THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

A FINE DISPLAY OF ITS RESOURCES.

The Northern Pacific Exhibit Car—The Agricultural and Mineral Products of the New Country.

There has been an exhibition at the railroad siding, on North Queen street, adjoining the freight depot, between Chestnut and Walnut streets, a car filled with products gathered from the fields along the line of the Northern Pacific country, from Minnesota to Washington territory. All day long it has been visited by curious sight seers, who having heard so much of the boundless resources of the "Golden Northwest," sought by ocular demonstration to verify what seemed the almost fabulous reports of the productive capacity of that country. The display is really an attractive one. The dimensions of the car, which was built expressly for the purpose it is now serving, are fifty-five feet in length by eleven in width, and fifteen feet high, and every available inch of space has been utilized to show in a most effective way the products of the soil in the far-off lands of the Dakotas, or where the Oregon madly dashes. At each end of the car are the antlers of the elk, black tail deer, antelope and the short horns horns of the buffalo beautifully dressed. The aisles are decked with samples of wheat, oats, rye, corn and every variety of cereal, on the stalk, in jars and upon shelves, while the roof is artistically thatched with the golden grain in the full stature of development. The quality of these products was such as to commend itself to the admiration of all who examined them, the ears of corn being full and symmetrical, the wheat, oats and other products of the harvest field in a similar stage of rich and robust development. On shelves in cases there were shown vegetables, great big slipping potatoes and onions, turnips and pumpkins, watermelons and beets, and many more of those things that are the joy of the farmer's heart. The variety of the display was said to include eighty different kinds of grain in stalk; seventy varieties of threshed grain; fifty five of grasses; thirty-five of vegetables; forty of forest arrayed in blocks of book form and neatly arranged in cases. It was also said that the exhibit counted them all, but even a hasty examination sufficed to show the capacity of this "granary of the world" to be practically without limit. There were also specimens of gold, silver, copper and coal from Montana and the adjoining regions, and from the Superior lake region; granite from Dakota, susceptible of a high degree of polish and as enduring as adamant; lime in its purest state from the Jim River valley. There were all told more than 600 varieties of products from the Northern Pacific country, including cereals, minerals, lumber, grains, grasses and fruits, and all the material resources that go to make a country great and a people rich. There are shown some photographic views intended to depict the picturesque character of the country, including a long visit and will remain at its present location in this city until this evening. It is in charge of Mr. T. K. Stetler, the traveling agent of the Northern Pacific railroad, and will be exhibited throughout the entire East, having been fitted up and sent out from the company's shops in St. Paul some weeks ago.

Mark Twain's Barometer.

Philadelphia Press.

Somebody was asking a Hartford man how it happened that Mark Twain wrote and published so little nowadays. "He writes as much as ever," was the reply, "but his barometer is out of order, and he does not know what to publish; so he publishes nothing."

"What in the world has his barometer to do with his literary activity?"

"His barometer is a man-servant named Jacob, who is remarkable for his deficient sense of humor. Mark never can judge of the merit of his own performance. Years ago he fell into the habit of reading everything that he wrote by observing its effect upon Jacob. If Jacob listened to the reading of the article, jest, or story with unmoved countenance, or merely smiled in a perfunctory way, Mark was satisfied and sent the manuscript to the printer. But if Jacob laughed outright, or gave any other indication of genuine merriment, the humorist concluded that the stuff was hopeless and withheld it from publication. He regarded Jacob as infallible, and came to lean upon his judgment."

"About three years ago, it appears, Jacob learned for the first time from some outsider that his master was a professional humorist. He felt greatly honored that he should have been chosen habitually to say the first freshest witticism in a production of genius. He did not exactly understand why he should have been thus chosen, but felt in a vague way that a great humorist must need sympathy and appreciation, and must naturally look for it to the fellow-being nearest at hand. He also felt that he had perhaps failed to be at all times sufficiently appreciative. So Jacob kept his discovery to himself as far as his master was concerned, and resolved to be as appreciative in the future as anybody could desire."

One day Mark called Jacob in and read him a sketch entitled "The Cow and the Lightning rod Man." In composing it Mark had flattered himself that he had struck a pretty fine streak. To his amazement Jacob put back his head and roared. With a half-suppressed ejaculation Mark dashed the manuscript into the wastebasket. Then Mark waited six weeks or two months to collect his forces (for he is never precipitate in anything he does) and achieved a romance called "How I Lunched the Baby." He summoned Jacob and waited for his face with obvious anxiety as he read the touching narrative. Jacob's mirth was painful to observe. Mark tore up the story and then tore his hair.

Two or three experiments of this sort, with unvarying results, passing Mark Twain that the malady, which he has been dreading ever since it began to creep up the Connecticut Valley, had reached him at last and destroyed his powers of usefulness. He fell into a settled melancholy. His friend, the Rev. Mr. Twitchell, tried in vain to cheer him up. "Perhaps," suggested Twitchell, "your man has really cultivated a sense of humor, so that you must no longer judge by opposites." Mark shook his head, and borrowed a volume of Jonathan Edwards' sermons from his friend's library. He copied all the passages from the discourse on eternal punishment, and palmed it off on Jacob as his own latest effort. For the first time in history, the gloomy periods provoked peals of laughter. Jacob held his sides and shook all over. There he suddenly stopped, his countenance became blank, turned pale, and he incontinently fled. He had seen murder in his master's eyes.

"That," said the Hartford man, in conclusion, "is why Mark Twain does not write any more. He hangs his reputation as a humorist upon his barometer, and his barometer no longer works."

Noted Men!

Dr. JOHN F. HANCOCK, late President of the National Pharmaceutical Association of the United States, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has a heavy sale, is conceded to be a fine tonic, the character of its purity and medicinal excellence."

Dr. JOSEPH ROBERTS, President Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says: "I endorse it as a fine medicine, reliable as a strengthening tonic, free from alcoholic poisons."

Dr. J. PHILIP MOORE, Ph. D., Professor of Pharmacy, Baltimore Pharmaceutical College, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is a safe and reliable medicine, positively free from alcoholic poisons, and can be recommended as a tonic for use among those who oppose alcohol."

Dr. EDWARD EARICHSON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says: "I endorse it as an excellent medicine, a good digestive agent and non-intoxicant in the fullest sense."

Dr. RICHARD SAPINGTON, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says: "All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and the well-known character of the house which makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed for it. For any man who could not be induced to order anything else, but a reliable medicine for public use."

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Often we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, worn, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

West of south entrance to main building.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made?

1700 Chestnut.

Black satin rhadamies and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50—no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
