. Until the arrival of the physician the body was removed from the bed and placed in an ice box by an undertaker. In the meantime Dr. Spooner had notified the police at the Fifth district station house, Fifteen and Locust streets, who telegraphed to the Fifth district, Philadelphia, and Fitchwater streets. Lieutenant Warnock detailed Special Officer William J. Elliott to make an investigation. The officer proceeded to the house, of which he took possession and notified Mr. Hunter not to leave.

After examining the room and questioning the family it was decided that there was no cause to detain Mr. Hunter, who was then told that he was at liberty. Mr. Lott had notified the coroner, and it was arranged to make a post mortem examination in the afternoon. Officer Elliott, in his search, found in the bed an ounce bottle half full of laudanum, which had escaped the notice of the physicians. Coroner Janney and his physician, Dr. Cadwalader, reached the house at five o'clock, and the post mortem examination was made. The bullet was found embedded in the right lobe of the brain and was partly flattened. The other organs were found in a healthy condition. There were no traces of laudanum having been taken. It was found that after leaving Eleventh and Ellsworth streets, on Thursday night, Mrs. Kane had gone to the house of Mrs. Rose Hadley, 329 South Ninth street. Mrs. Hadley said she remained there until shortly after eleven o'clock. She was in excellent spirits, being even more than usually lively and cheerful. No trace was found of the purchase or borrowing of a pistol.

None of the members of the family could give a cause for the suicide, except that Mrs. Kane had frequently complained of a pain in the head and at times had acted queerly.

Mr. Hunter said yesterday that he had married Mrs. Kane about eight or nine years ago and that before he had become acquainted with her she had had a tumor cut out of the left side of her head, leaving an aperture almost an inch in depth. "This, I think, is the cause of her nervous and excitable disposition," said he. "She has been complaining of headaches for the last few years. I have long doubted her sanity and think that she committed the act while laboring under temporary aberration of the mind. Not a sound escaped from her lips from the time she shot herself until her death. I had retired first the evening before and we do not know what time she went to bed. We had quarrelled about nothing."

Mr. Hunter has been known in local politics for a number of years and at one time was deputy receiver of delinquent taxes. He was several times a candidate for the nomination of coroner, and failing to receive indorsement by the convention in 1877 ran independently. The regular Republican candidate was Andrew Knorr and the Democratic choice Dr. W. Kent Gilbert, who was elected.

It does not appear that any degree of constancy ever distinguished Mrs. Kane or Hunter, but in spite of this fact and the large attitude which he allowed her to assume she became madly jealous when some months since, it is said, he began an intimacy with the twenty year old daughter of a well-to-do and respectable man living on Twelfth Street, above Chestnut. The intimacy, finally, is said, culminated in the girl's departure from her home, and Mrs. Kane was neglected by her fickle lord. About two weeks since, while partially intoxicated, she raised a disturbance at Eleventh and Fitchwater streets by taxing him with infidelity and threatening vengeance on both himself and his new companion. Afterwards she threatened to a neighbor that she would kill either Hunter or the girl if she should meet them together.

Human Prejudice.
"Prejudice is nothing stronger than human prejudice," and this is true. Especially are some minds prejudiced against "proprietary medicines." To cause some of these medicines are quacks, all are. There are counterfeiters of all good things, even of gold coin and greenbacks. But there are true money and there are true medicines. Among the latter is Hunt's Kidney, Urine and Blood. It is the result of a number of years of research, and it has cured thousands who have been healed and saved from the grave by it. For all diseases of the kidneys, the liver, the urinary organs, it stands with a peer. Physicians prescribe it, and the sick hold it dear. Take it cheaper to buy a bottle of it yourself, and take it according to directions, than to pay for your prejudice by receiving it at the hands of your physician at ten times the cost!
