THE IRISH EXPEDITION.

SUCUESS A M 177 EE OF GREAT DOUBT Convincing Proof Tifut the Enterprise Will Encounter Appalling Difficulties and Probable Disaster.

The allies of Arabi Pacha are increasing in number. M. de Lesseps was the first great power to declare openly in favor of Egypt and undertake to trip up the English soldiers by throwing his dead body under their feet The Irishmen have now followed M. de Lessep's example and are about to furnish Arabi with men and money wherewith to dhrive the British divvies into the say, and so hasten the rapid dissolution of the British empire.

The movement of the Irish in favor of Arabi is as yet confined to the Irishmen of America. They have, however, declared their intention with all the boldness and frankness characteristic of a secret Irish conspiracy. An Irish club, or circle, or Land League, or something of the kind in Philadelphia has resolved to present to Philadelphia has resolved to present to Arabi the proceeds of an excursion to Cape May, and the Irishmen of New York, not to be outdone in patriotism by their brethren of Philadelphia, are to send an Irish expedition to Egypt without delay. It is thought that the money to be give to Arabi by the Philadelphia club will amount to fully $7.50, and it is positively known that the expedition to be tively known that the expedition to be sent from New York will consist of three distinct Irishme

It is probable that the idea of sending an Irish army to Egypt was suggested by the difficulty of finding any easy method of sending the expected $7.50 to Arabi. It cannot be sent in a letter, for the reason that American bank bills are worthless in Egypt, and the Cairene postoffice will not cash an American postal order. Similarly it is impracticable to send the money in the shape of a draft, for there are no foreigu bankers left in Egypt, and the native bankers will not pay out good gold for a mere slip of paper. Obviously, the only way in which to get the $7.50 to Arabi is to send it to him by a special messenger. Now, it occurred to the New York Irishmen that the best kind of messenger that could be sent would be an Irish army which could convoy the treasure safely, and could bring to Arabi the help of a bold and invincible foreign legion. Ac cordingly, the Irish army about to be dispatched from this city as soon as transpor-tation can be provided will doubtless take charge of the $7.50, and it is to be hoped that this drain of gold will not seriously affect the financial prosperity of our coun-

It will be comparatively a simple affair to transport the three Irishmen to Egypt since they can easily go in the steerage of one steamer to Southampton and of an other to Alexandria. When, however, they have arrived in the harbor of Alexan dria their difficulties will begin. It is possible that if each Irishman lauds in small detachments the entire Irish army may disembark without attracting attention, but surely it cannot pass through the British lines unchallenged. The British army will fall upon the three Irishmen, overpower them by numbers and thrust them into the first available dungeon, where, in all probability, Minister Lowell will let them lie-bad cess to him-while he banquets at the Tower of revels of Gladstone, Bright and other besotted enemies of Erin. Meanwhile, the $7.50 will be confiscated by the ruthless Saxons, and thus a new and terrible chapter will be added to the history of the wrongs of Ireland.

Obviously, the Irish expeditionary force cannot afford to run any such risk. It must land on some part of the coast of Egypt where there will be no British soldiers to molest it, and must then carefully make its way to Arabi's headquarters. The three Irishmen may manage to land without detection, but surely the march of so large and hungry a force through the delta cannot escape observation. The natives will flee in terror before their waving shillalehs and the British scouts will soon hear of their presence in Egypt and will suspect their purpose, no matter if they, for prudential reasons, circulate the plausible report that they have come to Egypt in order to vote the Democratic ticket and to earn an honest living as Cairene aldermen.

Let as concede that the Irish army suc ceeds in reaching Arabi's camp. What sort of a reception will it meet? Of course, Arabi would assume that so large a force moving towards his intrenchments intends to attack him, and he will instantly open upon it with his guns. It will be in vain for the Irishmen to display a flag of truce, for Arabi has used that sort of a flag himself, and knows how worthless it is. The only thing for the Irishmen to do will be to surrender and permit themselves to be marched as prisoners into Arabi's lines, with the intention of explaining themselves to the Egpptian commander as soon as they can obtain an interview with him. Long before the Irish army can be brought into the presence of Arabi its $7.50 will have to be looted by the soldiers. When the soldiers inform Arabi that the prisoners are Englishmen how will they manage to establish their real character? They cannot speak Arabic and Arabi knows no other language. The more earnestly they try to tell him that they are Irish patriots anxious to help him thrash the sanguinary Saxons, and regarding Arabi as a pathriot, a gintle-man, and a scholar, begorra, the more the Egyptian leader will imagine that they are mad Englishmen who need to be put to immediate death. They will be mas-sacred within an hour after they reach Arabi's camp' and the $7.50 brought with them will be spent by Arabi's soldiers for tobacco, not a cent of it finding its way into the Egyptain treasury.

If the Irish army could hire a dragoman to act as an interpreter it might succeed in convincing Arabi of its true intentions, but a dragoman must be a very expensive luxury in Egypt just at present, and the entire exchaquer of the army would not suffice to pay his wages for a single day, The chance against the success of the Irish expedition are simply enormous, and if it really attempts to go to Egypt, either it will find itself in a British dungeon or it will be massacred by Arabi's impetuous troops.

BEDICAL. [From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. A LADY SAID,

Those Horrid Pimples! No. I Cannot Go

Probably two-thirds of the ladies in society and homes of our land are afflicted with skin diseases of various kinds, to do away with which, it it could be done without injury, would be the happiest event of their lives. Then she would have instead of a disfigured and marred countenance, one that would be handsome, or at least good looking, for any one with a clear, pure skin, no matter what the cut of her teatures are, has a certain amount good looks which attract everybody. As it is now, she imagines every one sees and talks about "those freckles," "those horrid pimples," and other blemishes with which she is afflicted, and this is true of

To improve this appearance great risks are taken; arsenic, mercury, or highsound titled named articles containing these death-dealing drugs, are taken in hopes of getting rid of all these troubles.
