MYERS & RATHFON.
A LARGE INCREASE OF TRADE.
To supply the demands of a greatly increased trade, we have manufactured, for this fall, a larger and better selected stock than ever shown by any clothing house in this city. In the present there seems to be a demand for a better grade of Ready-made Clothing than has been sold by retailers, and we have been busy all summer to meet this want.

GREEN AND BLUE CHECKED CASIMERES.....	$15 00
BROWN TWILLED WORSTEDS.....	16 00
BROWN MIXED CASIMERES.....	16 00
STEEL MIXED CASIMERES.....	16 00
SOLID BLACK WORSTEDS.....	16 00
GREEN AND BLUE DOTTED CHEVOTS.....	17 00
SOLID BLUE WORSTEDS.....	18 00

Every garment sold by us is manufactured by us and for our trade only. By this means we are enabled to put upon the market a better article, for less money, than can be had at most houses, where every garment is bought from Philadelphia and New York wholesale.

Oak Hall and the Bi-Centennial.
Our exhibit in the Trades Procession of the Bi-Centennial Celebration on October 25th will illustrate the great stock of men's and boys' clothing now ready in Oak Hall. Our preparations for the trade of this Autumn and Winter already reach One Million Dollars.

Our stock is in all respects the best we have ever offered, and we firmly believe has never been equaled in volume by any retail clothing house in America. Do not fail to visit Oak Hall. Look at the Clothing and Piece Goods, go through the workrooms and see how the vast place goes on. We have a hearty welcome for all, whether buyers or visitors. The tens of thousands of friends we have made in the country about Philadelphia during the last twenty-two years are, we are sure, more firmly our friends than ever before. We have gained their confidence by giving them the best dollar's worth of clothing to be had anywhere, and we offer a new pledge of fidelity in our low prices and elegant Autumn stock of this year's sales.

MRS. LANGTRY.
HOW SHE LOOKED ON HER ARRIVAL.
A Reporter Who is Exceedingly Satisfied With the Jersey Lily—Oscar Wilde's Remarkable Make-up.
New York Times.
A woman seldom has a leader ordered to go through than Mrs. Langtry had on her arrival in America. The steamship Arizona, that brought her across the ocean, bore down upon the coast at on Sunday night and left her way slowly up to quarantine, where daylight found her anchored. As much of daylight, that is, as could make its way through a nasty cold fog that almost hid the shores of the Narrows from view. Everything about the ship was wet with the fog, the decks slippery, and the storage passengers (there seemed to be a few thousand of them on board) were muffled up to the chins. At 6 o'clock on such a morning as this, Mrs. Langtry, the beauty of England, the Lily of Jersey, was expected to come out on deck before breakfast and let a party of American managers and reporters and actors see what they thought of her. That she came out bravely, and in five minutes convinced every body present that she deserved the reputation she has made, was perhaps as great a triumph as any she has made before the curtain. She kept the party waiting for no elaborate toilet. When she stepped out upon the harbor deck and bowed slightly to Manager Abbey she was as simple as a farmer's daughter and as graceful as a queen—if indeed queens may be taken for models of grace. If she saw that she had teeth like pearls and a complexion like new snow she gave no indication of it. Just as she might have walked into her breakfast room at home and said good morning to her husband and his friends she walked out on deck and spoke to her critics. There was nothing in the least theatrical about her. She shook hands cordially with everybody to whom she was introduced, and talked with them all. Not a word about a spoiled beauty nor like a potted actress, but like a very sensible and intelligent woman. Her navy blue dress was a marvel of plainness and neatness, and fitted her as closely as if it had been made of rubber. She wore no ornaments—not even a collar. If there were any faults to be found with her appearance or her manner they would have to be found by a woman; no man could find them.

Mrs. Langtry was dressed in a tight-fitting suit of navy blue cloth, the coat cut very much after the fashion of a gentleman's "swallow-tail." The upper part of the costume, indeed, was almost the counterpart of a gentleman's coat, except that at that part of it where a gentleman would display his shirt front were peculiar ornaments—gold buttons being much like the strings of a golden hair. Around the neck was a lemon-colored silk handkerchief, and the cuffs were also trimmed with a touch of gold braid. The skirt was relieved with narrow plaits of the same material as the dress. It just touched the ground behind, and was somewhat shorter in front. Two very small and shapely hands were incased in a pair of leather-colored kid gloves with long gauntlets, and the gloves looked somewhat, if the truth must be told, as if Mrs. Langtry had been trying to climb a tree. Her hair was dressed in a simple, unpretentious straight brimmed English straw hat, trimmed with brown and gold ribbon. Her shoes—well, the line must be drawn somewhere. At sea, her traveling companions said, she frequently wore a scarlet jacket and cap, with a dark blue veil drawn over her face, "and looked very pretty," a statement which could easily be believed. She wore no earrings, no breastpin, no rings. Her only bit of jewelry was a small silver pin, with which a narrow ribbon of dark blue silk was fastened around her waist. Her light brown hair covered the back of her neck, and her throat was exposed. Even a micro man could see that her complexion was as natural as everything else about her. "Oscar Wilde," indeed, could hardly have whitened it, and there were no blemishes to be concealed by cosmetics. She was quite white enough to be called a Lily, but it was a healthy white, without any suggestion of weakness. She is just about the right height for a woman (and every woman knows what this is, from her own height), and is neither spare nor plump. Her shoulders are somewhat high and this makes her look somewhat thinner than she is. Standing out in the fog before breakfast this man would have said she was 35, almost any woman that she was 30. A spectator looking for the prettiest woman in England, and seeing Mrs. Langtry, would perhaps be disappointed. That a hundred as pretty women could be found any pleasant afternoon in Fifth Avenue is not to be denied. But one of the hundred could come out among a crowd of strangers, under the trying circumstances in which Mrs. Langtry appeared, and carry herself with the same easy grace and perfect self-possession, she is to be envied.

After a few words with Manager Abbey, Mrs. Langtry fell into the hands of the reporters. They surrounded her, devoured her with their eyes, took mental notes of her dress and features, and asked her the usual run of questions—sentimental, idiotic, impertinent, irrelevant and unnecessary. She not only replied to them all good-naturedly, but took up the subjects they suggested, and continued them. When one zealous reporter, determined not to lose a point, asked her what she intended to do with all the money she had shown no sign of vexation; no, not even when he asked her whether she was not pretty much out of society since she had taken to acting.

Mr. Oscar Wilde, who called himself to the party. Mr. Wilde, as the able representative of the sunflower, was an attraction second only to the expected Lily. He was dressed as probably no grown man in this world was ever dressed before. His hat was of brown cloth, not less than six inches high; his coat was black velvet; his overcoat was of green cloth, heavily trimmed with fur; his trousers matched his hat; his tie was gaudy and his shirt collar very open, displaying a large expanse of manly chest. A pair of brown cloth gloves and several pimples on his chin completed his toilet. His flowing hair and the fur trimming of his coat were just of a shade, and they gave him the appearance of having his hair combed down one side of his head and up the other side.

Another Delay in Phipps' Case.
In court at Toronto, in the Phipps case, the original papers not being returned with the certiorari, the motion for the stay of the major from custody was over till Friday, when it is expected the case will be argued at length. It is understood that Phipps' counsel will at the same time take up a rule stating objections to the previous proceedings and calling on the prosecution to show cause why their clients should not be discharged. This will be served on counsel for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the case will come up for argument probably a week from Friday.

NOT FOR STEWART.
A Story that He Contemplates a Letter Indorsing the Independent Candidates.
There is a fear in Stalwart circles that Governor Hoyt, whose rupture with Senator Cameron is no longer a secret, will throw a bomb shell into their camp in the shape of a letter, in which he will arraign the "boss system" and advise Republicans to support John Stewart. The governor, neither by speech, interview, nor letter, has indorsed the nomination of Beaver nor given it a word of comfort, and hence the rumor that he means to define his position has sent a thrill of uneasiness about the entire Stalwart line. A prominent Republican, who did not care to come to the front by having his name exposed, said last night that when General McCartney, of Luzerne, who is a bosom friend of the governor, was in Philadelphia last week to speak for the Independents, he declared at the Union League club house, in the presence of half a dozen gentlemen, that "the governor would write a letter next week in favor of Stewart." It was also said yesterday that the Independents have information to the same effect, and are counting upon it as one of the last cards of the campaign.

Action and Reaction.
A few more glaring falsehoods like that of Chauncey F. Black's late "drunken delirium," will help him immensely in his race for the lieutenant governorship. Not that it would hurt him at all, if he were a Republican, but he is a Democrat, you know, and that makes the difference. Of course, such an unmanly, if not malignant, attack does not affect the moral or political character of any of the Republican candidates; but, the causeless utterance has nevertheless changed the determination of some voters, even in Lancaster county. No matter whether such a course in a voter is honorable and consistent or not; that has been the re-occurring effect; and the more the Democrats have need to fear now is, that the Republican party, recognizing its damaging effect upon their cause, may brand it as a Democratic canard, gotten up by themselves to help their candidate. Nothing will be left undone that is likely to gain a vote. As the election approaches the contest becomes more desperate, and the inventive genius of the contestants stimulated in their modes and manners of attack and defence. It behooves the Democracy to press steadily on ward, keeping neither to the right hand nor the left, but, at the same time, to be sure to keep their "top eye open." The absurdity of the assaults upon the character of the Democratic nominees will carry with them their own reputation. Time was when political writers and orators might proclaim that "Henry Clay killed Tecumseh," with an ignorant and illiterate following; but those times have passed away. A time is approaching when men and parties will be estimated by the principles they avow and honestly adhere to, rather than by the lies and calumnies, irresponsibly made, on the eve of an election; especially when these defamations are characterized by gross absurdities. The next thing in order will be to try to beat the Republican nominees, and to do this, it is necessary to be true to the principles of the party.

WALNUT LEAF HAIR RESTORER.
It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the hair from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color and produce a new growth of hair. It has fallen off, it does not in any manner effect the health, which substance, under the name of "Lettuce of silver" preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and G. N. SEEK health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?
You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.
How? By getting one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.
Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1881.
Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidney, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and an about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the King of medicine.
