SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 23, 1882.

Autumnal Changes. We have reached that period of the year most trying to a large class of people, when the weather is as fickle and vexatious as a giddy-headed maiden...

The New York Democratic nominations are encouraging to mayors and to bachelors. The candidates for governor and lieutenant governor are the mayors of the cities in which they live and are both bachelors.

In contemplation of the speech of our Brosius at Butler the other day they say that Tom Marshall said: "If a man of this character can fill the hole I left in the Harrisburg ticket, God help me, but a mighty small plug was needed."

BEAVER has spoken in more than half the counties of the state and made altogether over sixty alleged speeches, one of which has commanded general attention, or had any perceptible effect.

TELL it not at headquarters that it was after listening to an alleged speech by Brosius that Tom Marshall went right off and enlisted for the war under the Independents.

"A WISE economy must be enforced in the public affairs," says Mr. Pattison. And his official record in Philadelphia shows how effectively that pledge would be redeemed in Harrisburg.

The New York Democratic convention has done very well indeed. The New York Times says that it exhibited surprising sagacity. In view of the undeniable fact that Democratic conventions, as well as Republican conventions, often fail to act with a sagacity which seems plainly indicated, there is some excuse for surprise that no exception can be taken to the wisdom of the proceedings of this convention.

The sagacity of the convention did not end here. It took a fresh, clean, vigorous candidate for governor; one who has not been a party hack, but who has made a good record as an energetic and efficient public officer.

The Jean mill of J. Ledward & Son, in Chester, Pa., was destroyed by fire last evening, losing $8,000. The fire is attributed to spontaneous combustion. More than 300 persons are thrown out of employment.

EX-MINISTER COMLY has returned to his home in Ohio from the Sandwich Islands, where he gave bond in the same case as a Pacific slope man who understood something about commerce: "No, I propose to appoint Comly. Why, he and I have slept in the same bed!"

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WANT THE HERALD GAINED POSSESSION OF IT?

The New York Herald editorially discusses the turn which affairs have recently taken in the conduct of the New York Associated Press. It says that Jay Gould "proposed to amalgamate the Western Union telegraph company, which he controls, with the associated press; to destroy the organization of the latter and make the employees of the telegraph company, his own servants—that is to say—the collectors of news for the paper. While he could control but three of the journals forming the associated press this scheme of course halted; but at the August meeting of the association he was enabled by the vote of the press, which had until then, in common with the Herald, Tribune and Journal of Commerce, opposed his plans to strike his first blow by discharging the executive committee from the further consideration of its relation with the Western company. From this, therefore, it may apparently be fairly inferred that Mr. Gould now controls four of the papers that constitute the association."

YESTERDAY'S rain-storm was the heaviest that has visited Philadelphia for many years. Mr. Glanville, residing in the breaking of culverts, flooding of cellars, &c. Fires were extinguished in mills and the running of street cars impeded. At 11 o'clock last night the U. S. signal service officer at Tenth and Chestnut streets reported a rain of nearly five inches. COLUMBIA NEWS.

REGULAR CORRESPONDENCE.

Rev. Dr. H. H. Wells, of Willoughby, Ohio, preached his farewell sermon at the Presbyterian church, Mt. Joy, on Friday evening. The first sermon of his course was delivered on Sunday evening of last week, which was followed every evening, except Saturday, by interesting discourses. His subject last night was, "The emotional element in Christian experience analyzed," based on the text: Matthew xi, 29—"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me." The speaker was sorry to criticize many of his Christian friends. He was particularly severe on exaggerated Christian experience. He believes there are two types of conversion—the one instantaneous, the other gradual. These moods depend on the faith the penitent have in God. He who has implicit and immediate faith, his change of heart will be like a flash; but one who has first a little faith the more and more his conversion will be gradual. Although different in nature the result is the same. The services throughout were well attended and much interest in the sermons was manifested.

After the meeting last evening in response to an invitation from the pastor of the church, Rev. C. B. Whitcomb, many members and friends of the church went to his residence to spend an hour in social intercourse with the visiting members. There was vocal and instrumental music and two short parting addresses by Rev. Whitcomb and Dr. Wells. Dr. Wells left this morning for the West, and during his short stay, made many attachments which were reluctantly broken.

The law and order league will take in hand the looting at the passenger station. They have given notice.

ARGUMENT COURT. Cases Heard—Discharge Refused. In the matter of the rule granted to show cause why a new trial should not be granted to Charles Fritz, who at the August sessions was convicted of fornication and bastardy, the argument was deferred until the next argument court, there being pending a rule to take testimony in the case before Alderman Spruier to-day.

Michael Curley and John McGowan, who were arrested by Officer Gilbert for riding on freight trains of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday morning, and who were committed by Justice Frank Waters, on Friday, for ten days because they could not pay the fine, were brought before the court on writs of habeas corpus, and their counsel asked that they be discharged. Officer Gilbert made a statement, showing that he arrested the men at Rohrerstown. The men were called and they testified that they boarded the train in Philadelphia and were told that they could ride by the fireman of the engine. The court refused to discharge the men, and they were sent back to jail.

In the matter of the application of Wm. Shultz to keep a restaurant at a new stand in the Eighth ward, this city, the court stated that they desired to hear additional argument in the case.

At 10 o'clock the docket was called and 23 judgments were entered for different reasons.

Cases are still being argued, court having met this afternoon.

"The Kerry Show." Mr. Joseph Murphy's pleasing little Irish comedy of the "Kerry Gow" has little none of the picturesque beauty and graceful charm that gave it its early popularity and are likely to retain it in general favor for a long time to come.

The humor that runs through the play from beginning to end does not fail, but goes on like a limpid stream for a pure fountain, with just enough pathos here and there to give a finished setting to the story that is enacted. Mr. Murphy, himself an actor of sterling worth, whose merits have long been recognized, is well considered at length, has the good sense to surround himself with a capable company, and each part in the performance of last night had admirable treatment, and made itself a component factor in the success of the evening.

An uncommonly pretty little lady, made the heroine's role just as attractive as could be, and shared in the honors that were so freely distributed, and there was no words save those of commendation for the other members of the evenly balanced cast. "The Kerry Gow" is a deserving of a larger audience, though the inclement weather made a good many people stay indoors, who otherwise would no doubt have turned out to welcome Mr. Murphy.

Following is a copy of a letter received this morning by his honor Mayor MacGonigle: UNITED STATES CONSULATE, COLOMBIA, Sept. 6, 1882. To His Honor, the Mayor of Lancaster, Pa. Sir,—I have been requested to ascertain whether one John Jacob Gohr is still living in your city, or whether he is now deceased. If he is still living, I am in favor of referring this to the proper officer who can give the desired information, and greatly oblige. Yours, most respectfully, SAMUEL SPACKMAN, U. S. Consul.

No such name is found in either the city or county directories. It is in the favor of referring this to the proper officer who can give the desired information, and greatly oblige.

Yours, most respectfully, SAMUEL SPACKMAN, U. S. Consul.

Two building lots on North Lima street, belonging to Allan A. Herr for $1,600.

A two-story brick dwelling, No. 124 Low street, belonging to John R. Smith, for $1,300.

Roughly Handled. A respectable looking but somewhat intoxicated man, from the vicinity of the Nickel Mines, became very abusive to the conductor of a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad depot, because the conductor would not allow him and his wife to get aboard the cars—the reason for the refusal being that the train did not stop at the station at which the couple wanted to get off. So violent was the man's conduct that he was taken into custody by two policemen who put the nippers on him and nudged him before they could get him to the station house. This morning he was taken before Alderman McConomy, where he paid his fine and costs and was discharged.
