WHEAT STOCKS,
$10, $20, $50, $100.

Those desiring to make money on small and medium investments in grain, provisions and stock speculations, can do so by operating on wheat stocks. From May 1, 1881, to the present date, an investment of $100 to $1,000 cash profits have been realized and paid to investors amounting to several times the original investment, still leaving the original investment making money or payable on demand. Explanatory circulars and statements of fund went free. We want responsible agents who will report the crops and introduce the plan. Address:

CAMERON AND BLAINE.

ALL WILL THAT WONT ERADICATE.

Why the Maine Statesman Will not Stamp for Beaver--Republican Contributor.

The contributions in aid of the Regular Republican state ticket do not come in with that rapidity and volume desired. At the recent meeting of the finance committee of the state committee the ways and means to raise the wind were suggested. The finance committee, however, in a meeting of the 10th inst. decided to give a little out from the meeting regarding a little spit in which Col. Quay and Senator Cameron said to have figured prominently. As the story goes, it is said that Quay suggested Blaine to be induced to come here and speak for Beaver. This was opposed by Mr. Cameron, who declared that he was not wanted, and that the campaign should be run on the cash principle; and to show his sincerity it is said the senator gave Chairman Cooper his check for $20,000. The story is denied by the gentleman who was present, but prominent man in the party said that Mr. Cameron had made a contribution of $30,000 to the Beaver campaign fund, and that this was only a supplemental gift to $10,000 handed over upon a previous occasion. Mr. Cameron and Blaine are concerned, a confidential friend of the latter, who happened to be in the city yesterday, said: "There is a bad feeling between the men, and it dates back to before the year 1875. Mr. Blaine does not consult Mr. Cameron upon any matter, and merely speaks or nods to him when they meet. Blaine is of a forgiving nature, and never fosters any animosity. His wife says his trouble is excessive amiability. He will not do anything to help Cameron, and if he should come here, which I doubt very much, from what he told me a few days ago, he would not speak for Beaver. As a friend of Blaine's, I do not think Cameron ever said what is attributed to him. But the men are bitter enemies and you can rest assured that there is no love between them. It dated before the Chicago convention, and the bad feeling can never be eradicated."

Another gentleman who came up from Washington a short time ago with Mr. Blaine, and conversed with him on the way, said last evening that the secretary had declared his intention not to speak in Pennsylvania at all, as he did not desire to aid Mr. Cameron in any fight he may have, and he did not care to incur the animosities of any of the tractees in the Keystone state. Mr. Blaine did not wish to speak for General Beaver, whom he thought had aided materially in defeating his nomination at Chicago. This latter, the gentleman thought, was the milk in the cocoanut.

Content upon Blaine's taking part in this campaign, a number of those who have heretofore contributed to the fund for "necessary expenses" have expressed themselves. It was learned that a large number of the manufacturers who have heretofore contributed have refused to pay over any money for Beaver's success, preferring to use whatever they had for the election of the congressional candidates. Some of them have handed over sums ranging from $100 to $500, while the heaviest individual gift is said to be $1,000, and that comes from a large saw and lumber manufacturing establishment. The hat which has been passed around; but, like the old church deacon, those who were clipped in looked at the contents first to see if a $10 bill could be changed. In the western part of the state the same is different. Oliver has given $2,500 and others have come down handsomely, but in Philadelphia there are padlocks upon the pocket-books of those who have for years past "come down with the dust."

IMPORTANT TO THOSE ENGAGED.
The Right to Convey Property to the Prejudice of a Financee.

Persons "engaged" to be married have need to be circumspect about the disposal of their property. Judge Thayer tells them this very thing in a decision rendered by him on Saturday in the case of the widow of James Baird against certain trustees under a deed executed by her late husband. The particulars of the suit are so interesting and the result so important that we advise a perusal of them, especially by single persons of both sexes of a marriageable age. The brief of the story is this. The late James Baird (of Frankfort, Twenty-third ward, we believe) inherited a large property from his father, James, was a widower with children. Both he and his wife, his inheritance of his father's property, he courted the lady who is now his widow; became formally "engaged" to her September 23, 1878, and married her on the 12th of November following. A few days before the "engagement" but after he had declared to several friends his intention to marry this lady, he conveyed all his real estate, to the value of about seventy thousand dollars, to certain trustees in trust for himself during life, and then to his children by his first wife. This trust arrangement appears to have been suggested by the trustees as a friendly act, to prevent him from squandering his inheritance, rather than from any purpose to defraud the affianced bride of the rights in the property that would accrue to her upon her marriage. Mr. Baird died in about four months after the marriage, and upon his decease, his widow found that her right to one-third interest for life in the real estate had been conveyed away by this trust deed. She was thus left without the support she had depended upon. She was advised that such conveyance of the property by Mr. Baird at a time when he had declared his purpose to marry her, and within a few days before their formal engagement, was unlawful, and Judge Thayer's decision has confirmed this view of the law, by a decree which restores to the widow her rights as widow. This is not new law, as Judge Thayer shows, though he perhaps carries the principle of equity upon which it is founded a little further than it has been applied heretofore, inasmuch as the conveyance, now declared to be void, was made not only before engagement and marriage, but actually a "few days" prior to the formal engagement even. But for this he has firm ground in the equities of the relations existing at the time of the conveyance. It is the equities that are well worth reading and impressing upon the memory, for, as already said, persons engaged to be married, or about to be engaged--when, as Judge Thayer puts it, engagement is "imminent"--must be with regard to the disposal of their property very circumspect; and it is to be observed that the "engaged" woman cannot convey away her property to the prejudice of her affianced, any more than the "engaged" man.

THE SPORTING SEASON.

In Pennsylvania ruffed grouse shooting opened on October 1 and does not close until January 1. The same dates also govern the killing of the pinheaded grouse and those sections where recently those prairie hunting birds have been introduced. Deer can also be shot from Oct. 1 to December 1, and quail and wild turkeys from the 15th instant until January 1; but rabbits are not legal prey until November 1, and after that date may be killed on to January 1. Woodcock, however, are in season from July 4 to Jan. 1; squirrels from September 1 to the end of the year, and wild fowl from September 1 to the 15th of next May. The law which regulates the shooting in Pike county differs slightly from the general law, and reads as follows: "Deer may be shot from October 1 to December 1, but in no event shall they be killed in the water. Wood ducks from October 1 to January 1; rabbits from October 15 to December 15; squirrels from September 1 to December 15; woodcock until December 15; quail from October 15 to December 1, and ruffed grouse from September 15 to December 15." The penalty for infringement of these laws ranges from $25 for each bird or species of ground game shot out of season."

TARIFF AND TOOTHACHE.

Another Attempt to Cheat Workmen.

Pittsburgh Post.

We have been furnished by Democratic workmen with samples of cards distributed among the mill workers on the South Side, the last few days, by agents of their Stalwart employers, declaring protection to be "the crowning issue in Pennsylvania's great campaign of 1882," and of course appealing to the workmen to vote for Beaver and save protection. The cards were very mild in comparison with those distributed in 1880, endorsed by leading manufacturers, which promised that "Garfield's election meant steady work and better wages," and "Hancock's election meant idleness, pauper wages and the poor law."

Why was not the promise made of "better wages and steady work" if Beaver and Hancock should succeed this fall, and "idleness, pauper wages and the poor law" threatened if Pattison should be elected? These cards are milk-and-water compared with the building placards of the Hancock campaign. They merely repeat the silly tariff twaddle of the Cameron-Beaver newspapers and stumpers, which nobody believes or cares to dignify by denial or discussion.

What we can give a correct guess as to the absence of promises of "better wages" and those threats of the poor house. The workmen of the mills and mines of Western Pennsylvania have just emerged from a four months' costly strike and idleness, which cost them their hard-earned savings, in an unavailing effort to obtain the "better wages" promised them as sure to follow Republican success in 1880. There are limits to human cheek and the power of humping, and with the recollection of a strike so fresh in the minds and pockets of the workmen their Stalwart employers probably hesitated before making the same appeals and threats by which men were cheated of their votes two years ago.

Foot me once, it is your fault. Foot me twice, it is mine!

If the purpose of this campaign of cards is to coerce and frighten the workmen into voting for Cameron's man, Beaver, a much better plan would be to cause Cameron's belated tariff and cooking speech to be printed. That would mislead to the tariff. As Chairman Cooper and the Stalwart manufacturers are backward about furnishing the workmen this bit of Senator Don's eloquence, we annex it in its entirety, as taken down by the reporter of the Philadelphia Telegraph.

Said Senator Cameron to the conference of business men and manufacturers at the Continental hotel, Philadelphia:

"The success of the great agricultural, mining and commercial interests of the state. I have fought for a protective tariff in the Senate, as my father fought before me, but if those who have heretofore supported the Republican ticket want to stab me, I am ready to receive the blow, and I will oppose every tariff in the Senate as heartily as I have upheld it. If you want to kill the party, we will go to hell together, and I don't care if this is repeated to the world."

To comment on this would be like gilding refined gold. A vote for Beaver is a vote for his author, for Tom Marshall, "glorious old Tom," never uttered a greater truth than that Beaver is the mere puppet--the marionette of Don Cameron.

An exchange says: "Man's average life is 43 years." Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will always live.

A Strange Inscription.

In a certain cemetery is a tomb with this inscription:

"This stone was raised by Sarah's lord, Not Sarah's virtues to record-- For they were well known to all the town-- It was raised to keep her name down."

We don't know what Sarah had, but we venture to say that if Sarah had had Hunt's Remedy, her "lord" would not have had the satisfaction of raising a monument to her. Diseases of the kidney, liver, and urinary organs tend to shorten life, and many a man who is in a fair way to have a monument in some cemetery within a year, would like Herkimb's old, new, and best of life by taking Hunt's Remedy.

"Do not grasp at the shadow and lose the substance." Kidney-Wort is able to convert iron from a shadow to a substance, and to convert a sufferer from kidney trouble who asked to try Kidney-Wort for a remedy, "If I try it, but it will be my last dose." It cured him and he recommends it to all. If you have disordered kidneys don't fail to try it.

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

PLAIN TRUTHS.

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

Brown's Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.
