JOHN L. ARNOLD.

THE CAMPAIGN.

THE CAMERON DYNASTY.

The "Proprietary" Government to be Perpetuated in Pennsylvania.

The battle in Pennsylvania is a battle against boss rule, and the spoils system as personified and illustrated by Cameronism. The Democratic State platform declares squarely against both.

"We do protest against what is called the boss system and the plundering of office-holders by assessments of money for political purposes. Public offices are the property of no party but are open to every citizen honest, capable and faithful to the constitution, qualifications which Jefferson declared were the requisites for office."

"Second—We protest against the spoils system; it is a prostitution of the offices of the people, so that they become the mere perquisites of the politician."

The people of Pennsylvania are familiar with the history of Cameronism, and the denunciation of it has not been confined to the Democracy.

Nearly 30 years ago, William D. Kelly then as now a Republican, and who is the oldest Congressman in the Pennsylvania delegation wrote: "No stone may mark the spot where my name remains may finally rest, but I mean that my children shall be able to vindicate my name by pointing to the fact that Simon Cameron and his confidential friend were ever hostile to me."

In 1867 when Simon Cameron was nominated for the United States Senate, the Republican members of the Pennsylvania Legislature, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, owned and published on the same direction under which it is now the chief Stalwart organ in the city said:

"It is disgraceful that a man whose power and influence are avowedly due to his wealth, should be made Senator when such men as Stevens, Curtin, Grow, Kelley and a score of others, distinguished for talent, integrity and faithful service, were in the field. But the mischief is done and cannot now be repaired. There is no hope for anything beyond 'white-washing' will be done by the committee appointed to investigate the rumors of bribery."

When the elder Cameron advanced in years he sought to perpetuate the rule of his family by transferring the political power of Pennsylvania to his son, who was without either experience in or capacity for public affairs. How this transfer was viewed by the people of the state may be inferred from the following editorial comments of that conservative journal, the Ledger, on the following day:

"Word was sent out from Harrisburg yesterday of a nature calculated to puzzle those old-fashioned folk who supposed that 'Proprietary Government' had come to an end in 1776. It is to the effect that the representation of the state in the Senate of the United States is to be transferred from Cameron, senior, to Cameron, junior—by virtue of some amicable family arrangement, it may be supposed. Whether the title to succession is to be transferred by deed or gift, or by last will and testament, or by any other of the well-known modes of conveyance and inheritance is not made known in the despatches. The members of the legislature are, of course, expected to vote, in order to comply with the forms. Theoretically, the representation of Pennsylvania in the Senate of the United States is supposed to involve the civil and political rights of all the people of the commonwealth. In a party point of view at this time it nearly concerns the honor and manhood of the whole Republican constituency of the state; practically, however, the above mentioned report to be true, it would look as if those very agreeable gentlemen, the Camerons, regard the matter as if the principal interest in it attaches to themselves, and the docile members of the legislature are deemed expected to take the same view. If there shall be occasion for any balloting on the subject we shall have a chance to find out whether the 'Proprietary Government' really ended a hundred years ago, or is continuing in full vigor in our own day."

The Ledger and the rest of the state soon discovered that the "Proprietary Government" continued in its full vigor. The younger Cameron was elected United States Senator simply because the elder Cameron decreed it.

Now after that when the burst of indignation which followed this event had subsided and men measured their words. Benjamin Harris Brewster, now the representative of Pennsylvania Republicanism in Arthur's Cabinet said:

"Last winter our people were shocked with the election of J. Donald Cameron, the irresponsible son of a Senator of our will not speak, because he and his acts have become a part of public history and must be measured with more deliberation than can be given in a casual conversation like this—son that has neither mind, at all, nor dignity of character, knowledge of public affairs, party services or personal worth to warrant his advancement, and who has no record but a bad one as an intriguer and manager of bad men. He is a price of office to betray his state and to nominate General Grant, and after being there he was so base born in his notions of decency and gentleness as to solicit and urge, by all the mean arts of political contrivance, that he should be retained as the companion of Cabinet officers and gentlemen who do not want him. Failing in that, by the coarse brute force of organized power he ousted his old father out of his place and thrust himself into a Senate where he will be an object of derision and disgust. The public are sick of these odious men, and the public will do away with them. We have destroyed human bondage in the South; we will next break down political bondage in the North and South."

The people in Pennsylvania are making an effort to free themselves from political bondage. Don Cameron proposes to perpetuate it by the election of his man for Governor. When Beaver was not his man he was beaten for the nomination. In the convention of 1878 Beaver had no show. In 1880 he went to the Chicago convention as a delegate. He was instructed for Blaine. His constituents were for Blaine. But he placed Cameron by his offer to betray his state and renominate General Grant. After he had thus proved himself a "Stalwart of Stalwarts" Cameron said "Boys we'll go home and make Jim Governor of Pennsylvania." The election of Beaver means the dissolution of the "Proprietary Government" in Pennsylvania—with Don Cameron as proprietor.

How Beaver Was Nominated. Chairman Cooper has lately sent out a circular intended to show how Stewart was nominated. The following from the American Republican paper of high character in Philadelphia tells exactly how Beaver was nominated, and nobody knows it better than Cooper:

Senator Cameron 'slated' General Beaver for the governorship. Colonel Quay agreed to the arrangement. Word was sent throughout the State that the 'slate' had been made, and the answering words of approval came like a stalwart chorus from every creature and agent of the 'machine.' The terms of praise for Gen. Beaver were even 'formulated'; every 'machinal' man took in the same words what a Christian gentleman he was. It was at this time that General Beaver went to Washington. His candidacy, thus arranged with Mr. Cameron, involved the withdrawal of other men, notably Mr. Cooper. The latter went to Washington, likewise, to learn whether he might not be a candidate, and he was, as a candidly told the newspaper men when he returned, ordered to 'stand aside for the present,' the nomination having been this year conferred upon General Beaver. Cooper, therefore, came home with a blank, Beaver with a prize. Cooper, unfortunately for his hopes, has a 'kicker' county. It sent a Blaine delegate to Chicago, who stubbornly resisted the conspiracy by which General Grant was to be nominated for a third term, in spite of the wishes of the Republican State. But Beaver went to Chicago, himself, from his county, and misrepresenting the people of his district and of the State, joined heartily in the conspiracy of which Conkling and Cameron were the chief organizers. He earned then his brazen medal, and he earned the nomination for governor that equal benefited him in 1878. When, therefore, he repaired to Washington, almost a year before the election of 1882, and hastened to the presence of Mr. Cameron, he went simply to receive a new assurance that the old one would be kept."

BEAVER'S CIVIL RECORD.

It Reflects Great Discredit Upon Him.

"Philadelphia American," Republican.

Beaver's record is simply nothing; he has never held any public office whatever, great or small. His ability as an administrator, and his capacity to discern between private interest and public duty are both reflected discreditably in his direction of the wasteful and worthless State College of Pennsylvania, located near his home. This institution, having received large grants of money directly from the State, has been endowed, besides, with the half million dollars derived from the sale of the United States lands, and with this liberal endowment, it has been able to flourish under the circumstances, it may be called laudably, but has been a source of failure and a monument of reproach to every intelligent man who knew its record. But General Beaver, putting his local interests against those of the people of the commonwealth, has used his personal and political influence to obtain for the absurd 'college' the continued expenditure of the State's money. One of his eulogists says that since 1874, when he was elected president of the board of trustees, 'he has devoted much of his time to the interests of the institution.' This is, doubtless, a fact; but if evidence of General Beaver's capacity as a civil administrator is to be sought in his direction of this 'college,'—the only thing that appears to try him by—the showing in his behalf is bad, indeed.

How They Treat the Negro.

A Republican member of the Michigan legislature who has lately been traveling in the South had, on his return home, an interview with a reporter and to the inquiry what he thought of the negro, the following answer was given by the republican: 'Damn him, sir, damn him! We wouldn't stand the half from him that the South does. He is lazy, shiftless, thievish, and a general nuisance. I've talked with a score of 'em and they are as ignorant as our horses. They vote my ticket, but they can't tell me why they have no reason, no argument, no principle, and so little sense that I wonder how they get through the week.'

This is about the opinion that the Republicans really entertain of the negro, and when they cannot control his vote they break out into low abuse of him. In this state Wm. Nesbit, of Altoona, a colored citizen of good repute, who the Republicans compliment with ornamental positions, is announced as a candidate for the Republican nomination to the Legislature. It will be interesting to watch and see what kind of treatment is accorded his candidacy by the white Republican political associates.

A Significant Toast.

An Irishman drinking the health of his bishop, gave this toast: 'May your reverence live to eat the old meat that crows over your grave; and may your reverence die to eat the old meat that crows over your grave.' It is a very good toast, and it is true, it is that the Bishop, whose mission is to preach the gospel, and to deliver from the power of iniquity and moral disease, and what more terrible and fatal than kidney and liver diseases. What intense suffering, too, is caused by kidney trouble. Let him who is afflicted with it, try HUNT'S KIDNEY PILLS, and it works marvelously. Why shouldn't the sufferer live to eat the old meat, when HUNT'S KIDNEY PILLS give such renewed vigor and health?—121-121-121

Visible Improvement.

Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: 'I was afflicted with kidney trouble, and my digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for a day. After using two bottles of your Barlock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 45 years of age, do a fair and reasonable day's work.' Price $1.00. Sold by all druggists. For sale at Cochrane's drug store, 137 North Queen street, Lancaster.

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

NOTED MEN!

DR. JOHN F. HANCOCK, late President of the National Pharmaceutical Association of the United States, says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters has a heavy sale, is conceded to be a fine tonic; the character of the manufacturers is a voucher for its purity and medicinal excellence."

DR. JOSEPH ROBERTS, President Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says:

"I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poisons."

DR. J. FARIS MOORE, Ph.D. Professor of Pharmacy, Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters is a safe and reliable medicine, positively free from alcoholic poisons, and can be recommended as a tonic for use among those who oppose alcohol."

DR. EDWARD EARICKSON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says:

"I endorse it as an excellent medicine, a good digestive agent, and a non-intoxicant in the fullest sense."

DR. RICHARD SAMPINGTON, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says:

"All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and the well-known character of the house which makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed, for they are men who could not be induced to offer anything else but a reliable medicine for public use."

A Druggist cured.

Bonnabro, Md., Oct. 12, 1880.

Gentlemen: Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of a bad attack of Indigestion and flatulency in the stomach. Having tested it, I take pleasure in recommending it to my customers, and I am glad to say that it gives entire satisfaction to all.

Geo. W. HOFFMAN, Druggist.

Ask your Druggist for BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and take no other. One trial will convince you that it is just what you need.
