YOUTHFUL PRECOCITY.

THE QUEER ESCAPE OF AN HEIRESS

A Fifteen-Year-Old Niece of Gov. Foster Goes to See the World on Her Own to Write a Novel.

Miss Susie Pollard, of Cleveland, Ohio, now in Chicago, has baffled the threaddetectives in the country for two weeks. She is only fifteen years old, and is the daughter of a wealthy merchant of Cleveland. Being an only child, she has been allowed great liberty since her tenth birthday. Extremely precocious for her age, she attracted much attention by her evidences of talent; and her literary efforts notwithstanding their youth, were surprising. On Saturday, October 7, she disappeared from home. Her father and attendants searched for her in vain. As she was unusually attractive in person, and as she was known to have a considerable sum of money in her possession, it was feared that she had been deceived away or forcibly abducted. Acting upon the theory that the child had been kidnapped, Mr. Pollard conferred with the leading detective agency, and advertised extensively in the newspapers throughout the northwest, offering a reward of $2,000 for information as to her whereabouts. The days slipped by and there was no news of the missing heiress. On Thursday last the girl was discovered by a happy accident in Chicago. A chambermaid at the Palmer house picked up one of the city newspapers, and the first thing that struck her eye was a description of the missing girl. It tallied exactly with the appearance of Miss Gordon, who occupied room 461 in the hotel.

Miss Gordon had registered at the Palmer house on Tuesday, October 9, giving her address as New York. She was assigned to an apartment, but the fact that she was extremely young and was accompanied by no guardian made the authorities suspicious, and induced them to watch her closely. But, although persons were stationed to watch her room, they saw no one enter save Miss Gordon herself, and they concluded that however mysterious her mission might be, her conduct was certainly irreproachable. During her stay of two weeks she allowed no one to penetrate the mystery that surrounded her. On Thursday, when the hotel authorities contacted her with the published description of the missing Cleveland girl, she looked at the picture of innocence. When they addressed her as "Miss Susie Pollard" she said:

"Why, my hair is not brown and I have not blue eyes, and look at my dress, it is not the kind that is mentioned in it."

The hotel people beat a retreat, and telegraphed at once to Cleveland. In the meantime "Miss Gordon" gathered up her effects and prepared to depart. She gave it out that she intended to go West, and had engaged to join some friends, an adroit young man, who was to accompany her. When she applied for a ticket, however, she found that the hotel people had anticipated her action and instructed the ticket agent not to sell her one.

Mr. Pollard arrived in search of his runaway daughter Susie. He proceeded to the residence of Dr. Foster, where the girl was taken from the hotel yesterday. Mr. Pollard, on inquiring for the girl was told she had fainted. Whereupon he put up his hands and said it was the same old game. A long interview followed, the result of which was that Dr. Foster's daughter insisted that she should not take the girl away, and Dr. Foster said she should not remain longer in the house. At length Mr. Pollard said he desired to take his daughter home, but he did not wish to be belittled or dragged by the neck of the neck, and as he had to return home at 3:35 o'clock, he would not make a scene, but would see that the girl was cared for. He accordingly left the house and returned home.

In conversation with Mr. Pollard he said that he had done everything possible to save the girl, but he did not think he or any one could do so unless forcible restraint was put upon her. She was wilful in the extreme, and was especially visionary, he thought she was very smart in a literary way and was being up to writing a novel, and she thought it was necessary to have a romantic experience in order to do so. He supposed she was now bent upon that mission. The girl had never shown any signs of a desire to go astray, it is the general acceptance of the terms, but was in a groove that she could not get out of without serious difficulty if she remained in it any longer.

ST. BERNARD.

The Head House at the Famous Monastery. A letter to the Boston Journal says: The great curiosity at the monastery of the Mount St. Bernard is the organ. If the day is a little warm the brother who attends to visitors hesitates a bit before opening the door of the wooden house just outside the chief building. He first drives away the dogs, who come prowling about, sniffing the air suspiciously, and then he shuts into their room opposite the huge refectory. Then he marshals the little company of international tourists in line before the mysterious door, and opens the chamber of horrors. The keen mountain air rushes in, and presently you are conscious of a certain sickly, color—not strong enough to be repulsive, but eminently suggestive of death. Then, as you stand there peering with strained eyeballs into the darkness, you become vaguely conscious that a face is looking at you. You can't see it, but you feel it. It is the face of a ghost; a kind of corporeal presence divested of life, and yet so horribly life-like that you are almost afraid the bony and skinny frame to which it belongs will arise and stretch out its dreadful arms and drag you down into the depths which you so instinctively shun. The good brother does not say anything; he watches the effect of this curious spectacle upon you. Pretty soon you can discern that the face belongs to the body of a woman—and that this woman is clasping to her breast the form of a tiny babe. The mother is seated on the ground, and appears to be dazed by the light pouring down into her darksome habitation. But oh! the horror of her face! Here is death without decay; here, in this wondrous air, on this pass more than 8,000 feet above the sea level, putrefaction is unknown; and bodies found in the snows in winter—or after the white shroud has melted away from the bosom of Nature in the spring—are preserved entire so long as the monks care to keep them. The grimness of the spectacle is enhanced by the fact that nearly every body found is contorted, twisted, strained and knotted in fantastic shapes. Now and then one which bears all the appearance of tranquil sleep is brought in; but in most cases there are indications that man and woman, in their battle with Nature, fought hard and desperately, and refused to be overcome until every particle of force was exhausted. The brethren gather up the bodies with tender care and place them in the dead house in the usually vain hope that some relatives may come to recognize them.

Where is the father of the child which this strange spectral mother clasps in her arms? What was the history of the woman who had thus wandered in the wild winter from the Rhone valley toward the kinder and warmer Italian slopes? Perhaps her husband was with her—and perhaps his body now lies at the bottom of some precipice where even the "pious monks of Saint Bernard" cannot find him—or perhaps he is here, in the dead house; perhaps that prostrate body, seeming to grovel on the rocky floor, is his. The peasant rarely carries any paper with him to completely identify them, and sometimes the unfortunates found dead in the pass here led such wandering lives—going to Switzerland for harvest work in the summer, and to Italy when the winter nips them—that their passports even give a clue to their birthplaces or native villages.

IX-CADET WHITTAKER.

He Has Something to Say About the evils of Radical Rule.

Ex-Cadet J. C. Whittaker has just written a letter from Beaufort in the Charleston Yearly Courier, published in that paper Wednesday, in which, after declaring that he has "fopped" from one party to the other because he never believed to say, and declaring his love for his native South, he says, speaking of the negro:

"For more than twelve years he has been driven by a party lash, and made to vote and act against his own interest. No one denies that Radical rule has brought all the ills which have come alike to white and black in this section the last twelve or fifteen years. No one can deny that the region during that time was a region of plunder. How can the condition of the South be made better? I answer: By educating the masses; by educating men to act irrespective of party lines; by maintaining home rule; by burying old issues, and by showing the colors, men that his best friends can be found in the South when he ceases to act—as he now does without cause—against them. Southern wealth, Southern culture, Southern votes and Southern men—native born—must and will rule the South. There are many among the colored people who are tired of the party lash, and who will one day make a break. There are enough to lead and teach and speak. There must, ere long, be a change from the very foundation of our national government. This change must begin in the states. It must come in the South and be such that it will prove to all that friendly feelings can exist between the two races. No more Radicalism nothing, and, with the records of the advocates of Radicalism before me, I would like to see any conservative who I vote, write or speak to bring a return of Radical rule in the South."

"I move," said a delegate in a Virginia convention, "that our chairman take a dose of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, he is so hoarse that I cannot understand him. That gentleman had no doubt tried this wonderful medicine."

"Every truth has two sides; look at both sides of a question before you decide." Kidney-Wort challenges the closest scrutiny of its ingredients and its grand results. It has no harmful effects, and its medicinal properties to the best method is a remedy for the cure of constipation and disordered liver and kidneys. But those that have Kidney-Wort agree that it is by far the best medicine known. Its action is prompt, thorough and lasting.

With Diamond Dyes any lady can get as good results as the best practical dyer. Every dye warranted true to name and sample.

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

 health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Manfield, Ohio, Nov. 23, 1881. Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try BROWN'S IRON BITTERS; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the King of medicines. JOHN K. ALEXANDER.
