SATURDAY MISCELLANY.

WANAMAKER'S BEAUTIFUL HOME.

His New Residence at Chelton Hills—A Lightning Struck Party Stays at Cape May Point.

Mr. John Wanamaker has just erected at Chelton Hills, a very short distance from the North Pennsylvania railroad station, a residence of unusual beauty and comfort. The location is a beautiful one, and the building is a masterpiece of architecture, and not merely looks imposing from the crest of the hill, but is in every respect a masterpiece of comfort which distinguishes the cheerless from the cozy home.

The first thing which strikes the visitor is the extraordinary width of the hall, which from its unusual size seems a mansion in itself. The stairs are on the left-hand side and constructed with platforms forming a hollow square or well, which is lighted by a dome. The different rooms on each story open on these galleries, one of which is to be used as an art gallery? To the left of the main entrance, you find the drawing-room, which is the first room that parlor were out of style, a modernized apartment lighted by one large bay window. The woodwork is all of satin wood exquisitely polished to show a grain as fine and soft as the fabric from which it takes its name. The floor in this as in every room in the house is of hard wood and what is termed parquetry, a species of joinery or cabinet work consisting of inlaid work in geometric or other patterns designed to be covered by handsome rugs. Over the open fireplace is a cabinet of the same wood exquisitely carved in a unique style. All the mirrors are bevelled glass, and tiles and wrought brasses are used in harmony and an effective manner. The ceiling is frescoed and the walls covered with incrusts of a delicate blue with dado or a deeper tint, the whole forming a perfect contrast to the delicate color of the woodwork. This Lincaster-Walton is a fabric closely resembling oil-cloth, and is composed of linen, whitelead, linseed oil, and gutta percha. After it is on the wall it can be painted and tinted to harmonize with any style of frescoing and decorations.

Adjoining and communicating with the drawing room is the dining room, which in turn connects with the conservatory on the left, and upon the right communicates with the kitchen, which is a most convenient and comfortable kitchen, and is furnished in California red wood. The kitchen is supplied with all modern conveniences for lightening labor, and is furnished in California red wood. There are in the house six bath rooms. The bath room proper, however, deserves more than a mere notice. It is situated on the second floor, and accessible from any room on that story. The sides are tiled, and under the floor, which is also tiled, is a coil of steam pipes which renders it impossible for the temperature to fall. The tub is porcelain lined and set in a Tennessee marble, and instead of standing in the usual manner is set lower than the floor; consequently you reverse the usual mode of entrance to it. The fixtures in the bed rooms are oxidized silver, with crystal pendants.

The bonfire is finished in satin wood. Nearly all the room is a room of fire-places with the hearths, and many bric-a-brac shelves or mantels. The light always enters through stained or plate glass. The floors are all inlaid, and many of the walls are ornamented with tiles either of a historical or historical character. In the nursery the entire dado is composed of tiles which illustrate Esop's Fables and familiar tales of fairy lore and kindred subjects dear to children's hearts. In Mrs. Wanamaker's bed room the window is decorated with a beautiful and unique "Abide with me," and "Awake my soul and with the sun" and a careful study of the dome reveals faces typical of the seasons and different months of the year.

A "LIGHTNING STRUCK PARTY." Wonderful Escape of a House Full of People at Cape May Point.

Reading Times.

A party of Reading people, pleasure-seekers at Cape May point, had a frightful experience on Saturday last. The party consisted of Mr. S., Mrs. S., with the children, was on the second story, napping, or at least trying to do so; and the girl was fixing up the dining room. It had rained in torrents for a long time, and lightened and thundered also; but all of a sudden there came a fearful flash and crash, and we were struck perfectly dumb with fear. We all went into Annie and Belle's room and stood completely awed; it was filled with smoke and the smell of brimstone. Annie was right by the window, and she was holding a candle. The window was completely shattered, the shutter taken off and the glass smashed. The frame struck Annie as it fell, but she miraculously escaped injury. Belle was further back on the bed, and was too unshocked to move. Annie was in a state of great excitement, and she was only right; it seemed to pass all around the cottage. The dining room wall was knocked down, a lamp upset on the floor, and dishes strewn in all directions; the window was completely demolished, and the girl was standing within one foot of where the flash passed through. It is certainly miraculous how she escaped alive, but she was not even started, although she was thrown down by the shock. The kitchen took fire, the lightning having struck the stove, but by the thoughtfulness and bravery of Wirt the fire was extinguished, and we were saved from injury in that way. Two rooms in the back building, second floor, and all the walls, kitchen and the roof partly taken off. Indeed, there was not one room in the entire house that was not touched, and yet no one was hurt. We all feel most thankful to a kind Providence, I assure you. Every one has been very kind, and many came to examine the ruins and offer their services. Wirt went for a carpenter, who immediately fixed things in such a way as to make it safe for us to stay. In a few days everything will be made right. We all felt like going home at once, but soon got over that feeling. We are quite joyful again, and are considered a very interesting crowd. On all sides we hear ourselves called "the lightning struck party."

MINERS DAMNED TO DEATH.

A Frightful Railroad Accident Near Oil City—The Dead and Wounded.

About noon, Friday, a locomotive drawing seventeen flat cars, heavily loaded with coal, started down the track from the Cranberry mines. Fifteen or eighteen of the miners boarded the rear cars to ride to town, intending to return in a short time. The grade of the road is very heavy, and when about half way down the train became unmanageable. It ran at a frightful rate of speed, and when about two miles from the mouth of the run the rear cars on which the miners were riding were hurled from the track and completely demolished. Albert, a boy aged 15, was thrown against a tree and his brains dashed out. Robert McGinty was so badly hurt that he lived only half an hour. George Merring was found under one of the trucks with the top of his head cut off and his brains spattered about. David Morgan, conductor of the train, had both legs crushed and his head cut badly. He lived about three hours after the accident. Charley McGinty, a nephew of Robert McGinty, had his skull crushed and died only a few minutes after the accident. Field River was injured about the head and had one leg broken. He will probably die. Archie Lafferty was injured internally and had one shoulder dislocated. Irving Carter was cut in the head and had his ankle sprained. Oliver Latschew was cut about the head and was wise injured. Frank Haller, one arm broken and badly bruised; Charley Gannon, left leg broken in two places; left arm also broken; David Beatty, slightly injured about head and shoulders; John Costello, badly injured about the head, causing his death; Wesley Wright, the engineer, was found under a car of coal, badly injured; Spurgeon McLean, fireman, badly, but not fatally injured; Frank Eakon, badly cut and bruised. Two or three others were slightly injured.

At the point where the first cars left the track, the track is strewn for about three miles with debris. The engine and three cars remained on the track until near the mouth of the run, where they ran into some cars standing there. One locomotive overturned, and the wreck was piled about twenty feet high. The engineer and fireman remained at their posts until the locomotive was nearly overturned, when they jumped. A three-inch pipe line near the track was broken and quite a quantity of steam escaped. The wreck was one of the most remarkable ever seen. The track was torn up about half the distance. Trees were uprooted, rails broken and cars thrown in every direction. The dead were removed to Paul's undertaking establishment and the wounded to the City Hotel, which is converted into a hospital. More deaths are expected.

Thomas Jefferson and Ben Randall, Harrisburg Patriot.

In the state department at Washington, along with the original manuscript of the Declaration of Independence is a small, plain, unpolished mahogany desk upon which Mr. Jefferson drew up that immortal instrument. It bears the following inscription in the handwriting of Mr. Jefferson, in the same clear, bold and exact characters in which he wrote a half a century before, when at the age of thirty-three he was selected by Congress to prepare the most important paper ever written by man:

"Thomas Jefferson gives this writing desk to Joseph Colledge, Jr., as a memorial of his services to the country. It is a drawing of his own by Ben. Randall, cabinet-maker, of Philadelphia, with whom he first lodged on his arrival in that city, in May, 1776, and is the identical one on which he wrote the Declaration of Independence."

"Politics as well as religion has its superstitions. These, gaining strength with time, may one day give imaginary value to this relic for its association with the birth of the great charter of our independence."—MONTICELLO, November 18, 1825.

The desk upon which Ben. Randall, with whom Jefferson lodged. Simple, plain, genuine man of the people, Jefferson took up his abode with honest Ben. Randall, the cabinet-maker, and the two together got up this unpolished piece of furniture, upon which in a room in Ben. Randall's decent house was written the Declaration of American Independence. This is decidedly the most interesting feature of the relic. Mr. Jefferson's policy then and ever afterwards, but especially in his tremendous conflict with the aristocratic federalists and the moneyed power, was framed in the interests of the Ben. Randalls, and the Ben. Randalls of that day knew their friend and followed him in all his efforts to maintain the rule of the people and the "republican principles of the constitution." It was to protect the rights and interests of the plain American people—the Ben. Randalls who produce the wealth of the country—and to preserve to them their due share of power in the government that Mr. Jefferson founded the Democratic party. The proper place for workingmen is in that party. So long as that exists any separate organization of manual laborers for a political purpose is not only useless, but it must necessarily be more or less mischievous.

A Significant Toast.

An Irishman drinking the health of his bishop, gave this toast: "May your reverence live until the end of the world, and then die in the arms of a good woman." If anything could make that toast true, it is Hunt & Kennedy, whose mission it is to give the world a better man, and a more virtuous and moral citizen. And what more terrible and fatal than kidney and liver troubles? What more deadly than is connected with kidney troubles? Yet here Hunt & Kennedy is King, and a more virtuous man in those who are afflicted with these ailments, why shouldn't the sufferer live to eat the bread of life? One set of workers especially suited for that purpose. 152-162A W

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the hair from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It cures in any manner effect the health, which Sulphur, sugar of Lead and Mirra of Silver preparations have done. It will change light hair to dark in a few days, and give a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. "SMITH, ELIASE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and C. N. CRITCHELTON New York. June 15, 1882. 152-162A W

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

NOTED MEN!

DR. JOHN F. HANCOCK, late President of the National Pharmaceutical Association of the United States, says:

"Brown's Iron Bitters has a heavy sale, is conceded to be a fine tonic; the character of the manufacturing is of the highest quality for its purity and medicinal excellence."

DR. JOSEPH ROBERTS, President Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says:

"I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poisons."

DR. J. FARIS MOORE, Ph. D. Professor of Pharmacy, Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says:

"I endorse it as an excellent medicine, a good digestive agent, and a non-intoxicant in the fullest sense."

DR. EDWARD EARLESON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says:

"I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poisons, and can be recommended as a tonic for use among those who oppose alcohol."

DR. RICHARD SAMPINGTON, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says:

"All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and its well-known character of the lowest quality makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed, for they are men who could not be induced to offer anything else but a reliable medicine for public use."

A Druggist cured.

Boonsboro, Md., Oct. 12, 1880.

Gentlemen: Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of a bad attack of indigestion and fulness in the stomach. Having tested it, I take pleasure in recommending it to my customers, and would glad to say that it gives entire satisfaction to all.

GEO. W. HOFFMAN, Druggist.
