MARKED RESEMBLANCE.

TWO CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR.

Governor Cleveland and Robert Emory Pattison—Traits that the Two Men Have in Common.

A correspondent at Buffalo, N. Y., writes to the Intelligencer:

Grover Cleveland is not an unobscured man. The upper part of his face is strikingly like that of General Hancock, and the resemblance would be more marked if his hair and mustache were gray. He is some six feet tall, weighs over 200 pounds, is rather bald and combs his hair back from his forehead in the bald spot. His face is a strong one and his manner particularly frank and winning. They say of him in Buffalo that he is a bashful man; that he begins an argument in court with visible reluctance, but that when he has fairly entered on his plea he speaks with singular fluency and force. In conversation he is altogether unaffected, but talks with decision and readily. He has a habit of knitting his brow between the eyes when particularly in earnest. He talks to the point, and does not leave the listeners in any doubt as to the exact meaning of what he says. This much as to the personal appearance and manners of the more conservative of the two candidates who is personally known to very few out of the limits of the city, and to whom the nomination to the high office for which he is candidate would have seemed among the most improbable of possible things. He comes of a New England stock; his father was a Presbyterian minister in Connecticut; he himself came to Buffalo when a boy, with only a few dollars to his name, but rapidly gained a enviable place in his profession; he was made the nominee of his party for mayor a year ago and was elected by a majority that astonished the opposition. In his brief term of service he has made such reputation for himself by the firmness, the good judgment and the honesty with which he has opposed and thwarted the schemes of a corrupt municipal ring made up of Republicans and Democrats that he was easily the choice of a state convention, many of the members of which had heard of him and his acts when they came to Syracuse, and apparently he will grow in favor and will make a strong candidate. Nothing hurtful in his public or private life has yet been developed, and his friends say there is nothing in his character which can be made a valid point of attack.

There are, however, some remarkable coincidences in the lives and public services of the two men who are the Democratic candidates for governor in the two great states in the Union. Robert E. Pattison is twelve years younger than is Grover Cleveland, but the latter may still be regarded as a young man. Each is the son of a minister. Robert E. Pattison's father, the elder Cleveland went from Connecticut to New Jersey to take charge of a Presbyterian church in Caldwell and there Grover was born. The father soon moved to Onondaga county, N. Y., and the boy grew up and was educated in New York state. Pattison was nominated for controller of Philadelphia when there seemed not a chance of his election. But the impression had got abroad that he was a young man of sterling integrity and firmness of purpose, and he was elected by a vast majority of the best citizens of Philadelphia. The Democratic nomination for mayor of Buffalo went begging a year ago so slight seemed the chances that any Democrat could be elected. Finally Mr. Cleveland was induced, although very reluctantly, to accept it, and he was elected by a majority of over three thousand in a city which gave Garfield a majority of over three thousand only twelve months before. The reason which induced him to accept a political nomination he himself incidentally gave in an address at the semi-centennial of the city's birth last July:

"Citizenship brings with it duties not unlike those we owe to our neighbor and to our God," he said. "If we cannot spare time to devote to public concerns we perhaps find that he may become the prey of public plunderers, and he who indolently cares not who administers the government of his city will be living peacefully in neglect of his highest duty as a citizen."

Controller Pattison, no more than Mayor Cleveland, had recommended himself to the politicians of his city or district and both were practically unknown to the voters of the state. It was the pressure that made Pattison the nominee of the Harrisburg convention and Cleveland that of the convention at Syracuse was certainly not the claims of political service, of the politician's service or of the claims of the politician, but the claims of the people for simple integrity in the highest public offices. In this much the candidacy of the two men is a consoling evidence of a regeneration of public sentiment "I was much struck," said Mr. Cleveland, "with a point made by Mr. Kissella at the convention the other day. It was, you will remember, that Alexander Hamilton, the advocate of various monarchical features in our national constitution, had recently said that the governors of the states should be appointed by the president. Hamilton's proposition was rejected by Jefferson and Madison and other sincere patriots of the day. 'Yes,' said Mr. Kissella, 'had Hamilton lived he would have seen the views of the republicans on this subject. Many of our Republican friends undoubtedly think that the Republican candidate for governor has been virtually appointed by the president and will owe his election to the same influence.'"

FOUR FESTIVE DATES.

Sights that will be seen during the Bi-Centennial Jubilee.

It is estimated that between 300,000 and 500,000 strangers will flock to Philadelphia during the Bi-Centennial celebration. The event will open with a representation of the landing of Penn at the Blue Anchor inn, now Dock street wharf, in which all the vessels in the North Atlantic squadron not commissioned will take part, the harbor being enlivened by a decorative display of ocean and river craft. This will be followed by a grand parade with a large body of regular troops, national, state and city officials and employees, firemen and their apparatus, the various national societies, and the civic, social, benevolent and literary associations in line. The day's programme will close with an evening display of fireworks in the park. On the second day the trades of Philadelphia will their display, and it is expected between 15,000 and 20,000 men will participate with about 800 wagons. In the evening illuminated tableaux will move over the route of the day's procession.

The programme for the third day embraces the Welsh Singers' festival, a gathering of the German choirs, a parade of 10,000 Knights Templar, a festival for the school children, a Schenck regatta, a bicycle race and a Caledonian game on the fourth and last day, besides a reunion of 15,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic. There will also be evening receptions by the Mystic Tableau association and the Knights Templar. The mayor will issue a proclamation calling upon citizens to decorate and illuminate their houses. The Tableau association has secured the vacant market house at Sixth street and Columbia avenue to store its materials and prepare the tableaux for the parade.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

One Soldier Killed and Five Injured in Battle at Castle.

A terrible accident occurred on Monday at Castle William, Governor's Island, during a reply to the salute of the French gunboat Minerve, which arrived there at a late hour the preceding night. About ten rounds had been fired, when the first gun in the embrasure prematurely exploded while the gunners were ramming home a charge for the next round. The third gun almost simultaneously exploded.

Private Mabey, of Battery H, who was standing directly in front of the first gun, was instantly killed, and Private Wehlein, of Battery A, was frightfully injured. His right arm was blown off and his right leg and body were horribly burned. He will not recover.

Private Chemnitz, of Battery A, had his right forearm torn off, and Private Siderer, of Battery A, had his left hand blown off. Corporal Grace, of Battery A, and Corporal Irving, of Battery H, was also slightly injured.

Firing was immediately suspended and surgeons hastily summoned, and the wounded received prompt attention. The dead body and the limbs of the wounded were quickly gathered together and removed and the wounded conveyed to the hospital on stretchers. The scene on the arrival of the doctors was a sad one. Strong men shed tears as they carried the dead body of their late comrade away.

Accounts differ as to the real cause of the accident, but the general opinion is that the premature discharges were occasioned by sparks from the cartridges being blown back by the strong wind into the embrasures. No blame is attached to the gunners.

NINE PERSONS INJURED.

Fall of a Gallery and a Shed at the Pittsburg Exposition.

Shortly after 9 o'clock, Monday night, the west gallery of the Exposition building at Pittsburg, gave way, and a number of persons, with a piano and two organs, were precipitated to the floor, a distance of thirty feet. Seven persons were injured, but not fatally. One organ was demolished and the other instruments badly damaged. About the same time another accident occurred outside the building by which three persons were seriously hurt. A crowd had gathered to see a display of fireworks, and about thirty people were standing on a temporary shed when it fell and the crowd were thrown to the ground. Mrs. Crawford, of Connelville, Pa, was seriously hurt, her head was cut, her back sprained and she was otherwise injured. Her husband was also injured pretty badly about the head and face.

The names of those hurt by the falling of the gallery are as follows:

C. H. Taylor, of Wheeling, of Va., back hurt and face cut; Barbara Shaw, of Allegheny City, both arms broken and head severely gashed; Menie Shaw, a sister, back sprained and face and hand cut; Nicholas Erick, of Pittsburg, nose broken and head cut; Charles W. Atchison, of Pittsburg, one arm broken and wrist sprained; John Meidy, side hurt; Bertin Miller, of Allegheny City, injured, about face, head and body.

The attendance at the exposition was the largest of the season, fully 20,000 people being present during the evening. The accident caused great excitement, but no panic occurred.

The injuries of C. H. Taylor and Barbara Shaw will probably be fatal. The others will recover.

An Actor Discovers His Helpless Wife.

Alfred Manasse, an actor, travelling under the name of Billy Lester with Tony Pastor, and one of the "Big Four," has been arrested in Philadelphia on the charge of deserting his wife Viola, an actress, known as Viola Clifton. The woman has lately been deprived of the use of her limbs and appeared on crutches. Recently she was given a benefit by Louis Montague and $50 was raised, but, through some slip, the girl never received the money. Viola Clifton has frequently appeared in this city with variety combinations, and her "skipping rope" dance was always considered a feature of the performance. Her recent husband is also known here.

No Whisky!

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whisky, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whisky and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. Rice, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Chas. G. Nov. 1, 1881. Gents—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and it applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, nervous rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedily and permanent relief.
