"STARS" IN CARS.

THE COACHES USED BY ACTRESSES.

Some of the Expensive Luxuries Which Modjeska, Miss Nilsson and Langtry, the most popular of their Managers, Philadelphia Record.

Three of the principal female theatrical stars of the country will travel this season in private cars engaged especially for them. These include Madame Modjeska, Miss Nilsson and Mrs. Langtry. The star of to-day goes about in great style, and it takes a good big bank account to back up her whims and make her feel comfortable. She came here in a magnificent arranged car, the City of Worcester, which is leased every summer to a party of gentlemen residing in the city of that name in the Bay state, and in which they make an annual trip to the plains and Rocky mountains. This car has been fitted by Mr. Stetson, with whom Modjeska has the contract "to do" the country. The interior has been refurbished at an expense of not less than $5,000. The madame insisted upon her private car and she holds her manager to the letter of his contract. Cars are rather costly affairs and enter into the profits of the engagement. In the first place they cost $50 a day for their use, which sum goes to the parlor car company's treasury, and does not include the hauling of the car about the country, which is equivalent to the fare of eighteen passengers. Sundays count the same as other days. Then there is a porter, a French cook and servants for the madame, all of whom are under pay during the entire engagement, as well as a manager, who, of course, the madame looks after the financial interests of his employer. At the conclusion of the present engagement at the Chestnut street opera house Madame Modjeska will have spent two entire weeks in this city. Her car has been ordered to pick up at Belmont, while she has been enjoying sumptuous apartments at the Continental hotel. The car costs just the same whether in use or not, and for the fifteen days the actress spends here Mr. Stetson will pay $750 rental to the Illinois company. At the conclusion of her engagement the lady starts on a week's tour through the state. This is where the car and its attendant comforts come handy. During that time the country hotels will be shunned, and the madame will sleep on the rail. When the next large city is reached, and a week's stay is made, the car will be thrown upon a siding to wait for its fair occupant to return. The city of Worcester is the same coach in which Patti made her tour last spring. Of course, for all the lady's outlay there must be an adequate return. Proprietor Fred Zimmerman, of the opera house says that Modjeska last week brought $9,000 to his noble amusement hall. What proportion the star gets he is not aware, but he presumes it is not less than 50 per cent of the gross receipts. Mr. Stetson, of course receives a handsome percentage, out of which he pays the company, and Zimmerman & Nixon pocket what is left. The managers all like Modjeska; she is not fearful, and does not demand outrageous things. The lady is a hard worker, and never shirks six nights and a matinee if she is well enough to stand upon the stage.

Next Wednesday Miss Nilsson will come here in private car, with French coach attached. She will give but two performances in New York. The songster will be quartered at the Hotel Bellevue in apartments which cost $24 per day, not including meals and attendance. In addition there is provided for her use a handsome turnout team, footman and driver—the best that the fashionable West End can supply. This will cost about $25 per day, whether it leaves the stable or not.

Following Nilsson comes Mrs. Langtry, who will occupy the same company of carriages as her predecessors, and have the same gaudy team and equipage as the queen of song. It is a very costly business, this moving of female stars about the country; but if they are a success the couple of hundred dollars per day expense is paid, but a bagatelle when the profits are taken into consideration.

Kindness of Some Famous Persons For the Card Table.

On one occasion, when Washington Irving, Bancroft, and Everett were chatting over diplomatic reminiscences, the last named told how, after he and the Neapolitan ambassador had been presented to her Majesty Queen Victoria, Lord Melbourne intimated that they would be expected to join in a game of whist with the Duchess of Kent. "I play but a very poor game myself," said Melbourne; "in fact, I scarcely understand it; but the duchess is very fond of it." "And I," said the Neapolitan to Everett, "am a devoted player, and about the best to be your excellency's partner, I invoke your forbearance in advance;" to which the American envoy replied that he knew very little of the game himself.

As he put it, three dignified persons, seated at a gossamer table, were solemnly going to play a game they imperfectly understood, and for which none of them cared in the least. Upon reaching the duchess' apartments the ambassadors were formally presented, and then, at her invitation, sat down to play. As soon as the cards were dealt, the lady waiting placed herself at the back of the duchess, and the latter said: "Your excellencies will excuse me if I rely upon the advice of my friend here, as I must confess that I am really a very poor player."

This was almost too much for Everett's gravity; a gravity undisturbed for the rest of the evening, since he found playing what under such conditions inexplicably dull work.

Bold as he could be when the game was over the cards, Lord Beaconsfield would never have been tempted to risk so much on the cards; for, knowing the weakness of his play, he carefully eschewed anything like high stakes. One evening, at the time when Parliament was agitating itself about the empress-ship of India, Lord Beaconsfield sat down to whist with the Prince of Wales, and asked the latter: "What points, sir?" "Oh, sovereign, if you please," was the answer. Seeing the premier's look of annoyance, Mr. Bernal Osborne observed: "I think, sir, the premier would rather have crown points than the Prince's." The prince, taking the joke and the hint, altered the stakes accordingly.

Marlborough was not above playing for smaller stakes, though perhaps the great captain did not play high out of fear of his loving Sarah, who had a tongue, and knew how to use it like the lady whose liege lord contrived that she should not more than suspect the secret of his bad hours, until, coming home at 6 in the morning tired out with "attending on a sick friend," he dozed at the breakfast table, and solemnly passing the bread, said, "Cut?" "That's your sick friend, is it?" exclaimed the wife; and what followed may be imagined.

A card having wife can upon occasion get her scruples aside. Soon after the close of the secession war, General Forrest and his wife stopped at a hotel in Memphis, and upon examining their purses, found the sum total of their wealth amounted to $7.20. The general, being due that evening at a house where poker was sure to be played, proposed that he should tempt fortune to the full extent of his means and asked his wife to pray for his success. She would not promise, but he felt she was for him, and knew how it would be. Let him tell the rest himself.

"They had three tables—one was a quarter dollar table, one a half, and one a dollar-and-a-half. I wanted to make my seven dollars last as long as I could make it, so I sat down to the quarter table. By the way, I had no money enough to do better; and after we had eaten, sat down to the dollar and a half table. Sometimes I won, and then again I'd lose, until night upon midnight when I had better luck. I knew Mary was sitting up anxious, and it made me cool I sat my hat on the floor, and every time I'd win I'd drop the money in the hat. I sat there until day broke, and then I took my hat up in both hands, smashed it on my head and went home. When I got to my room, there sat Mary in her gown. She seemed tired and anxious, and though she looked mighty hard at me, she didn't say a word. I walked right up to her, emptied my hat right into the lap of her gown, and then we sat down and counted it. Just fifteen hundred dollars even, and that gave me a start."

The wife of Bishop Beadon loved what so well that when the prelate told one of his clerics if he was able to sit up half the night playing whist at the Bath Rooms, he must be well enough to do duty on the side, the cleric silenced him with: "My lord, Mrs. Beadon would tell you that late what acts as a tonic or restorative to dyspeptic people with weak nerves." The bishop's better half would have sympathized with Goldsmith's old lady, who, lying sick and dazed, played cards with the cards to pass the time away, and, after winning all his money, had just proposed playing his charges when she expired.

There have been stranger stakes still. In 1735, Henry and James Trotter, sailors in New Zealand, spending a night in a squalid hut, was invited to cut in for a rubber of whist. As he took his seat he inquired: "What points?" His partner responded in a tone significant of surprise at such a question—"Why, the usual game, of course—sharp points, and a black on the rubber."

Even the sharpest of sharpeners may meet more than his match. Robert Houdin happened to saunter into a continental casino where a Greek was reaping a rare harvest at cards, looked on quietly until a great bet was made, and then dropped into it. The Greek, dealing dexterously, turned a king from the bottom of the pack. When the deal came to Houdin, he observed: "When I turn kings from the bottom of the pack, I always do it with one hand instead of two, it is quite as easy, and much more elegant. See, here comes his majesty of diamonds," and up came the card. The cheat stared at the conjurer for a moment, and then rushed from the place, without waiting to possess himself of his hat, coat or stick.

Another of the fraternity, after winning ten games at cards in succession, tried his fortune against a new opponent, and still his luck held. He made four points and dealing, turned up a king and won. "My luck is wonderful," said the gambler, said an adversary: "and all the more wonderful since I have the four kings of the pack in my pocket," and the professor of legerdemain laid them on the table.

"I remember," said a gentleman who had travelled in Russia long before at a ball given by the empress to the late emperor on his birthday. I was playing at cards, when the emperor, who was wandering about, came behind me to watch the game. My adversary and I were both at four, and it was my deal. "Now," said the emperor, "let me see whether you can turn up the king." I dealt, and then held up the turn-up card, observing:—"Your orders, sir, have been obeyed." A dozen times afterwards, the emperor asked me how I managed it; and he never would believe that it was mere hazard, and that I had taken the chance of the card being a king."

The czar was as much astonished at the result of his remark as the young gentleman who, looking over a pretty girl's shoulder while she was playing cards, observed:—"What a lovely hand!" "You may have it, if you want it," murmured she; and all the rest of the evening he was wondering what her intentions were.

Coal Oil or Petroleum may be very nice for illuminating or lubricating purposes, but surely it is not the proper thing to cure a cough with. Dr. B. E. Cochran's Compound is the standard Cough Remedy.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

Noted Men!

Dr. JOHN F. HANCOCK, late President of the National Pharmaceutical Association of the United States, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has a heavy sale, is conceded to be a fine tonic; the character of the manufacturer is a voucher for its purity and medicinal excellence."

Dr. JOSEPH ROBERTS, President Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says: "I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poison."

Dr. J. FARIS MOORE, Ph. D., Professor of Pharmacy, Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is a safe and reliable medicine, positively free from alcoholic poison, and can be recommended as a tonic for use among those who oppose alcohol."

Dr. EDWARD EARICKSON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says: "I endorse it as an excellent medicine, reliable as a tonic and non-intoxicant in the fullest sense."

Dr. RICHARD SAPIROTOR, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says: "All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and the well-known character of the house which makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed, for there are men who would not be induced to enter anything else but a reliable medicine for public use."

A Druggist Cured.

Boonsboro, Md., Oct. 12, 1882. Gentlemen: Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of a bad attack of indigestion and fullness in the stomach, which I had for some time. I take pleasure in recommending it to my customers, and am glad to say it gives entire satisfaction to all.

DRY GOODS.

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies' or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Often we speak of other aspects of our trade, aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this it. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made? 1305 Chestnut.

Black satin rhadameres and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they? Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50—no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory; for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you. Third circle, southeast from centre.
