OBITUARY.

Beath of Henry Reigart. Henry Reigart, son of the late Henry M. Reigart, formerly postmaster of Lancaster, died at Maquoketa, Jackson county, Iowa, aged about 56 years. Mr. Reigart was a native of Lancaster county. After receiving a good education he went into the mercantile business, first as a clerk in Hager's store, afterwards as manager at the Colebrook iron works, and still later, about 1856, went West and settled at Maquoketa, where he since resided. He first opened a large mercantile house in that city and did a very extensive business. Afterwards he went into the banking business, and engaged largely in real estate transactions, having a single tract of 2,500 acres, all under fence and a good part of it under cultivation. Ite had acquired a very considerable fortune and was a man of great force of character, and possessed much political influence, though always declined political office. He unmarried but leaves two brothers, Adam and Christian, two sisters. Mrs. Dr. Fahnestock and Miss Kate Reigart, of this city One of his sisters, Mrs. Abraham Broneman, and two brothers, Emanuel and John II. Reigart, are dead. He has many other relatives and a very wide circle of friends in in this city.

Luscious Fruit. The editorial staff of the INTELLIGENCER acknowledge a kind remembrance from Mrs. Henry M. Geiter, wife of the veteran of the composing room, in the shape of a big basket of peaches, grown in her own garden. They came at an opportune juncture to sweeten the labors of the morning, and were attacked by the mature local and his sportive coadjutors with a gusto that left no doubt of their appreciation of the gift. They were of delicious flavor, and after a thorough discussion of the merits of the fruit, a unanimous vote

INDEPENDENT REPUBLICANS. A Candidate to be Nominated Against John
