SUGGESTIONS FOR MIBED GIRLS.

The Fact Recently Demonstrated Why Americans are the Poorest Served People in the World.

Our Continent.
"You Americans are the poorest-served people on the earth," remarked a foreigner to a lady in this city, who, admitting the fact, added: "It is because we are served by foreigners."
This paradox involves a question as alarming to the political economist as veracious to housekeepers: Why do American young women prefer the starvation wages of the shop to the liberal remuneration of domestic service?
The law of trade rules that we must seek abroad what cannot be obtained at home, and thus importation becomes the source of household help supplies. This, like most remedies, is a crude one and served but to augment the evil, for American girls, naturally averse to this field of labor, are confirmed in their aversion by knowing that to be a domestic means to be on a social plane with Biddy. The native-born girl, educated at our public schools, will not submit to the menial foreign "help," nor is it reasonable to expect her to do so—the new cloth makes the rent in our social fabric worse.

Admitting that there are many excellent foreign servant girls, there is no doubt Americans would be better served by their own people. Those who are nearest us should know our wants best and be readiest with their sympathy. To serve well one must bring sympathy and intelligence into the work. Mutual knowledge of each other is essential to mutual benefit, with out which there is no satisfactory household service. While the subservience of the foreign young woman may be pleasing to supercilious and shallow mistresses, it is a poor substitute for faithful and intelligent work.

The day is past for ridiculing the pride of the American girl who prefers her crust and thin tea to the well-spread servants' table, and they who so freely arraign her for "false pride" should reflect that what is false is never strong. Hunger is a poor humiliator; but since it cannot convince the pale girl at her needle or in the shop of the folly of semi-starvation, is it not time for ladies who employ domestics to recognize the fact that life, even for the poorest girl, is more than meat? The "help" question is not only a question of trade but of humanity as well, and not until women act upon this fact will there be any amelioration of the present difficulty, which is a complex and deeply-rooted—cause is always in the plural number.

With a life apart from politics, women have no plans of equality, and are, therefore, slow to recognize the principles of reciprocity between themselves. In consequence of this a spirit of aloofness springs up between those of opposite conditions in life quite unknown among men. In Europe, where the heritages are fixed, human nature accepts the inevitable without experiencing either elation on the one hand or humiliation on the other. But among ourselves, the conscious superiority which the rich American woman has in common with her titled European sister, is resented by the poor but high-spirited daughter of democracy, who with no heritage of servitude, feels that the barrier between herself and the aristocrat is an artificial one. The obtrusive dignity which the latter is often tempted into assuming by reason of the questioning of her position, instead of overawing the working-girl, awakens in her a spirit of criticism and contempt.

Thus an artificial barrier of onanism springs up between the rich and poor detrimental to the interests of both. Prejudice begets prejudice and many a lady submits to the blunders of the untrained foreigner rather than outlive the insolence of some poor neighbor. Life among the masses of American women is too much a question of attire and surroundings. There is no sympathy between silk and rags. Silk says to Rags: "Go work in my kitchen; you are none too good." Rags replies with a loss of her head: "I would rather starve elsewhere." Silk's response is only too well known—"You deserve to starve for your false pride."

These are hard statements, but they no more than cover the facts, and the charities of the rich been overlooked. No women in the world respond more readily to the demands of suffering among their own sex than American women. But this is commiseration, not sympathy; though the women meet in mourning they are far from being synonymous. Did we sympathize more with the poor there would be less need of our commiseration. Sympathy will often prevent what commiseration cannot cure. Sympathy is the expression of interdependence, and interdependence is the law of life—it is the life of a planet community or household. You pay your servant girl liberally, you give her plenty of food, requiring of her work that is neither distasteful or irksome, and she will be so interested in your comfort or so exacting of her privileges. You rail at her and berate at her to your acquaintances as a nuisance, whose misnomer, "help," should be translated hindrance. Alas, yes, you pay her well, and, again, you do not pay her; for money is only a part of the wages for conscientious work. Sympathy must be paid for in its own unlettered coin, and conscience is only satisfied with conscience. You stand on your dignity and she holds to the letter of your bond.

Law is self-assertive. To violate the law of interdependence is to suffer discomfort and loss. Rags may starve, but she who pronounced the curse experiences its rebound in the incompetent foreigner, who makes her home the scene of vexation and spoils Rags may die, but the community must pay for the investigation of her death—we must bury her. You may ignore the poor, but you cannot ignore the law of interdependence which makes you their counterpart.

What beautiful justice underlies nature's partiality! Having in the operation of her laws made a few rich and many poor, she makes her inequalities the basis of equality. The poor became independent of the rich by serving the rich, while the rich enjoy independence solely by employing the poor.

There is then no natural reason that Americans should be the poorest served people in the world. That we are is the inevitable result of substituting artificial for natural laws. If we would have self-respecting, independent women to help in the household the ban of inferiority must be removed from the servant girl, and personal worth be made the guarantee of social worth.

A Ghastly Attempt at Suicide.
Monday night Cornelius Wheeland, living a few miles from Williamsport, in Lyons township, tried to commit suicide by hacking himself in the head with an axe. He made about fifty gashes in his head and at one place cut out an inch and half of his scalp. The physician attending him thinks he will recover. Wheeland was laboring under a temporary fit of insanity.

TABLE MANNERS OF CHILDREN.

A Few Suggestions as to Etiquette for the Young.

Laraine Boomerang.
Young children who have to wait till older people have eaten all there is in the house, should not open the diningroom door during the meal and ask the guest if he is going to eat all day. It makes the company feel ill at ease and lays up wrath in the parents' heart.

Children should not appear displeased with the regular courses at dinner and then fill up with pie. Eat the less expensive food first, and then organize a panic in the recesses.

Do not close out the last of your soup by taking the plate in your mouth and pouring the liquid down your childish neck. You might spill it, and it enlarges and distorts the mouth unnecessarily.

When asked what part of the fowl you prefer do not say you will take the part that goes over the fence last. This remark is very humorous, but the rising generation ought to originate some new table jokes that will be worthy of the age in which we live.

Children should early learn the use of the fork and how to handle it. This knowledge can be acquired by allowing them to pry up the carpet tacks with this instrument, and other little exercises such as the parent mind may suggest.

The child should be taught at once not to wave his bread around over the table in conversation, or to fill his mouth with potatoes and then converse in a rich tone of voice, with some one out in the yard. He might get his dinner down his trachea and cause his parents great anxiety.

In picking up a plate or saucer filled with soup or with moist food, the child should be taught not to parboil his thumb in the contents of his dish and to avoid swallowing soup bones or other indigestible debris.

Toothpicks are generally in the last case and children should not be permitted to pick their teeth and kick the table through the other exercises. While grace is being said at table, children should know that it is a breach of good breeding to smudge fruit cake, just because their parents' heads are bowed down and their attention for the moment turned in another direction. Children ought not to be permitted to find fault with the dinner or to fill the cat while eating. Boys should, before going to the table, empty all the frogs and grasshoppers out of their pockets, or those insects might crawl out during the festivities and jump into the gravy.

If your mother jolly up to his gambels, do not mash him with your spoon before all the guests, as death is at all times depressing to those who are at dinner and retards digestion. Take the fly out carefully with what naturally adorns his person, and wipe him on the table cloth. It will demonstrate your perfect command of yourself and afford amusement for the company. Do not stand up in your chair and try to spear a roll with your fork. Say "thank you" when you are called and "beg pardon" whenever you can work in these remarks, as it throws people off their guard and gives you an opportunity to get in your work in the pastry and other bric a brae near you at the time.

A RIOT IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

A Desperate Fight Between Negroes and Whites, in Which Several are Killed.

Monday morning Policeman Robert Reid, of Hampton court house, S. C., threatened to take a pistol from Jake Gaunt, a negro. Thereupon the latter went to the town of Branson, collected about twenty negroes and returned to Hampton court house. Upon seeing Gaunt, Reid again insisted that he should give up his pistol. There were six whites on the spot, Reid, Nowell, Gerald, Samuel Dewitt, Major Cansey and A. H. Peoples. Upwards of fifteen negroes fired upon Reid, who was almost instantly killed. The negroes then turned upon the other whites and severely beat and cut Jewell, Gerald and Dewitt. Mr. Peoples jumped upon his horse, saying, "I will go to Yarnville and summon some help." When he reached the edge of the town he was waylaid by two negroes, who stopped his horse and exclaimed: "You are the rascal going for help to Yarnville. Therefore they dragged him from his horse and stabbed him with a knife on the left thigh and side. They were brutally beating him when, seeing that he would probably be killed, he resorted to the ruse of calling on an absent friend to come to his assistance with a pistol. This had the desired effect, and after cutting the bridge reins the negroes left him. The negroes had not the slightest provocation, as Reid was discharging his duty. Threats were made by the negroes that many more whites would bite the dust by Tuesday night.

"One must be poor to know the luxury of giving." That may be so, but we think anybody who enjoys the luxury of giving his fellow sufferer a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to cure his cough.

"... Facts speak plainer than words." "The doctor told me to take a blue pill for my cough, but I have been poisoned twice by mercury. The druggist told me to try Kidney-Wort, and I did. It was just the thing for my biliousness and constipation, and now I am as well as ever."—A. J. Santoro, sold in both dry and liquid form.

"In the Dyes more coloring is given for 10 cts. than in any 15 or 20-cent dye, and they dry faster and more brilliant colors."

Walker St., Baltimore, Dec. 1881.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from Blood Disease, Dyspepsia, and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact, life had become almost a burden. Finally, when hope had almost left me, my husband seeing Brown's Iron Bitters advertised in the paper, induced me to give it a trial. I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at the present time.

Mrs. L. F. GRIFFIN.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS will have a better tonic effect upon any one who needs "bracing up," than any medicine made.
