SWEETHEART.

There is a little bird that sings—
"Sweetheart!"
I know not what his name may be;
I only know his notes please me
As loud he sings, and thus sings he—
"Sweetheart!"

I've heard him sing on soft spring days—
"Sweetheart!"
And when the sky was dark above,
And wintry winds had stripped the grove,
He still poured forth those words of love—
"Sweetheart!"

And like that bird my heart, too, sings—
"Sweetheart!"
When heaven is dark, or bright, or blue,
When trees are bare or leaves are new,
It thus sings on, and sings to you—
"Sweetheart!"

FARMER AND GARDENER.

Timely Hints to Husbandmen.

Germantown Telegraph.

One of the best spring vegetables is spinach. It is very hardy and before the snow is gone it gives us an agreeable taste of the coming vegetables. Like the turnip it requires rich ground to do very well. It is best to sow it broadcast, raking it in when sown, and if possible in a garden, rolling it. It will soon come up and reach s one considerable size before frost. When frost comes the spinach bed should be covered with straw, or some other litter, keeping it down with poles. The plant is hardy enough without this protection; but as the object is early vegetables, the earliness is assisted by this covering. There is at least two weeks of difference in the value of a crop covered and one left to take its chances. The covering need not be deep. It may be laid over so that the earth can be seen here and there through it. If the heaviest of the sun is shut out, that is all that is wanted; for it is the sun in winter pouring its rays on the frost-covered plants that seems to do the harm, so it is as much the shade as the straw that brings the benefit. By sowing the latter part of this month or the beginning of September it will produce an autumn crop; but for spring use it should be sown the latter part of September or the first week in October.

Vegetable Seeds to Sow Soon.

How many people who possess plenty of room in their gardens, or ought to have plenty, deprive themselves of some of our choicest vegetables a large portion of the time by merely neglecting to take advantage of the season to prepare a few small beds and sow the seeds? If you go into their gardens and on looking around and seeing, at the latter end of September, no lettuce or radishes growing, and ask where they are the reply is, "We never raise them at this time of the year; we didn't know they would do," &c. The fact is, lettuce can now be sown with certainty in drills, to head late in autumn; and it transplanted into cold frames, we can have heads at Christmas and generally through the winter. The China and Spanish radish should be sown now for winter use, and bury in small pits as we do beets.

For early spring use, Lettuce seed should be sown the first or second week in October, and when the plants are well started, transplant in a sheltered place, forming ridges six to eight inches high, and setting them about a foot apart half way up the ridge. When cold weather approaches cover the rows lightly with straw, and place a few bean-poles upon the straw to keep it in its place. If well attended to there will be plenty of good solid heads at the beginning of April, and some can be cut in March before heading. Coming at these periods, this vegetable is very acceptable and wholesome.

Food Speculations.

This being the season of harvest in America, we have advices from the city of Chicago of the usual huge cornering operations of the wheat market in that great emporium. As in all former cases of the same kind this speculation seems to have been organized by a single daring operator who has amassed a great fortune by similar operations in former years. On this occasion, however, he is said to have lost his point, for practically the corner is broken. Nevertheless, it seems to be pretty clear that these great speculations in American breadstuffs, instead of being unmixed evils, have really been productive of actual strength to the American trade in grain, and have enriched the wheat-farmers of the Northwest to an extent that would otherwise have been impossible, while they have undoubtedly saved the country from suffering the evils of a scarcity of food in years when the crops in Europe had failed, or those of our own country were below the average. Last year, for example, all our national food crops were very much shorter than was believed at the time by any but great speculators in New York, Chicago and St. Louis. Statements were made publicly enough to that effect, but they were universally believed to be intended for speculative purposes. Nevertheless, the great operators held tenaciously to their stocks of wheat at prices far above the range of the market in New York and London, and the result was that the export trade in breadstuffs was effectually arrested, and has never since been resumed, as would have been the case if the American crops had not been far below their average. Here then is a case in which the Chicago wheat speculators did really serve the country in a very useful way, for had it not been for the utter stagnation because of the extraordinarily high prices, breadstuffs instead of being hoarded would have been recklessly shipped off to Europe, leaving all the country virtually unprovided with an adequate supply for the ensuing year.

I am very glad to say I have tried Hop Bitters, and never took anything that did me as much good. I only took two bottles and I would not take $100 for the good they did me. I recommend them to my patients, and get the best results from their use.
