Stops and Speeches at Mauch Chunk, Hazleton and Scranton.

Special Cor. of the Press. The Democratic candidate for governor yesterday made his first appearance before the people of Pennsylvania since his nomi nation last June. The time was a most auspicious one. The country Democracy are in high spirits over the defeat of the Republicans in Ohio, and the election of their ticket in that state gives them a promise of victory. Mr. l'attison's seclusion in his Philadelphia vilice since he became the Democratic standard bearer has sharpened the curiosity of his supporters to see and hear him, and everywhere he is greeted with a cordiality which soon merges into cuthusiasm. Thursday he travelled through a strong Democratic section of the state, a section in which heavy Democratic majorities are always rolled up, and where the party is strongly entrenched in local office. These people win a victory every year in their counties which strengthens them in their political faith, so that they are at least not dismayed by regular Republican victories in the state or nation, There are no more unrelenting and uzrepentant Democrats than those of Northampton, Lehigh, Carbon and Lower Luzerne, the men who greeted Robert E. Pattison with all the ardor of steadfast political followers. The day was unpleasant for outdoor gatherings, but large crowds were present wherever the train stopped and there was undoubted heartiness in the welcome of the people that testified to the regard which the masses of the Democratic party have for their leader, if it did not mean even more than that. I was struck with the confident feeling of the Democrats who gathered about Mr. Pattison and shook his hand. Accustomed to meet candidates for state offices who are put up only to be knocked down, these men, in their warm greetings, exhibited all the signs of confidence in word and manner which are indicative of purpose to win.

Friendly Salutations by the Way. "Here is the next governor," "How d'ye do governor," "you are going to Harrisburg, sure," "We are for you," and like expressions come from the lips of the most backward yeoman with fervor. Neither Mr. Seymour, in 1868, nor Mr. Greeley, in 1872, received any more cordial receptions than Mr. Pattison's in the Lehigh valley. Pattison's manner is cal-Lehigh valley. Pattison's manner is calculated to win friends. When he is re-ceiving the multitude he takes a man's hand, looks frankly into his face and greets him with a kindly expression. There is a great deal of dignity in his bearing, but nothing which repels even the most diffident new acquaintance. His books as dent new acquaintance. His looks and at home while undergoing the hand shakcomes from long practice and which only a few men like Mr. Blaine have ac-quired to perfection. When, however, the controller gets on his feet he is perfectly at home. He walks slowly out toward the crowd, pauses a moment with the air of a practiced speaker, while the crowd cheers, draws his tall form up to its full height, and looks squarely at his audience. Casting his eye full upon the crowd he waits an-Holds a place in the circles of

The Events of the Day. The events of the day can soon be enumerated. The train first stopped at Bethlehem, where a large crowd was assembled on the ample railroad platform, who began to call loudly for the next governor before the train stopped. Among the crowd was Colonel Klotz, member of Congress from the Eleventh district, and the leading Democrats of Northampton. Mr. Pattison responded by going to the rear of the car and bowing. Behind him stood Senator James Gay Gordon, ex-District Attorney John R. Read, General William W. H. Davis, General George R. Snowden, R. E. Wright, jr., of Allentown; William G. Summers, of Philadelphia ; Wm. H. O'Brien, of Philadelphia ; Secretary E. P. Kisner and Colonel W. H. Sowden, of Allentown. The call increased, and Mr. Pattison was compelled to alight from the car. He was introduced to a large number of people, and many came up voluntarily

This made the crowd cheer. While they were calling for a speech, the train moved off. The next stop was at Mauch Chunk. Here there was a very large crowd A committee, headed by Judge Harry Packer, entered the train, and after shaking hands with Mr. Pattison, and his friends escorted them to the car platform. Hon. Allen Craig introduced the candidate to the people. Among the crowd were leading Democrats like John Taylor, E. H. Rauch, Lafayette Lentz, C. Among those present were Hon. S. B. Price, of Upper Lehigh; Harry Sweeny, of Drifton; R. B. Fruit, John A. Gor-man and all the leading Democrats of Hazleton. Mr. Pattison was presented amid great applause and said :

"All true reform must spring from the people. Reformation cannot be expected from those in power who are the beneficiaries of the abuses desired to be eradi-cated. Reformation of public service re trenchment and reform are the absolute need of our present political system. Purity in government will be enforced by a proper conception by the people of their needs and a rigorous enforcement of their demands upon those in power. The virtue of a people will not long survive the virtue of the administration."

The Start for Scranton At 3:20 the train started for Scranton. stopping at Wilkesbarre to allow a committee of gentlemen from Scranton to enter the car, among them ex-Mayor Kune, Frank Thomson, ex Congressman Francis D. Collins and John Connolly. I few Wilkesbarro Democrats headed by Judge Stauley Woodward hurriedly shock hands with Mr. Pattision, and Robert A. Packer became one of the party.

The train arrived in Scranton on time, and Mr. Pattison and his friends were driven to the Wyoming house, where a reception was held. Hon. Lewis Cassidy here joined the Philadelphia party.

The meeting was one of the largest ever held in Scranton. There was little excitement about town; no fireworks, an entire absence of torchlights and marching bodies of men. The armory, a large building, was entirely filled, and it is es-building, was entirely filled, and it is estimated that 3,000 people were present, some of whom were ladies.

of the colonies. See how the objections made by our ancestors obtain against those now in authority. Wise and neces sary legislation has been demanded and refused. The people of Philadelphia requested of the lawmaking power the enactment of a municipal bill drafted after thorough deliberation by a careful commission; but while the attention of the Legislature was called to the necessities of nearly a million of people they permitted this want to go unrelieved and their wishes uncomplied with. The people suffer from these extravagances directly in their proper ty and callings. They are a direct tax upor those in the community least able to bear the burden and go to increase taxation and enlarge the amount of waste. At the close of Mr. Pattison's speech there was great cheering and applause. Lewis C. Cassidy, esq., followed with a strong speech. He denounced the methods of the Republicans, and told the Irishmer that 50,000 copies of a newspaper would be distributed among them with an abusive article on Mr. Pattison. He urged Irishmen not to allow themselves to be
