THURSDAY EVENING, SEPT. 28, 1882 PAYING MER MITE TO COOPER. at the Headquarters When a Girl Came With Two Dollars.

Philadelphia Times. At the Regular Republican headquar ters yesterday afternoon, while Secretary Taggert and half a score of clerks were busy at desks and tables in the main room, a young girl, about eighteen years of age, of prepossessing appearance and plainly but neatly dressed, came in. Hesitating as she entered the room, in evident embarrassment she asked: "Is Senator Thomas V. Cooper in ?"

"He is not," said Secretary Taggert, rising and walking forward. "Can I do anything for you?"

"I've brought my money," said the girl, drawing out a well-worn old pocket-book and taking out two one-dollar bills. Secretary Taggart was at once himself again. Jumping into his chair at the table again, he asked the girl to sit down, while he opened a drawer and took out a

In Senator Cooper's private room at the same time loud voices and boisterous laughter were heard, and there came out and filled the main room a thick cloud of smoke from fragrant Havana cigars. The smokers were Senator Cameron, who a few days ago, according to an enthusiastic and admiring Washington letter-writer, sat before a safe of the Guarantee Life and Trust company and clipped coupons for four hours, Secretary Quay and a few boon companions. They were telling funny stories and laughing over them.

Secretary Taggart, having opened his book, looked across the table at the young woman, who sat abashed, evidently unused at such scenes. "How much is it?" asked the secre

"Two dollars," said the girl, tremu She handed the money over, the secretary dropped it into a drawer, turned the key, entered the sum on a book and began

Mr. Taggart wrote it out and handed her the receipt.

"I suppose," said the girl, rising as she folded the receipt, "every little

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Taggart, mechan "And it doesn't make any differencemy giving it to you instead of Mr. Cooper,

"Good-bye," said Mr. Taggart, turn ing to his work.

Making Wine From Grapes. The grapes should be picked when per fectly ripe, on a dry day, all the unripe, decayed and imperfect berries being discarded. Crush them in a small press, (not too severely,) if one is at hand, or it can be done by the hand in a large tub; let the mass remain in this state for forty-eight hours; then strain off carefully; add two quarts of soft water to one of juice and one pound of best yellow sugar or " rock candy;" put in a thoroughly-cleansed keg or barrel, so that the vessel is full, leaving off the bung in order that fermentation may have vent and throw out the impurities; fill up with reserved juice to keep the vessel always full. At the end of two or three weeks, when the first fermentation is over, rack off, crawing the liquor carefully off by keeping it constantly running, and removing it into a scalded-out tub; then scaldout the vessel again and return the liquor, leaving the bung rather loosely in its place, for the second fer mentation. When that is over bung up tightly and let it remain for at least six months, or altogether, using as it may be wanted. It is better if racked off at the eud of six months or longer and put into from two to five gallon demijohns, though the usual bottles will answer well. Unless you want excellent vinegar, be sure too add the sugar or rock candy.

"Keystone" Grade. Splendid Record " Although Subject to Rough Bicycle Riding." LANCASTER, Sept. 13, 1882. To Lancaster Watch Co.

To Lancaster Watch Co.

Gentlemen: Several months ago I bought a "Keystone" Watch. No. 24.887. After getting it to close adjustment. I compared it regularly with the time delivered by the W. U. Tel. Co. daily from the Clock in the National Observatory at Washington. At the end of Twenty Days its variation was only one-half second, by chronometer, from mean time of the Washington Observatory—which clock is never allowed to vary more than one-tenth of a second from absolute accuracy. At that time I unfortunately neglected to wind it, and thus lost continuous record. It has since been doing excellent work, atthough subjected daily to considerable rough bic cle riding, which is a severe test of its time-keeping and running qualities. This is not a "Special" Watch, but was taken directly from stock, as sent from the factory.

Yours truly,

C. B. LONGENECKER. Overcoatings |
