TWO GREAT SPEECHES.

RANDALL AND WALLACE ON THE STUMP.

The Democratic Chieftains Administer a Severe Castigation to the Republican Robbers, in Philadelphia.

Industrial Art hall, Philadelphia, was the scene, Saturday night, of the opening rally of the Democracy. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Young Men's Democratic association. Long before the hour for opening the meeting people began to gather, and at 8 o'clock the large hall was filled in every part. The audience was thoroughly representative in its character, and compared favorably with the inaugural meetings of the Independent and Regular Republicans.

The first outburst of an enthusiasm which kept bubbling up without check all night long, marked the entrance of Messrs. Randall and Wallace to the hall. Hats were thrown aloft, canes kept up a vigorous tattoo on the floor, and discordant yells added their deafening volume to the general hubbub. Mr. Randall ascended the platform looking like a bright, youthful dominie, with his clean shaven face, his white necktie, and his suit of evening black. His whilom political foe was at his elbow, grave and dignified, but looking a quiet pleasure as he surveyed the vast throng of shouting men. On the stage were massed many local Democratic lights, with out-of-town celebrities. Conspicuous among them was the gray heads of ex-Gov. Curtin, who were vociferously cheered as he mounted the platform, and Robert E. Monaghan, of Chester. There were also Chairman Hensel, William Wurtz Dundas, Senator Kennedy, Commissioner Krumbhaar, Col. L. P. Ashmead, Clement B. Wainwright, William M. Meigs, J. M. Shellenberger, of Doylestown; General Wm. McCandless, of the famous Pennsylvaia reserves, Henry Budd, jr., L. C. Wagner and H. J. Myers, of Cumberland; J. H. Zeamer, of the Carlisle Volunteer; Senator James Gay Gordon, ex-Assistant District Attorney John R. Read, Samuel G. Thompson, S. Davis Page, Col. George A. Woodward, J. R. Wainwright, William Dayton, H. R. Freeman and J. Rinaldo Sauk.

Mr. Randall Introduced.

John Cadwallader, the president of the Young Men's Democratic association, called to order in a crisp speech, which referred to Pattison as "our gallant young fellow townsman," and without ceremony introduced "the model representative, inflexible patriot, Philadelphia's noble son, Samuel J. Randall." It was some time before the crowd permitted the rotund ex-speaker to be heard, and then he was compelled to cut short the three cheers which some excitable individual in front insisted on proposing. He said:

When I was invited to be here to-night and address my fellow-citizens under the auspices of the Young Men's Democratic association, I accepted with alacrity. I have not been unobservant of the marked influence upon the politics of your city that this intelligent body of young men have wielded. I was more pleased yet when I was informed that I was to speak here to-night in company with the honorable gentleman from Clearfield[cheers]—pleased personally, but gratified beyond measure politically. There were persons who did not believe that harmony existed as we had represented; but our presence here to-night gives assurance that the Democratic brotherhood of Pennsylvania is united for victory, and that that gentleman and I will enjoy it together. [Loud applause.] Mr. Pattison, if elected—about which I think there is no longer any doubt [cheers]—will bring to the discharge of his official duties the same characteristics that distinguished Mr. Tilden [applause] in the administration of the affairs of New York. We don't take Mr. Pattison upon a mere sentiment; we take him because we believe he will bring to the governorship the same indomitable will, the same characteristics which he has shown as controller and that the same results will follow to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A few evenings ago a distinguished associate of mine, Judge Kelley, declared that he was in favor of the repeal of all internal taxation, and that he was determined to bring about that result. That result could have been brought about in the last session of Congress had Judge Kelley possessed the courage of his convictions. After the committee on ways and means had relieved the people of $70,000,000 of that tax he yielded to the dictates of his party caucus, against his own will, as he himself admitted, and voted against the reduction. Business men of Philadelphia and of Pennsylvania need have no fear that the Democratic party, when it comes into control of the commonwealth and of the nation, will interfere in the least degree with the business interests of the country. The advent of the Democratic party to power will bring about thorough rigid economy and a reduction of taxation, a return of that prosperity which Providence in His divine goodness has showered upon our country. The Republicans say we will bring about legislation in the interest of free trade. There is no danger whatever of that when we have taken off internal taxes, which are vexatious and meddlesome, and only submitted to as a dire necessity. All we ask of Mr. Pattison when he shall become governor is that he stop the expenditure of public money in the commonwealth as he has put an end to extravagance in the city. I know the man, and I know there will not be at the end of his administration a single Independent Republican who will not say, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Ex-Senator Wallace's Address.

A lively air was rendered by the band, after which ex-Speaker Randall introduced "Pennsylvania's distinguished son, Wm. A. Wallace." The ex senator was greeted with applause, and when it subsided Mr. Randall proposed three cheers for the speaker, which were given with a will. Mr. Wallace bowed his acknowledgments and began his remarks without any introduction. His opening words were:

"Pennsylvania degraded, plundered, disgraced? Her lawmaking power a reproach; her chief city a sink of official corruption. Sad the statement; sadder still the fact. Who hears me will deny it? What is the remedy? Shall we salve the wounds her forsworn sons have given her, or, with aching hearts, probe them to the quick, and, with steady hand and keen surgery, cut the gangrene from the body politic?

"Let who will cry peace! peace! within the ranks whence these wounds have come. Ours the task, and ours the duty, to boldly tell the truth to a disgraced and plundered people. If in a calm retrospect of uncontrolled official power within the state for two decades there be not found cause enough to hurl the dictators and the thieves from power, then has public virtue fled and our 'last estate is worse than the first.'"

The speaker referred to the men who by the power of money had controlled the state, enacted its laws and pre determined its policy for fifteen years. He quoted the words of Judge Pearson in passing the sentence on five men in 1880 who had been indicted on the charge of bribing members of the Legislature.

"The name of Pennsylvania legislator," Mr. Wallace continued, "has become a by-word. Contempt and contumely, instead of respect and approval, pour upon us from our sister states. Are you proud of this? Would you perpetuate it? Corrupting and debasing influences pervade the atmosphere of the state capital. The closing hours of each session of the Legislature for years have been full of proofs of the wealth, the power and the corrupt purposes of those who have dominated and controlled the Republican organization."

The speaker believed that this state of affairs could not exist long under the calm scrutiny of a capable and honest governor, who would exercise his veto power. "At the door of the Republican party," he said, "lie the charges, often publicly made, that high state officials bargained the extreme penalty of the law with organized murderers in exchange for aid to its ticket in state elections; that again and again it has bought and paid for petty political leaders in outside organizations to wield their influence in the same cause; that in this city it has corrupted the ballot, organized repeating, purchased perjury and false counting, and pardoned criminals convicted of grave offenses against the election laws; that the expenses of the state government are larger now than ever before, and are increasing; that this vast increase is applied to the maintenance of a horde of unnecessary hirelings about the legislative and executive departments; that more than a quarter of a million was lost to the state in its transmission from the general government; and that the power of a mighty organization has been concentrated in an oligarchy, and is so wielded by it that the highest officials of the commonwealth are compelled to yield it obedience when it demands executive clemency for criminals convicted of the most heinous crime that can sap the vitals of a free state.

"Who are those men whom Gen. Beaver in his speech of Saturday last styles a 'considerable body of men claiming to be Republicans' who bear 'the ensign of revolt, and whose tactics are those of rebellion.' What is their purpose and what the logic of their action? Is their sole purpose the dethronal of a dictator? Do they seek only official place? Are the 'tactics of rebellion' and 'the standard of revolt' used for personal ends and aims? If this were true, and pure government and honest administration were behind the men against whom they revolt, that which now seems to be likely to be a tragedy would speedily degenerate into a farce! The logic of their action is vigorous protest against the men who govern as well as the methods that prevail in the Republican party in Pennsylvania. It is against both, or it is the veriest sham of the century. They cannot separate the dictator from his methods, nor the oligarchy from its demoralizing processes. Both must go before honest and cheap government can come to the people.

"Gen. Beaver proclaims the fact that 'the Democratic organization is the open and declared enemy of Republicanism.' We are the foes of the policy and practices, the men and the measures of the Republicanism of 1882. Senator Stewart, too, declares that 'he indulges in no delusive hope of reform through Democratic instrumentality,' and that with us he 'has neither sympathy nor confidence nor part nor lot.' Judging from their published speeches, both gentlemen live in the past, for they apostrophize with glowing words what they are pleased to style the glorious record of the Republican organization. Like the character in fiction, they strut and fume and prate of their ancestors and their glory, and in their dress parade forget the squalid poverty, the hideous makeshifts, the vile practices of the present life. It is an axiom in statecraft that they who create abuses can never reform them; their correction can only come from a change in official rule. The purification of a great state is, and always must be, the work of the people, and party organizations are to come and go but as the means to that end."

Senator Wallace then traced the history of Pennsylvania during the past forty years to demonstrate that the only remedy is a change. "Economy in expenditure," he continued, "rigid official accountability and purity in administration have been the characteristics of the official life of Robert E. Pattison, our candidate for governor, and we hope to carry him and these into the government of the state. No man owns him; none can from him coerce a pardon or curb the veto in its just exercise. He and the party whose candidate he is believed in the reduction of expenses to the lowest point at which good government can be secured and our charities and credit cared for, and they denounce the corrupt use of money in elections. Even now the note of preparation for a carnival of purchase may be heard throughout the state."

He spoke of the corrupt use of money in Indiana during the presidential campaign. Much of this money was raised in Pennsylvania. He believed that the same tactics will be pursued in this state. In concluding Mr. Wallace said: "The Democracy of Pennsylvania have their own faith and tenets, aims and purposes in behalf of which they have shown some staying qualities in the past, and they are certain to stand by them now. It hath its own leaders to stand by them now. It hath its own leaders to whom it looks with confidence; its simple yet compact organization; its harmonious, united and defiant columns. It strikes now with the ponderous blow of 450,000 men for honest and cheap government. Its bugles ring out the advance against a divided enemy, against corrupted Legislatures, dictated nominations, purchased pardon boards and the venal use of money. Its highest aim, its noblest purpose, is the purification of the state, the bounteous mother of us all."

The druggist who hesitates now is lost for the winter. He should sling together some sweet oil and liquorice and bring out his cough cure at once. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup does not pay him enough profit.

Eastern and Western Proverbs.

There is an Eastern proverb which says: "Only two creatures can surmount the pyramids: the eagle and the snail." There is a Western proverb that says: "Hunt's Remedy partakes of the nature of both eagle and snail." It is bold in its flight like the eagle; it is persistent in its purpose, like the snail." And thus Hunt's Remedy easily surmounts the pyramid of kidney and liver disease. It even attacks Bright's Disease, and hesitates at no form of kidney disease, however aggravated. The story of the cures which it has effected would make a large volume. Remember it is the one great liver and kidney medicine of the age. o4-lwdeod&w

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

PLAIN TRUTHS.

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved his Child.

Feb. 12, 1880.

Gents:—Upon the recommendation of [illegible] Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, she began to mend; and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonic [illegible] required" and when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, respected [illegible] good tonic, take it."
