NEW LANGUAGE FOR LUVE-MAKING.

Widow Scaulau's Charms, and the I eculiar Method Taken by Her Admirer to Attest His Devotion.

Putadelphia Press Disappointed love is capable of making men do great deeds. It would be a waste of time to cite historical proof of this with such a prodigious testimony as Widow Scaulan, of Brooklyn, contributes. The widow, it may be inferred, is all that a widow should be-fair, though neither fat nor forty. Withdrawn from the gayeties of the world, in the selusion of her mother's home, Widow Scanlan has nevertheless inspired an irresistible flame in the heart or hearts of one or many manly adorers. The uncertainty as to the number of adorers arises from the cumulative evidences of passionate appreciation showered on the Widow Scanlan. For, while it is no unusual spectacle to see a farious lover squandering his material possessions upon the fair, it is nowhere in evidence that an individual lover has atlempted to carry his conquest by lavishing an infinite number of one and the same form of substantial gifts upon the lodestone of his sentimental pole. Indeed, the forms of the lover's gifts while taking a wide range are generally esteemed from the delicacy of their sug gestion and the æsthetic purpose of their application. The widow's adorers or dorer reverses all this. He or they began operations last week by depositing on the doorstep of the perplexed widow 39 quarts of ice cream. Now, if these quarts had all come from the same establishment, the attention would have been lacking in that exquisite delicacy with which genuine love is instinct! No-the widow's lover meant to let his sweetheart sample, so to speak, the wares of all the dealers, and then refresh her tissues with the most toothsome of tantalizing concections. Then by an inspiration, of which a lover alone is capable, fourteen tons of coal followed close on the heels of the ice cream porters. At first view this may seem prosaic and vulgarly utilitarian. But on examination, it affords another proof of the charming delicacy of the sensibility of the donor. For the cream may be taken as a touching reference to the cold pangs of despair, mingled with the sweet pain of taffled hope and exhibarating uncertainty in which the lover is plunged. Then the coal comes as the significant suggestion of the burning, fiery torments disappointment would inflict.

The cream and coal, however, preceded multifarious assortment of edibles, necessaries and luxuries, whose subtle expression only true love can comprehend. The significance of three kegs of beer from remote and separate breweries has a fine flavor of the stately courtships of old, trothed with all manner of goods and chattels, gained by the prowess of his sword or the valor of his hand. Seven esurance policies were sent, no doubt as a delicate reminder that life being short the wise in love would hasten the union of two fond hearts. To enumerate the gifts tain, as the district is Democratic by over that poured in upon the astonished widow during the week would require a catalogue from some one of our great bazaar poets. Suffice it to say that Widow Scanlan's bell never ceased its tintinnabulation betwixt 5:20 by the clock Thursday morning until long after midnight Saturday. Strangely enough the object of these profuse attentions broke down under them and summoned the police, previous to a flight to the country to escape the largesse of the unknown lover. This desperate resolution was, it seems, only taken when the incongruous cornucopia of love's new lexicon was completed by the appearance of the undertaker to measure the widow for a coffin! Now, in the language of the oriental lover, the graveclothes signify felicity, but when sent to a widow they mean an immediate immolation upon the funeral pyre. No wonder Widow Scanlan, who had followed the declaration in the language of gifts from treacle taffy to oleomargarine cooking butter, gave up before the wet nurse and the undertaker had fied. The event has a deep interest, however, for students of the social phenomena of the day, for tt plainly indicates that flowers and signs are no longer to monopolize the language of love. In future courtship will be carried on by means of the substantial things of on by means of the substantial things of life and we had better be studying the lexicon at once or we shall be like the Widow Scaulan perplexed over the clo quence of the new school of love-making.

BERYL'S SMILE OF JOY.

idened by the Approach of Frost, He Heart Bounds at a Single Word. Chicago Tribune.

"Why are you sad, Beryl?" The girl turned her head slightly as these words were spoken, and as her lis-some figure with its rounded curves and beautiful flesh tints stood sharply outlined, clear and perfect as a cameo, in the moonbeams that were falling in a silver spray through the branches of the linden trees, the sight was indeed a pretty one. George W. Simpson looked at her ear-nestly a moment and saw that tears were welling up in the dusky brown eyes and sobs that could not be restrained convulsing the girlish form.

"Why should I not be sad?" she said "The sweet summer is dying. There are hollows in her fair cheeks; a pathetic droop about the ripe red lips, dark shadows beneath the lovely eyes. And already across the hazy hills autumn peers, berry stains on her brown, slim fingers, purple vines trailing about her, scarlet buds and golden rods for the coronal and a broken reed for her sceptre. Already the hollows are brimmed with amber haze and the hilltops crowned with blue smoke. The sun looks languidly through dream clouds; a yellow leaf falls here and there and some prudent birds fly southward ere yet the first frost makes the fruit ruddy and ripens the hazelnuts in the hedges, ere yet the sumac catches some blood drops from the heart wound of fainting summer and the astor looks with blue and wistful eyes from the woodland path." "It is indeed a time fraught with sug-gestions that are mournful," said George, "but surely there is one gleam of hope, one little ray of golden sunshine amid all the mists and clouds"—and, bending over the girl in a loving fashion, he whispered a word in her ear.

A smile chased away the despondent col, and the tears that dimmed the starry eyes were quickly dashed away. Putting her arms around George's neck, Beryl murmured softly and with a look of perfect trust: "You are right, sweetheart; had forgotten the oysters.

STORM'S SUCCESS. DROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

Malaria is an almost indescribable malady which not even the most talented physicians are able to fathous. Its cause is most frequently ascribed to local surroundings, and there is very little question, but this opinion is substantiated by facts. Malaria does not necessarily mean chills and fever while these troubles usually accompany it. It often affects the sufferer with general lassitude, accompanied by loss of appetite, alcepless ness, a tired feeling and a high fever the person afflicted growing weaker and weaker, loses flesh day after day, until he becomes a mere skeleton, a shadow of his former self.

> Malaria once having laid its door of the systen is thrown open to nervous diseases. The body weak and enfeebled absorbs no nourishment, but subsisting upon itself, the digestive organs no longer perform their functions; the liver becomes torpid, and other organs falling to do their routine work, speedily become disordered, and dissolution and death are art to
