Clarion Democrat.

How He Appeared at the Great Meeting at Ciarion,

A word as to the personal appearance of the man. A tall, well knit frame, and of fine appearance. A long head and clearly cut features. His pictures do not do him justice. Keen, sharp, deep set black eyes with set jaws and heavy square chin. His expression is kindly and friendly, and when he takes you by the hand and you look up into that face you feel at once as though you had known him for years. Nature made no mistake, for every feature says " Here is a man; trust him, and he will not betray you." Honesty, firmness and decision are written on his face as plainly as though seared in letters with a hot iron. He talks like a presiding elder at a camp-meeting, with a voice as clear as a bugle, and can be heard squares away. There is no excitement in tone or manner, but a terrible earnestness that holds his hearers spellbound, and makes them believe in him, because he knows what he believes and says it in that manner. His words are well chosen, and his sentences clean cut English. Every word is heard distinctly and every word is listened for When a sentence is uttered in that firm, tearless and precise manner of his, his jaws close over it as much as to say, "True, true and it will not be taken back." If there is any Democrat who will vote for Pattison thinking he will run the administration of the state in the interests of the Democratic party or grant favors not authorized by law although by precedent, if such there be, he is greatly mistaken, and if expecting reward for political services, he had better vote at once for a machine candidate like Cameron's.

A Democrat that administers on office disbursing over $11,000,000 a year in the Republican city of Philadelphia in such a manner as to be re-elected by over thirteen thousand majority is a presidential year, when Gen. Garfield received twenty-seven thousand majority at the same election, is no ordinary man.

HUBBELL'S THUMBSCREWS.

A Suggestive Scene in the Office of the A Washington dispatch has the follow ing:

A middle aged man plainly dressed, and upon whose face trouble was heavily marked, called at the rooms of the Republican congressional committee yesterday afternoon and asked for Hubbell. That worthy was at the moment occupying a chair by the window. He turned upon hearing his name, and roticing the plain dress and forlorn face of his caller, said gruffly : "Well, what do you want?" "I would like to see Mr. Hubbell on a personal matter," the man replied, glancing at Secretary Henderson and an outsider, who was in the room. "There is nothing to be personal about state your business." Saying which, Hubbell added direct insult to the sting of

"Well," came the reluctant response, as from a pocket of the plain coat was drawn assessment circular No. 2, "I called in to the first dun of this kind from which I ever turned away, but I have paid $32 to my state association and it is simply impossible for me to pay any more.'

The pleader here paused, and Hubbell, jerking a backward ned toward him, blurted out succringly and more than halfincredulously: "Can't fetch it, ch?"

"No," was the sad reply; "I can't pay it. My salary is small and my expenses consume it. Debts are pressing upon me. I am in actual need of help. It is not a mattor of inclination with me but an impossibility. I cannot pay another asse sment. The speaker's voice was tremulous and pleaded pitcously in behalf of privations which pride restrained him from specify ing. His words fell upon dull ears. Hubbell sat the picture of indifference until, as if suddenly appreciating that there was one in the room who ought not to witness such an incident, he roused up and giving his caller an "I'll fix you when I get you alone " look, he said sharply : " You had better see me in the private office."
