ADVANCING INTO CAIRO.

The Leaders of the Rebellion Make Submit sion-Pledging Loyalty to the Khedive

-The Terms of Surrender. The English advance guard have arrived The English advance guard have arrived at Cairo by rail. They were enthusiastically received. All personages of rank who are concerned in the rebellion have made submission. General Wolseley has gone forward on his way to Cairo. It is stated that Arabi Pasha and Taulba Pasha arrived at Cairo Wednesday night. They are both virtually prisoners. An official dispatch from Kassasin says there official dispatch from Kassasin says there are fifteen wounded officers and two hundred and forty-five wounded privates there from Tel el-Kebir. Ice is plentiful. The patients are all treated antiseptically and are doing as well as could be expected. A dispatch from Tel-cl Kebir says: "The British casualties in Wednesday's battle were: Killed—nine officers and forty-five men. Wounded—twenty-two officers and three hundred and thirty men. The enemy's loss is es-timated at fifteen hundred killed and wounded." General Wolseley telegraphs that about sixty guns were captured at Tel-el-Kebir. He says Arabi has gone to Cairo. General Wolseley hopes that the cavalry will occupy Belbeis to day and that the infantry will arive there to merrow. Butras Pasha has arrived at Kafr. el Dwar on the way to Alexandria as a delegate of the inhabitants of Cairo charged to declare their loyalty to the khedive.

Arabi Pasha's officer commanding at Kafr-el-Dwar has written to Cherif Pasha offering to surrender. The British are preparing to occupy the enemy's works. A rebel officer has arrived at Ramleh with a letter offering to surrender the troops. The enemy have opened the canal and The enemy have opened the canal and water is coming down rapidly. Orders have been issued that the dyke at Meks into Lake Mareotis be closed. General Wood telegraphs to the war office as follows: An officer from Kafr-el-Dwar has brought a letter saying all the military chiefs wish to submit to the khedive. They have given orders to open the canal dam and ask me to re-open the telegraph. They state that the army has stopped all hostilities. Taulba Pasha has stopped all hostilities. Tauloa Pasha has sent a flag of truce, offering to surrender. General Wood has telegraphed to General Wolseley for instructions. A deputation from Cairo is at Kafr-el-Dwar, waiting to come in. The conditions of surrender are not yet known. The general opinion is that the natives will deliver up Arabi Pasha to the British. Negotiations for surrender are proceeding satisfactorily. The British will probably occupy Kafr el-Dwar to-morrow. It is stated that the surrender will be unconditional.

Butros Bey, Reo f Pasha and Ali Pasha Roobi arrived in Alexander and proceeded to the palace, where they loyalty and submission. They were dele- good dinner is an intelligence; to appregated to present this address at a meeting at which there were present several high functionaries, Notables and Ulemas, including the Sheikh El Edwi, hitherto a wine cellar in this country, and gives the staunch partisan of Arabi Pasha. The sheikh, however, took no part in the proceedings of the meeting. The dele gates came from Cairo by the railway, which is intact. Butros Bey told dinner was something superb. The Tel el-Kebir at the time of the British purpose, on a wager to show attack consisted of 30,000 regulars, 7,000 me my provincialism. There were Bedouins and 3,000 volunteers. The first Moorish wines in leathers pouches, Bedouins and 3,000 volunteers. The first news of Wednesday's battle reached Cairo reported a great Egyptian victory, and when subsequently it was announced that Arabi Pasha was on his way to Cairo, it was rumored that he bore with him Admiral Seymour's head. The people of Cairo had never heard of General Wolseley, and imagined that Admiral Seymour commanded the British forces. When Arabi Pasha arrived alone the populace stoned him. Everything was quiet in Cairo when the delegates left there. Mah moud Pasha Sami was last heard of at Salihiyeh. The khedive gave a grand banquet last night in honor of Gen. Wood and Admiral Dowell. Sir Edward Malet, the British consul general, and all the members of the staff of the British consulate were present.

The sultan telegraphed to General Wolseley offering congratulations on the splendid victory achieved by him and requesting him, now that the neck of the rebellion is broken, to stop the march of his army into the interior. General abundant and as accessible in this house Wolseley sent a telegram in reply in which as water. That is a liberty which pays a he refers to the sultan to London for a compliment to his hospitality. Now, if I response to his request. All of the enemy's magazines have been blown up and all the preventables of the state of the stat and all the unavailables stores destroyed. Late Thursday afternoon the Exchange telegraph company received a dispatch from Alexandria stating that Arabi Pasha was reported to have been captured near Benhale. Another dispatch from Cairo who consider themselves men of the world says that the prefect of police there has arrested Arabi. The Daily News' dispatch to serve or enjoy one. from Constantinople says a fetwah or written decision was obtained from the before Arabi Pasha was proclaimed a The Times in a leading article on the attack on Tel-el-Kebir says: "It is impossible to conceive of an operation more successful and executed in a more masterly manner. The whole plan of the cam-paign, it says, was settled by General Wolseley, with the concurrence of his superiors and the hearty acquiescence of his chief advisers before he left England. There never was any question about the canal being the basis of operations. Before he left England he put his finger upon Tel-cl-Kebir, saying there Arabi would stand and we would attack him on the 15th of September. We mention the circumstance to show that a great deal which to the outside observer seems chance is really foreseen, planned or allowed for. General Wolseley has achieved a success which renders all apology for his methods superfluous."

A STARTLING INCREASE. The Growth of Mental Malady in the United States.

Philadelphia North American.

It is probable that not many people are aware that the number of lunatics in the United States is increasing with extraordinary and portentious rapidity. Such, however, is the unpleasant fact, as the in-controvertible evidences of official statistics abundantly testify. Every year cases of insanity are becoming more frequent in proportion to the total number of inhabitants which the country contains. When the census of 1870 was taken, it was four d 7,442, which gave a ratio of one to each 1,100 of the aggregate population. This is a ratio which in 1880 had been nearly SUSPENDERS, doubled, for in that year it was discovered that the army of the insane had increased until it was not far short of one hundred thousand strong. During the ten years ending with 1880 it has increased much more than two-fold, and the ratio had risen from one in 1,100 to one in 520. Though this is a remarkable and most un-tistics cover. The period of inflation and of unsubstantial prosperity which reached its calmination in 1872, had been followed by the longest and most disastrous panic through which this nation has ever passed and to the pressure of that memorable perion which began in the fall of 1873, and continued with more or less intensity until the close of 1878, much of the increased insanity which has been noted may properly be attributed. In those five years thousands of people who had always lived at their case, and who during the flush time had contracted habits of extravagance, found themselves being swiftly and gance, found themselves being swiftly and irresistibly pushed to the wall. Their wealth disappeared as though by magic; financial foundations which seemed to be as solid as the everlasting hills decayed and crumbled away, and with a despairing sense of helplessness and bewilderment rich men found themselves sinking into reverty and want. Nor did those into poverty and want. Nor did those who were poor at the begining escape the blighting influence of the great revulsion. To every deep their is a deeper still, and men whose hard work had mantained them in a poverty which was at least de-cent and not wholly divoid of comfort were driven to despair by finding them-selves without the means of subsistence, because the work at which their livelihood and that of their families was earned had perforce been discontinued.

It is not surprising that during the de-cade in which the hardest of hard times was comprised insanity should have increased. There is, however, cause to fear that the increase which the statistics reveal is not wholly to be explained in this way. The spirit of American civilization is not conducive to the preservation of mental equilibrium, and that very educa-tion upon which we justly pride ourselves has a tendency to expose the weaker minds to the attacks of the mental malady. This appears from the figures which show the relative frequency of insanity in the different sections. In the Now England states, where the average of education is highest, the ratio is one to 357; in the south, where the education standard is lowest, it is one to 780. But it does not follow that education is a bad thing.

A PERFECT DINNER.

Henry Watterson's Talk About It, and He

Editorial Letter to Courier ? 1920al. A perfect dinner does not mean either a costly or a large dinner, though let every stomach gauge its own desires. A good dinner is what you want, be it in ten courses or beefsteak and onions. The Broadway swell knows as little of what constitutes a good dinner as the Kentucksented to the khedive, on the part of the be "three cocktails and a chaw of ter inhabitants of Cairo, an address pledging backer." To know what constitutes ciate a good dinner is a gift ; to order on best dinners on our side of the Atlanticwhere I am disposed to think the best dinners are given—once asked me to take pot-luck with him. It was a ruse. The long, crooked necks and no end of oil and wax; port fifty years out of the dock of London; maderia old enough to have grandchildren. When the ladies went and the "discussion" was called and my host came over and took the vacant chair of the hostess, I modestly asked for a glass of champagne, which was instantly supplied, but which occasioned great merriment round the table, and I was told that the "argument" in hand (i. e. What Constitutes Provincialism?) was over; since my going by the rare wines of Lucullus and preferring champage proved me to be a rustic. Not so, not so, quoti I when I was able to get a hearing. proves just the contrary. It proves me a cosmopolitan. If I were a provincial I should only be too glad to keep my mouth open to these rare wines of Lucullus. I should twist my feet beneath his mahog any in awe-struck silence. I do not this because I am used to them. I asked him for what I want-for what I know to be as which might and doubtless would have embarrassed him, I should be a provincial. You dear friends, are provincial in taking note of any thing that happens at a gen-tleman's table." This merely is an inter-lude, an illustration, to show that those Thackeray, who upon victuals is a very Shiek Et Islam at a meeting of the Ulemas prose Horace, has an essay entitled "Me-morials of Gormandizing." It is a noble paen to food ; not so tender as "The Ballad of Bovillabaise," but very witty and effusive. In this delightful prose poem the most humane of English satirists tells how, one murky afternoon in Paris, he met an old friend between whom and himself a coolness had existed; they met face to face ; they were alone and lonely ; they had been wandering for hours in quest of somebody; they entered an adjacent restaurant and had a beefsteak and bottle of red wine; they beamed, they glowed, they sopped their bread in the residuum of gravy left in the bottom of the dish and they loved one another. That, that was a good dinner.

The best dinner I can recall was in the woods of Georgia, with James Eustis, a staff officer of General Joe Johnston, who afterwards became a United States sena-tor, and Harry Yeatman, General Polk's aiddecamp. It consisted of a single leg of mutton, some hot wheat bread, a little pure butter and half a phial of Scotch whiskey, which we had purloined from the general's chest. A good dinner is perfect food perfectly dressed; not a great array of dishes. The art of cooking is the first of the fine arts.

The first woman in America is not she who bears most children-a brutal Napoleonism—but she who prepares the best dish; because, by this one act, this superior accomplishment, she contributes to the health of her children and to the fidelity of her husband. In my poor way I have tried to disseminate in Kentucky the idea of good and clean and wholesome food. And I have encountered the fate of the reformer. Why bless you-to show what honor one may make in a good cause—the last time I was away from home I dated my letters from "Welker's," (not only the best restaurant in Washington, but one of the most exclusive and domestic hotels in the word), and a Kentucky newspaper had a leading editorial to show that I was gone to the eternal bowwows, since I lad the shamelessness to date my
