COUNTESS MODJESKA.

A SKETCH OF THE POLISH ACTRESS.

Reminiscences of Her Early and Eventful Life—Her Baptism of Fire—Married at Sixteen.

N. Y. Graphic.

Perhaps in all the history of the dramatic stage, ancient or modern, there is no actor who has acted over so wide a territory or played in so many languages as Mme. Helena Modjeska, who was born at Cracow, the ancient capital of Poland. The Russians and Poles are said to have a wonderful faculty for acquiring languages and the Poles even more so than the Russians, and it is quite natural that the celebrated actress should be an accomplished linguist, speaking French, English, German, Polish, and Hungarian, and performing in each one of these languages with unqualified success.

Mme. Modjeska's father, Michael Opid, was a mountaineer of Galicia, or Austria Poland, but, nevertheless, he was a man of artistic and scholarly tastes; he was noted as an eminent philologist (which is another reason for Mme. Modjeska's proficiency in languages), and he was also a great lover of music. Singers, actors, musicians and literary men frequented his house, and after his death continued to visit his widow; thus Mme. Modjeska's earliest friends were students and scholars of one kind or another.

When she was born her father said: "That girl is for me, and she must be called Helena, because her head is Greek." Thus she was christened Helena and in her childhood called Helena, the Polish diminutive of the name.

After her father's death her earliest reminiscence is of seeing a man shot in the street, for there were sad days and revolutionary times in Poland. With the sights and sounds of war and death she was early familiarized, and she can now remember when but a very small child of hiding behind a wall to pick up shot and carry home in her pinafore.

When she was but seven years old a revolution took place and Cracow was fired in several places and a large portion of the town burned, and with the rest Mme. Opid's house, rendering her and her family almost penniless and entirely homeless.

Helena and her little sister ran by themselves, clothed only in their night dress, she feeling very proud because she had succeeded in saving a doll and a life of St. Theresa. The little sister fell into a stream, and no help being near, was rescued by our little heroine.

The two children were finally found by their folks, but for many nights after that they slept upon straw in cellars or barns wrapped in borrowed clothes. Thus in her childhood, Mme. Modjeska became acquainted with misery and distress; her home was among the bereaved and ruined and desperate.

In 1876 she insisted on an indefinite leave of absence from the Imperial theatre at Warsaw, where she had been acting, and came to this country, landing in Philadelphia during the Centennial, and after a short sojourn there proceeding to California, where a raucous was bought, and Helena Modjeska, the vexed and too noisily admired actress, and Charles Dozema, the prosaic critic, proceeded and "showered" editor—one escaping from the worries of the Imperial theatre, the other from the ignominious censorship of Russia—made up their minds to settle down for the balance of their lives, to permit their heads and live a rancher's happy life forever. But, alas! the stage is a candle, and the actor-moth rarely leaves it for good until age or illness compels or the life curtain drops. San Francisco was not far from the rancho, and so in that city in February, 1877, Mme. Modjeska made her debut on the American stage and also her first performance in the English tongue. Every one knows of her success there and her subsequent success for two seasons through this country and Canada. In 1879 she went back to Europe and in the winter of 1879-80 she played in all the principal theatres.

In May, 1880, she went to London and played there with scarcely any intermission until July, 1881, one of the longest engagements ever played by any star in that city. After that she traveled through the provincial towns of Great Britain. In January, February and March of the present year she returned to Poland and played a most brilliant engagement there, and would have taken an engagement offered at St. Petersburg, but General Ignatieff, the Russian censor, refused her permission to perform in the Russian language.

From Poland she returned to London and played three months at the Haymarket theatre, there producing and running "Odette" for the entire time; then, taking a month's rest on the sea-coast of Cornwall, she set sail for America, where we are happy to welcome her back among us, and where we are proud that our English brethren refer to her as the American actress. Mme. Modjeska will play an engagement of some length at one of our theatres during the winter, and promises her appearance in four new roles—Marie Stuart, Rosalind, Helen and Thora. Her old repertoire of Camille, Adrienne, Frou-Frou and Juliet will also be represented.

When Helena was ten years old her father died, and his only child he brought home. This child she took care of to relieve her mother, whose family was large and cares as great as in proportion her means were small. Thus at this early age she was playing the part of a mother, a role which she still likes to fill in private life, as she is very fond of children, especially young girls who have the ardent and romantic temperament which characterized her own youth.

At this time she went to a convent every day to gain some education from the nuns. Grammar and history were her favorite studies; other branches of education she did not care for. At fourteen she left the convent, and in conjunction with her half brother, Josef Bouda, who was an actor, she wrote a play, which was performed before the family, she taking a part in it in which she wept and made the servants weep with her.

At sixteen she married G. C. Modjeska, and two years later her only surviving child, Rudolph Modjeska, was born. After the death of her first husband, and eight years after her first marriage, she was a victim of cholera, this time to Count Charles Szewca Chlapowski, a Polish patriot, editor and soldier, whose history if written would make in its adventures a companion story to that of Baron Trenck.

A SOLDIER ACCUSED OF URGLARY.

Mrs. Crosby's Terrible Struggle With a Mad-night Intruder—The Woman's Victory.

Private George Allen, of Battery K, Fifth artillery, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Schuyler, who is charged with burglary and felonious assaults by Mrs. M. A. Crosby, was arraigned here before Justice Thomas Bible. He is charged by Mrs. Crosby with robbing her on the night of Nov. 25 Nassau street, who lives on the old Stillwell homestead at Throgg's Neck, N. Y., with entering the house shortly before midnight on Friday night, and with assaulting her while attempting to rob the place. Mrs. Crosby states that she was awakened by the house dog's barking, and got up and went down stairs. Then the door bell rang and some one said, "I want to come in; I want to see the master." She refused the man admission, but he gained entrance through the conservatory. Mrs. Crosby ran to an upper window and called to the servants, who were in cottages back of her house, but they did not hear. In the meantime the dog, a Siberian hound, had sprung upon the man and knocked him down, but was called off by the children from the nursery above. The man got out at the head of the stairs by the nurse Maria, who broke a cane over his head. Mrs. Crosby snatched an unloaded gun at him as he was entering the nursery, and then clubbed him with the butt. He threw her down but she managed to push him off and through the door. Here there was a struggle, and at length she succeeded in getting the man to the stairs, and he fell from the top to the bottom. Mrs. Crosby's little boy Willie, seven years old, had helped his mother, kicking the man away from her face. When the man fell down stairs Mrs. Crosby ran in a front room, where she got a pair of pistols. Prying open the case, which was locked, and going to the head of the stairs, she pointed them at the burglar, who escaped through the conservatory. The next day the dog was found playing with a soldier's cap in the yard. Mrs. Crosby swore out a warrant, describing the burglar, and George Allen, who with four other soldiers, had been on a drunken debauch Friday night, was arrested. He had returned to the foot without his cap and with a black eye, a wound under his left ear, another on his left forehead and a scratch on his nose. He pleaded not guilty.

Depleted Condition of the Oyster Beds.

The state oyster steamer Lolla, Capt. Mitchell, reached Baltimore last evening from a trip of examination made by Dr. W. K. Brooks, of Johns Hopkins university. Mr. Wm. Henry Legg, of Queen Anne's county, and John W. Sedell, the oyster commissioner. The commissioners left Annapolis on Tuesday, and spent two days in examining the oyster beds on both sides of the bay north of Annapolis and Kent island. Dr. Brooks says they found these northern beds in much better condition than those in the southern part of the Chesapeake. The latter yield the finest oysters, and are consequently the most worked. Some of the upper beds visited are forbidden to dredge, and their better condition is shown by the great number of better oysters to the square yard, the greater number of living oysters as compared to empty shells and especially by the presence of the greater number of young oysters from 6 to 15 months old. The investigation was commenced up the Bay about the middle of the entrance to the Patuxent into the bay. None of the beds were found in as good condition as they were reported five years ago, and this is true in every case of which there are exact statistics. Every bed examined by Dr. C. L. Luggen in 1876, and by Legk, Winslow, in 1878 and 1879, was found to be in very much worse condition than in the reports. The field work of the commissioners is finished for the season, but each member has an allotted task for the winter. Dr. Brooks will devote his attention to an elaboration of his notes taken during the investigation of the beds, and the others will make further inquiries bearing upon the subject in hand. Next spring they will continue their examinations of the beds. Dr. Brooks considers the facilities provided by the state for the prosecution of the important work mapped out for them to be rather meagre.

The Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina the least remedy in the world is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup" and the latter acceded to the assertion.

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

Oh, My Back!

That's a common expression and has a world of meaning. How much suffering is summed up in it.

The singular thing about it is, that pain in the back is occasioned by so many things. May be caused by kidney disease, liver complaint, constipation, cold, rheumatism, dyspepsia, overwork, nervous debility, &c.

Whatever the cause, don't neglect it. Something is wrong and needs prompt attention. No medicine has yet been discovered that will so quickly and surely cure such diseases as Brown's Iron Bitters, and it does this by commencing at the foundation, and making the blood pure and rich.

Logansport, Ind., Dec. 1, 1880.

For a long time I have been a sufferer from stomach and kidney disease. My appetite was very poor and the very small amount I did eat disagreed with me. I was annoyed very much from non-retention of urine. I tried many remedies with no success, until I used Brown's Iron Bitters. Since I used that my stomach does not bother me any. My appetite is steadily increasing. My kidney trouble is no more, and my general health is such, that I feel like a new man. After the use of Brown's Iron Bitters for one month, I have gained twenty pounds in weight.

O. B. SARGENT.

Leading physicians and clergymen use and recommend Brown's Iron Bitters. It has cured others suffering as you are, and it will cure you.

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Oftener we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

West of south entrance to main building.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made? 1882 Chestnut.
