THE VERDICT SET ASIDE.

THE GOVERNMENT DOES NOT RESIST.

Miner and Rerdell, the Convicted Star Route Complotors, Granted a New Trial and Released on Bail.

There were few spectators present when Judge Wylie's criminal court was called to order at 10 o'clock, Friday morning. Miner and Rerdell, in the custody of the bailiffs, were early in attendance, but the court on either side were late in making their appearance.

Mr. Henkle, the counsel for Miner, filed with the clerk of the court various affidavits upon which he based his motion for a new trial. He then stated that he had called on Mr. Holmead, one of the Star Route jurors, in order to secure an affidavit as to the attempts made to corrupt him.

Mr. Holmead has stated that he had already filed an affidavit in the District Attorney's office and that Assistant District Attorney Moore declined to give him a copy.

Mr. Merrick—I have had no opportunity of personal communication with the attorney general, but in any emergency arising in a case his counsel must perform his duty for him and take the responsibility. Neither have I had much opportunity of communicating with Messrs. Ker and Bliss. I had some motions on file for a new trial in the case of the convicted defendants, accompanied by statements of a variety of reasons and by some affidavits. Among the reasons is one, namely, that the verdict is unreasonable.

As counsel for the government of the United States I am not disposed to put on file a consent to the granting of the motion; but my counsel for the United States feel it to be my duty not to oppose it. The government of the United States itself is not entirely satisfied by any means with this verdict. It is a verdict which subjects the masters to a retrial and convicts the servants and minions. The jury presumably found evidence of a conspiracy to defraud the United States and of an overt act, so as to create a completed crime under the statutes of the United States. That having been found by the jury prior to their determination of a conviction of guilt, the government of the United States cannot consistently with its dignity object, by practical resistance, to the motion made to set aside such a verdict, and bring to trial the defendants again, and so forth, in order that full justice may be done.

The government of the United States seeks no victim. It seeks simply justice, and when a verdict apparently trifles with justice it cannot meet the full approval of the government of the United States. With these brief remarks the government counsel leave the subject of this motion to the discretion of the court, not consenting, but not resisting, hoping for the purity of its records, resolved on the prosecution of criminals to the fullest extent, and trusting that whatever your honor may decide or witnesses may hereafter come, full justice will in the end be done.

Mr. Henkle read the grounds upon which he based his motion for a new trial, stating, however, that he had taken no evidence except the affidavits of jurors upon the ground, "Misbehavior of the jury."

Mr. Merrick stated that he had looked over the affidavits and had seen none that had alleged the fact that Dickson had related to the other jurors the circumstances attending the alleged attempt to bribe him, notwithstanding his honor's directions to the contrary.

Mr. Henkle—One of the jurors said to me that the jury had been polled they would have said that that was not their verdict.

Mr. Merrick—The verdict rendered by the jury is perfectly consistent with logic and correct principle as so far as the nine are concerned who voted consistently "Guilty as to all." Their principle was right. The logic from that principle was right. The others may reconcile it as best they can.

Mr. Henkle—I concede that. Mr. Henkle then read Foreman Dickson's sworn statement, which has been already published.

Mr. Merrick stated whether Dickson had not said that he did not believe that Bowen was authorized to make the offer?

Mr. Henkle said that he had not conversed with Dickson; but Mr. Carpenter admitted that such was the fact.

The court stated that he had directed the jury not to converse on the subject of the alleged bribery. Whether or not the jury had transgressed the rule laid down by the court, did not appear from Mr. Dickson's affidavit.

Mr. Henkle said that he would appear in Mr. Henkle's affidavit. He then went on to argue that the verdict should be set aside upon the evidence contained in Dickson's affidavit.

Mr. Merrick said that he would resist setting aside the verdict on that ground.

The court stated that he would set aside the verdict on the ground of its unreasonableness, he would make no objection.

The rich were let go; the poor were punished. The masters were set free; the slaves were sent to jail.

Mr. Henkle proceeded to argue that the verdict should be set aside on the ground that the jury had been tampered with, and in conclusion said: The court room was dotted all over with spotters, whose business it was to shadow jurors, counsel, and witnesses; and some of the vilest men in this community were right there all through this trial, doing every thing in the service of the government.

Mr. Merrick—In the service of the government?

Mr. Henkle—Yes, sir.

Mr. Merrick—Is there any affidavit of this sort on file?

Mr. Henkle—I have not any proof of this now, but I will furnish it when we get to investigating the matter.

Mr. Merrick—When we come to investigating the matter we will reach the conclusion that this approach of Dickson was a "got up" thing on the defendant's side.

Mr. Carpenter—You will have a hard time to do that, Mr. Merrick.

Mr. Merrick—I do not know whether you will or not.

The court then sent to the district attorney's office for Holmead's affidavit, which merely gives an account of his various conversations with Frank H. Fall, and is unimportant, the conversations turning upon the corruption of the jury, and no bribe being offered.

The court said that there was nothing in the affidavits to satisfy the court that there was any misconduct in the jury room. Tampering with a jury was a very great offense against the law, but the tampering must be done by some party interested in the cause. "As to the misconduct of the jury," continued the court, "both sides concede that a discussion as to the bribery matter took place in the jury room. In the circumstances of the case, considering the incoherent character of this verdict, I think it will be safe for the court to assume what is conceded by counsel on both sides to have taken place in the jury room, and I will award a new trial."

Mr. Carpenter thought that Mr. Merrick was laboring under a misapprehension as to the reading of Mr. Dickson's statement to the jury. He (Carpenter) thought that it was read long before the jury retired for deliberation.

Mr. Jobiner, one of the jurors, happening to be in the court room was called to witness stand and testified to the reading of the statement by Mr. Dickson after the retirement of the jury. He said that the jury voted in the affirmative upon the question as to whether the paper should be read.

The court—What I wanted to know was whether the jury had violated the directions of the court. That verdict of guilty then, as to Rerdell and Miner, is set aside, not only on the account of the misconduct of the jury, but I may say, on account of general unreasonableness. Not that the court has any objection to the latter ground alone, because the unreasonableness of a verdict is for the jury rather than the court, unless the unreasonableness shocks the court. These two men seem to be at the two ends of the line. I did not seem to me to mind that they could have gone into a conspiracy without having had any of the others along with them; but the jury thought that they could; and I would not have disturbed the verdict on that ground. But when I see that the jury was called upon by a jury that were not in evidence, of course, my duty is plain—to set the verdict aside. As to the acquittal of Peck, who is dead—I hope he is acquitted everywhere—we were not trying him. As to Turner, of course the verdict stands. As to a new trial, therefore, as to all except Turner and Peck.

Miner and Rerdell Released on Bail.

Miner and Rerdell were then released upon bail in the amount of $10,000 each—Noble and Williamson becoming surety for the former and A. C. Richards for the latter.

Mr. Merrick asked that the court should fix the first Monday in December as the date for the new trial, and the court did so, notwithstanding the protest of Mr. Henkle.

Mr. Merrick—That ends it for the present.

The court then adjourned.

The decision of Judge Wylie to grant a new trial in the case of all the conspirators was not generally anticipated. The talk was generally to the contrary. The government, however, made no opposition to the motion, and this made Judge Wylie's duty easy in ordering a new trial.

He took care to say that it was made necessary, not by the unreasonableness of the verdict, but by the general unreasonableness of the community is rather inclined to acquiesce in the wisdom of this decision. Since the verdict a general sympathy has sprung up for Rerdell and Miner, not because the verdict was not generally anticipated, but because it is repugnant to the feeling of fair play to know that these inferior instruments are in jail while the principals are seen driving about town in their carriages.

It is the opinion of leading lawyers that the result of the proceeding puts the government in better shape to go to trial next December than if Rerdell and Miner had gone to the penitentiary. Rerdell's confession and matters relating to Miner could not, it is claimed, be introduced unless they were defendants in the new trial. The omission of that testimony might tend to weaken the case for the prosecution, and, besides, now there is a chance to get Rerdell and Miner to turn state's evidence without prejudicing the government's case. The defense made a strong point in its favor for a new trial by the submission of the affidavits showing that Juror McLean was not a resident of the city or of the District of Columbia, but was a legal voter in Maryland, where he owns property.

These affidavits were backed up by the supervisor of registration in the registration office of the district in which McLean voted at the last election and several others who saw him deposit his ballot. The excitement in regard to these cases has subsided considerably and everything is being held in abeyance to await the arrival of Messrs. Brewster, Cameron and Henry A. Bowen, who are now on their way to Washington to meet Dickson on the issue raised by his numerous statements. Brady and Doney are not at all pleased with the prospect of being linked again with their scapegoats, and it is said that they will decline to help their victims in the future as they have done in the past.

TORNADO IN CONNECTICUT.

Mowing a Swathe Through the Town of Winchester.

At Winsted, Conn., Thursday evening a storm, preceded by sharp lightning and a heavy rain, came from a southerly direction through Winchester, across Long Lake, and burst in all its fury at the north end of the lake. It struck two houses belonging to Henry Gay, and inhabited by Samuel Beach's family and the late Dr. Samuel H. Pratt street, and was lifted, the windows blown out, and the trees nearly uprooted. Further on the house of Clifford Barnes, a large two-and-a-half-story frame house, and the house of F. Falvey were blown to pieces. Next to the beautiful Gothic house belonging to Mr. Hart, head clerk in O. D. Hart's grocery, was thrown off its foundation, and lies on its side a complete wreck.

As yet no bodies have been found, although the work of excavation is going on. Mr. Maxwell has been seen in this part of the country. A tract of about one mile in length and an eighth of a mile in breadth, is covered with debris. The fire department and the entire police corps are on the ground, and the slightest signs of fire immediately got under control, the department acting with commendable promptness and decision.

News has been received that considerable damage to property has been experienced on Wallen's Hill, two miles distant, which is altogether probable, the place being in a direct line with the track of the tornado.

A number of children are reported missing. Lizzie Barns, an employee of the new silk mill, and lately a resident of Paterson, N. J., has been found seriously injured.

A terrible wind storm swept through the Mohawk Valley in New York at about 5 o'clock p. m., accompanied by rain and lightning. Some slight damage was done in Albany. At Mindenville a man drove into a barn with a load of hay to escape the storm. The barn was blown down and both the man and his team were killed.

There were severe thunder storms along the Hudson river from Fishkill to Hudson. The lightning was incessant and blinding. In many places the Hudson river raised the track is flooded and the telegraph wires are broken. The steamer Mary Powell was obliged to stop between New Hamburg and Milton for ten minutes. No damage is as yet reported.

"By asking too much we may lose the little that we had before." Kline-Wort asks nothing but a fair trial. This given, it leaves no one of faith in its virtues. A lady writes from Oregon: "For thirty years I have been afflicted with kidney complaints. Two packages of Kline-Wort have done me more good than all the medicine and doctors I have had. I believe it is a wonderful cure."

"Fast, brilliant and fashionable are the Diamond Dye colors. One package colors 1 to 4 lbs. of goods. 10 cents for any color."

"A Wonderful Thing to a Seed." Says some song writer, and then he adds: "You can't see it; to-morrow will bring the blossom that proves what sort of thing is the seed, the seed that you sow." All of which is true. And Hunt's remedy is a wonderful thing, also. It is, also, tested by experience. You give it to one who is severely afflicted with kidney or other urinary disease, and "to-morrow," or a little while after, you will find that the remedy proves itself to be "the friend in need," the cure for which you have been seeking. This is the experience of thousands of men and women, but invite the most rigid testing of Hunt's Remedy in kidney and liver diseases.
