

MYERS & RATHFON.

Well-Made Garments.

In the manufacture of READY-MADE CLOTHING we observe three points:

1. The Selection of Stylish and Serviceable Material with the Best Wearing Qualities.
2. The Selection of Good, Strong and Serviceable Trimmings, Pockets, Linings, etc.
3. First-class Workmanship, Good, Strong Thread and Careful Sewing.

In our CLOTHING you will find no machine-made button holes, but good, strong, regular hand-made buttonholes. Our Cutters are the most skilled. Our Patterns are the best.

MYERS & RATHFON,

NO. 12 EAST KING STREET.

DRY GOODS.

HAGER & BROTHER'S CARD.

A CARD.

LANCASTER, July 28, 1882.

In anticipation of changes to be made in our Clothing Department (arrangements for which are now going on) we desire to reduce our stock to the minimum, and offer Spring and Summer wears at the Lowest Figures. Light Weight goods of all kinds for both men and boys to be closed out; Linen and Mohair Dusters; English Seersucker Suits; White Marseilles and Duck Vests; Crochle Check and Alpaca Coats; Linen and Cottonade Pantalons; Cassimeres Suits, made skeleton; Blue Flannel Suits and full lines of Summer-Weight Cloths, Cassimeres, Serges, &c., &c.

Yours, respectfully,

HAGER & BROTHER,

No. 25 West King Street.

NEXT DOOR TO THE ## COURT HOUSE.

FAHNESTOCK'S.

We shall continue, during the remainder of AUGUST to close out the balance of SUMMER STOCK of every description, at LOW PRICES, preparatory to receiving a Large Stock of

NEW FALL GOODS.

Our ONE DOLLAR QUILT Beats Anything Ever Sold at the Price.

Low DARK STYLE CALICOS and SATINES Now Opened. Choice Styles at Low Prices.

R. E. FAHNESTOCK'S,

NEXT DOOR TO COURT HOUSE. LANCASTER, PA.

LAWN MOWERS, &c.

JEWELRY

Palace Refrigerators, Water Coolers and Filters.

PHILADELPHIA LAWN MOWERS,

PENNSYLVANIA LAWN MOWERS.

HYDRANT HOSE, MOSQUITO WIRE,

GARDEN TOOLS, ADJUSTABLE SCREENS,

WATERING CANS, STEP LADDERS.

GEO. M. STEINMAN & CO.,

26 and 28 West King Street.

m23-3md-M, W&S

HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS.

FLINN & WILLSON.

Housefurnishing!

FLINN & WILLSON.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ## STOVE REPAIRS.

PERSONS WISHING TO HAVE THEIR

FURNACES, STOVES, HEATERS and RANGES in Good Order for the Winter, Should Have it Done Now, to Avoid the Rush and Delay in the Busy Season.

Plumbing, Gas Fitting, Tin Roofing and Spouting Specialties.

FLINN & WILLSON,

LANCASTER, PA.

(SIGN OF THE TWO BIG DOGS.)

PLUMBERS SUPPLIES.

WHOLESALE DEPOT FOR

Water Closets and Bath Tubs,

Iron and Wooden Hydrants,

Plumbers' Earthenware,

Gas and Steam Fitters' Supplies,

Gas Fixtures at Reduced Prices,

Plumbers' Supplies, Tiners' Supplies.

SLATE ROOFING.

SLATE ROOFING.

No. 11, 13 & 15 EAST ORANGE STREET, LANCASTER, PA

JOHN L. ARNOLD.

MEDICAL.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC.

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC

Invigorates without intoxicating, cures disorders of the bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys and lungs, and is the greatest strength restorer and blood purifier, and the BEST AND SUREST COUGH MEDICINE EVER USED. If you are suffering from Female Complaints, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, or any disease, use the TONIC today. 100 DOLLARS paid for a failure to help or cure, or for anything injurious found in it. Send for circular.

PARKER'S HAIR BALM Dressing, 50c, and 50c sizes. HISCOX & CO., New York.

IN CASES OF CANCER THERE ARE

the wildest variations in the degree of pain; neither the size nor the duration of period of the tumor seem to influence the amount of pain with certainty. CANCER, TUMORS, SKIN DISEASES—also, Chronic and Private Diseases—successfully treated by

DR. H. D. and M. A. LONGAKER, Office—12 East Walnut St., Lancaster, Pa. Consultation Free. H-24

HEADQUARTERS FOR THE BEST CIGARETTES in the city at HARTMAN'S Yellow Front Cigar Store.

CLOTHING.

THE QUESTION OF LABOR.

VIEWS OF HON. ECKLEY B. COXE.

A Philadelphia and Statesmanlike representation of the Labor Question. The Capital should be harmonized—Their Mutual Interests. Philadelphia Times.

"Having escaped being a candidate for office," said Senator Eckley B. Coxe, when asked by a Times reporter for his views on the labor agitation, "there is no reason why I should not be about the same as any other matter. But you can understand that it will not be possible in an interview to do more than touch upon some of the most interesting points of so vast a subject. I have always taken an interest in this question. During my childhood I spent my summers in the anthracite coal region. I knew and played with the boys of the neighborhood, and was very fond of going into the mines and conversing with the miners and other workmen, who talked freely with me and before me, and thus I obtained early in life a general idea of their way of looking at the matter. I spent four or five years at the mining schools of Europe, and during the vacations I devoted many months to visiting and working in the mines of France, Belgium, England, Prussia and Austria, and was thus brought in contact with workmen of various nationalities, with whom I discussed the subject a great deal. About eighteen years ago I engaged in the business of mining anthracite and since then our firm have had a large number of men in their employment."

"How many men do you employ?"

"We employ about two thousand men."

"The greater part, of course, are miners, miners' laborers, drivers, timber men, road men and other inside men, but we also employ a large number of breaker hands, loaders, stationary and locomotive engineers, firemen, choppers, teamsters, sawyers, carpenters, blacksmiths, boiler-makers, machinists, moulders, plumbers, painters, masons, bricklayers, plasterers, and many other outside laborers. In fact, almost all kinds of mechanics are required about anthracite coal mines."

"Have you seen the article by Mayor Powderly in the North American Review upon 'The Organization of Labor'?"

"Yes, I have not only read it, but I have studied it with great care and attention."

"What impression did it leave upon you?"

"A very favorable one. Had I not known that Mr. Powderly was a working man himself, and one of the most prominent representatives of the labor interests I should have thought, were it not for a few passages, that the article was written by a student of the question who was an outsider, and therefore impartial, so far, at least, as the subject of the article was concerned. I was astonished to find that he, a workingman and an employer, instead of starting from distant points and moving in opposite directions seemed to be following the same road in our thoughts towards the same end. It is true that for a little while one may seem to diverge from what may appear to be the same goal, which in the last lines of his article he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What effect will the article have upon the future of the labor question in Pennsylvania?"

"A good one, I think. It shows a spirit of justice and a desire for a fair settlement which cannot fail. I feel sure, if followed up, to produce a similar movement on the part of the employers in the right direction."

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"

"What are the points made in the article which strike you most favorably?"

"First, his straightforward admission that it is difficult for the two parties to look at the subject in the same way, viewing it as they do from their respective standpoints, and his statement that 'Did each of these interests give a thought to the consideration or welfare of the other, two-thirds of the grievances we hear of would never exist. These words should be stamped in the general mind, and should do to with the solution of the labor problem, for they contain the key to the situation. Then, again, his comments upon the apprentice system, which, however, seem to me to be only partially correct. What he says is, 'Labor all its rights, equal and just, for either, but equal and exact justice to all.'"