MELVILLE IN WASHINGTON. A Cordisi Reception—Warm Greeting Be-tween Danenhower and the Engineer. The reception tendered Engineer Melville and his companions Noros and Nin-Lieutenant Berry, of the Rogers, by the citizens of Washington, was cordial. Long before the limited express was due a crowd of several thousand had assemble had been robbed of all his possession. people waiting to catch a glimpse of the returning explorers. At the depot the district militia was drawn up in line on the dollars in cash. street, and a portion of the reception committee, ex-Secretary of the Navy Thompson, Acting Secretary of State Davis and a number of naval officers awaited the arrival of the train inside the building. Among the callers, Lieutenant Danenhower was conspicuously noticeable. He was the first to greet his old companions in the bank parlor when in walks the sec as the party alighted from the train, and retary with a newspaper in his hand and the greeting was a hearty one. Melville observes : appeared to recognize Danenhower before the latter saw him, and pressed forward with extended hand and "Hello Dan." As soon as Danenhower saw him, he rushed up and greeted him with "How are you, old fellow!" and the two shook hands long and warmly. Then the citizens' committee thronged around and were introduced to the survivors rob this bank of a few dollars a time and of the Jeannette expedition. Melville and Berry stood close together with Noros and Ninderman in the back ground. Melville looked somewhat grave and Berry appeared embarrassed. His friends say he is as modest as a girl. Noros and Nin derman looked on with interest. They are stalwart specimens of humanity, and their rugged physique elicited many expressions of admiration from the bystand-

JOURNALISTIC YACHTMEN.

A Henty and Mr. R. Wilson, both of the made a most interesting and rather hazardous experiment in boat sailing on Put ney Beach, on Saturday. They turned out in a weird looking craft, whose first performance caused quito a little flutter of excitement on the river. The boat is the invention of Mr. Henty, who believes his invention will make boat sailing as nearly as possible safe on rivers and shallow waters. The craft is a beautifully built decked sailing gig, with a large open cockpit in the centre. She is seventeen feet long and four feet beam; she carries two lug sails and a great jib, the hoist of the main lug being, as far as can be esti mated, about thisteen feet, that of the mizzen about seven feet or seven feet six inches. From each side of his boat Mr. Henty runs out a tough spar, at the end of which he has fixed a small, cleancut, air-tight boat or float, about eight feet long and one foot beam. Their boat pitches, but does not roll. The spar works on a joint which allows its float to fall down, but does not let it move up above the level of the dock. Thus, when the craft tends to heel over under full sails, the pressure is conveyed to the leeward float boat at the end of the outrigger. Its extreme buoyancy keeps the deck of the little yacht almost level. These floats can be shipped and unshipped with the utmost With the result of the trial trip Mr. Henry and his friend professed them-selves more than satisfied, and from the river bank only one defect could be noticed. The craft seemed to be guilty of "weather-cocking," that is, hauging up in stays, and refusing now and then to pay off either on one tack or the other. This defect Mr. Henty believes he can care by having more ballast astern and by length-enting the rudder. Both Mr. Henty and Mr. Wilson declare that the boat steers easily-is, in fact, very sensitive to her helm-that she goes close to the wind, that she is swift in the lightest puffs and the dismal predictions with which they were met on the morning of their adven ture have not been verified.

STATE BOUNDARY LINES

The New Little monuments That Separate New York from Pennsylvania.

Elmira Advertieer. The dispute between the two states over the boundary line between New York and Pennsylvania, as is well known, was finally settled by both states accepting the old boundaries, for the principal reason that many farm line fences formed the boundaries and much labor was required to change tax assessments, etc. But the old boundary was ill understood, it being just 100 years since the boundary monuments were erected, and many of them were broken, covered up or lost sight of. For the puipose of renewing the monuments a corps of laborers under charge of Engineer Major II. W. Clark, of Syracuse, was set to mark some time since on the most easterly point where the two states come together on the Delaware river and they have completed their labors as far as the plank road in the town of Southpost, New York, a distance of seventyuine miles. They expect to finish the work by January 1, 1884. The monuments are made of Quincy granite, and are about four feet long and six inches square at the top. They are dressed one foot down, that distance being left above ground. Heavy creases are cut at right angles across each. The letters Pa. and N. Y., which are about two inches long, face Pennsylvania and New York re spectively. At highways, street and rail-way crossings the top of the stones are one foot by six inches in size, and in other particulars like the others. Those of the ordinary size are set just one mile apart and will be of benefit to assessors and others residing near the line. For some time to come they will establish the permanent boundary line between these

The allegations are not only that the two maie prisoners savagely flogged the girls with their own hands, but that a number of natives were ordered to keep up the punishment, which they did with guava whips, canes, ropes and other instruments. Not content with this, the male prisoners ordered some pepper to be brought, and rubbed it into the bleeding wounds of the girls as they lay upon the ground, helpless and rolling about in agony. This was in the morning and the girls were left lying on the ground under the broiling sun during the whole day without shelter or aid of any kind. They were again barbariously treated three days later, and on the following morning one of the girls died. True bills have been

LANCASTER, Sept. 13, 1882. To Lancaster Watch Co.

Gentlemen: Several months ago I bought a "Keystone" Watch, No. 24,887. After getting it to close adjustment, I compared it regularly with the time delivered by the W. U. Tel. Co.
daily from the Clock in the National Observa-Days its variation was only one-half second, by chronometer, from mean time of the Washington Observatory—which clock is never allowed to vary more than one-tenth of a second from absolute accuracy. At that time I one from absolute accuracy. At that time is unfortunately neglected to wind it, and thus lost continuous record. It has since been doing excellent work, atthough subjected daily to considerable rough bievele riding, which is a severe test of its time-keeping and running qualities. This is not a "Special" Watch, but was taken directly from stock, as east from the fectory.

Watch, but was taken sent from the factory.

The Wonderful Growth.

If you have been a Customer of Ours

FIVE YEARS. And been in to see us at different times during that period, you cannot but very readily see to what vast propor-tions our business has grown in so short a time from such a small beginning. But we are not stopping here, although it is far better than we did expect at that time. Every day brings something new to learn, and having the one object in " How to Best Satisfy Our Customers," We are kept busy; but have the satisfaction of knowing that which is done is to their best interests. At the present time we are getting in
