A ROMANCE FROM A DISTANT CLIME.

ARABI'S LOVE STORY.

How Guila, the Jewess, Won the Love and Nerved the Arm of the Rebel-The Latter Day Cleopatra.

Cairo Letter to New York Herald. Arabi Pacha was a soldier in high favor under Ismail. Noble and in the morning of life, ardent in his work and brave in the service, he was always near the heart of the khedive. On the rein no hand so firm as his, in the battle a eye so steadfast, with the sword no one so sure. So swift was he to do his master's will, so eager to do his duty, that soon he arose to honorable place. His ambition was restless, and wealth and fame he coveted. There were years that passed, and the young bey did not marry a wife. The soldiers railed him on not fearing any enemy, but still being afraid of woman. He took it good-naturedly, and in some way the impression got out that there was fast, with the sword no one so sure. So way the impression got out that there was in far off Spain one whom he had loved. Ismail—himself the lover of many women, grown old and gray with women and wine—he heard the voice of those who railed, and he found the young man's failing. He saw that the soldier needed a home to make him happy and he sought a wife for him. Among the women in the khedive's hatem was one not long there—a fair woman whom the eye of Ismail had first seen in the the atre El-Sonaat. Our ruler's word was law, and he had taken her to himselt. She went unwillingly, and though the time passed she had many excuses for not accepting his embraces. Though young and strangely beautiful there were other fair women, and while she pretended sickness the khedive found others to love. Upon her he thought when he willed that Arabi should put aside his that Arabi should put aside his prejudices and marry. Our customs permitted that he should give her to his favorite as his wife, and so he did. She had seen the young bey from the lattice, she had waved unknown kisses to the splendid soldier and she was glad to know that he was to be her husband. It was love, O, Effendi! and love in the land of Cleopatra is not like that of your Western country. As for Arabi, he received the khedive's word with indifference at first, but when there came to him many stories of the beauty of his promised bride stories of the beauty of his promised bride the thought of the splendor of that beauty awoke his love. Nay, Effendi, I never menting on animals, and ether being adsaw her, but from my sisters I know her a ministered to the man and rabbit, both tall and graceful woman, eyes full of love were soon under the influence of dria, was with a friend in a French coupe, and lazily lounging in a gilded brougham was Prince Hestan, uncle of the khedive. But more noticeable than the khedive. But more noticeable than the beautiful Arabian bays before the premier's carriage was a pair of grays, pure Afghans, the finest shaped horses that I ever saw. We first met them opposite the Garden Toutbone, and so attractive were they that I did not think to notice the carriage. A little later in the avenue of Sont they passed us, and as the open carriage was driven slowly by I had a view of the occupant. As if it were by instinct we knew that the lady was the wife of Arabi. Although an embroidered tulle veil shrowded the lower part of her face one could read everything of character in the lustrous dark eyes that looked into ours. I watched the woman as she rolled along the boulevard, saw her graceful recognition of other ladies of the harem and the fierceness that came into her eyes as foreigners met her. A word to the sais or driver seemed to occasionly escape her lips, but not once did she change her position. As we passed that portion of the boulevard which commands a view of the summer palace of the khedive we came upon two carriages that had stopped that the occupants (English ladies) might en-joy the scene that spread before them. Guila's brougham was but a little in advance of ours, and from my seat I could see her speak to the sais. Instantly at her order the grays wheeled to the side, and, without warning, the heavy brougham ing carriages, and the two ladies who sat there were overturned. Almost miraculously no injury was done the ladies, and as they crept out from under the broken carriage for the first time I noticed that D. B. HOSTETTER & SON, carriage for the first time I house by. the Egyptian lady's carriage stood by. "I am Guila, the wife of Arabi Pacha," I melo. was astonished to hear her say in a melodious voice and with the utmost nonchalence. And then she was driven on. Cali such an action incarnate deviltry and you will not need to use truer words. It was an intentional indignity shown a Christian, a hateful reminder of the fact that the wife of a minister of the khedive despises Europeans of her sex. Such an act by a woman gives her portrait, and other more cruel deeds are laid at Guila's door.

Nothing in the Story that He is to Succeed Secretary Folger—Current Goselp. William E. Chandler disposes of the rumor that he is to succeed Judge Folger as secretary of the treasury by flatly denying its truth.

Mr. Chandler says: "There is nothing whatever in the story. If Secretary Folger should leave the department it is not at all probable that I should succeed him. Moreover, I do not believe that the president has ever considered the question of a

There is no doubt, however, that the New York Stalwart politicians are bringing their influence to bear upon the secretary to induce him to resign. It has been represented to him that he will be a much stronger candidate before the people if his connection with the administration is severed. A well informed Republican said : "It is asserted that the president has several times tendered Judge Folger high positions in the judicial and diplomatic service, and pressed him to accept him. But it may be taken for wholly untrue, as the secretary would be prompt to resign on the slightest intimation, however, delicately slightest intimation, however delicately conveyed, that his portfolio was desired for another."

A RAKE SURGICAL OPERATION.

An unusual and interesting operation was performed in the public eye clinic that is held every Friday from 1 till 2 o'clock in the amphitheatre of Jefferson o'clock in the amphitheatre of Jefferson college hospital, in Philadelphia. The operation was performed by Dr. W. L. Little, chief of the eye clinic, and will no dcubt turn out entirely successful. It consisted in transplanting the conjunctiva (which is the layer of tissue forming the inner lining of the lids and reflected on to the eyeball) of a rabbit into the eye of a man who was brought into the hospital a man who was brought into the hospital a couple of months ago, suffering from a burn that had entirely destroyed his sight. He is a young Irishman named Michael Mc-Mullin, twenty-eight years old, just over from the old country a few months, a strong, well formed healthy fellow, but as helpless as a child in his blindness. Shortly after coming over he secured employ-ment in a large chemical works, and while ment in a large chemical works, and while handling strong sulphuric acid the fluid splashed up over his face and head, burning him terribly and suddenly and completely blinding him. The right eye was destroyed entirely, and the left one so injured that anchylo-blepharon resulted,

Arabi has other wives, others in his harem, but Giula is his all. In all Egypt there is no prouder woman, and Egypt there is no prouder woman, and Egypt there is no prouder woman, and Egypt can be a supprised by Dr. Ad.
