DIPHTHERIA!

PREVENTIVE BETTER THAN CURE.

Rules Which May Avail—Prevention Against its Contagion—Guide for the Sick Room—Some Timely Advice.

The Philadelphia board of health recently adopted the subjoined rules for preventing the spread of diphtheria in that city, where it threatens to be a terrible scourge this winter. Fears are expressed that Lancaster may be afflicted with it too and it will be well to put out these rules and keep them at hand in the household:

"Recent investigations have proved that the poison of diphtheria is portable, communicable by infection and capable of reproducing itself out of the human body," says the committee. "Diphtheria must now be ranked as both a contagious and infectious disease. The following rules are therefore more imperative than ever before:

"When a child or young person has a sore throat, a bad odor to his breath, and especially if it has fever, it should immediately be separated and kept secluded from all other persons except necessary attendants until it is ascertained or not if it has diphtheria or some other communicable disease.

"Every person known to be sick with diphtheria should be promptly and effectually isolated from the public. Only those persons who are actually necessary should have charge of or visit the patient and these visitors should be restricted in their intercourse with other individuals. Children residing in a house where there is a case of diphtheria should not be permitted to attend school.

"When a case of diphtheria is fully developed the same precaution in regard to free ventilation, disposal and disinfection of discharges, and body linen and so forth, isolation during convalescence (for management of the corpse should death unfortunately occur) ought to be enforced as follows: Have the patient placed in one of the upper rooms of the house, the windows should be kept closed, the family where to be had the best ventilation and isolation. The rooms should be instantly cleared of all carpets, woollen goods and all unnecessary furniture. Keep the room constantly well ventilated by means of open windows and fires, if necessary. Maintain the utmost cleanliness both with regard to the patient and in the room. A basin charged with chloride or carbolic acid or some other convenient disinfectant should be kept constantly on the bed for the patient to spit in. Change the clothing of the patient as often as useful, but do not carry it while dry through the house. A large vessel (a tub) containing water impregnated with a solution of carbolic acid in the proportion of four fluid ounces (Galvert's No. 4 or No. 5) to the gallon of water should always stand in the room for the reception of all bed and body linen immediately on removal from the person or contact with the patient. Pocket handkerchiefs should not be used, but small pieces of rag should be employed instead for wiping the mouth and nose, and each piece after being once used should be immediately burned. Two basins, one containing water impregnated with a solution of carbolic acid or permanganate of potassa and the other containing plain water and a good supply of towels, must be kept on hand by others, so that the hand of the nurse may be at once washed after they have been soiled by contact with the patient. All glasses, cups and other vessels used by or about the patient should be scrupulously cleaned before being used by others. The discharges from the nose and throat and kidneys are to be received, on their very issue from the body, into vessels containing some disinfectant, as a solution of two pounds of sulphate of iron in a gallon of water, or four fluid ounces of carbolic acid in a gallon of water, and immediately removed. No person should be allowed to enter the room except those who are attending upon the sick. Boiling is one of the surest ways of disinfecting all contaminated clothing. A solution of carbolic acid should first be added to the water. Any material which can be spared should be destroyed by fire.

When persons have had the diphtheria, whether they get well or die, the room which they have occupied should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. The furniture should be washed with a strong solution of chloralum (three or four ounces to the gallon of water) or, preferably, with carbolic acid soap. Afterwards the floor and woodwork should be washed with carbolic soap or with chloride of lime and water, and the paper should be removed by moistening with chloralum or carbolic acid solution. Then, after closing the doors, windows and all other openings the room should be fumigated by burning sulphur in an iron dish and kept closed for several hours. Chlorine gas may be used instead and may be generated by pouring strong sulphuric acid upon equal parts of common salt and binoxide of manganese, to which some water has been added. After this the room should be well aired for several days by throwing open the doors and windows, and then the ceiling should be whitewashed and the walls repapered or whitewashed.

"It is particularly important that persons whose throats are tender or sore from any cause should avoid exposure to the contagion of diphtheria. Children under ten years of age are in much greater danger of taking the disease and after they do take it of dying from it, than are grown persons. But adults are not exempt and mild cases in them may cause a long series of fatal attacks among children.

"Numerous instances are recorded where the contagion of diphtheria has retained its virulence for weeks or months in cesspools, heaps of decaying vegetable matter, damp walls, etc., and been carried for long distances in clothing, in sewers, in waste pipes from stationary wash stands and in other conduits. Hence all sewer connections and other carriers of filth should be well ventilated and disinfected, and children particularly should not be allowed to breathe the air of any water closet, cesspool or sewer into which discharges from patients sick with diphtheria have entered, nor to drink water or milk which has been exposed to such air.

"Beware of any person who has a sore throat; do not kiss such a person or take his or her breath. Do not sniff from the same cup, blow the same whistle, nor put his pencil or pen in your mouth.

"Do not wear or handle clothing which has been worn by a person during sickness or convalescence from diphtheria.

The Young Duke of Newcastle visited the Ledger office and remained until after 3 o'clock in the morning, watching and examining the presses. On Wednesday afternoon—accompanied by Mr. John Welsh, ex-minister to England, he visited the Episcopal hospital, and on Thursday went to the Academy of Fine Arts. He was to have been at Mr. Deere's Saturday club party, but something happened to his baggage and he would not go without his dress suit. On Wednesday evening he dined with Mr. George W. Childs and afterwards attended Mrs. Childs's reception at Woodmont. On Thursday evening Mr. Childs treated him to his first sleigh-ride. He never had a sleigh-ride before, and was pleased and delighted beyond measure. The young duke left for Baltimore, where he will be the guest of John W. Garrett.

A YOUNG WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

Shooting Himself in the Head After Having Just Parted From Her Lover. Greensburg Dispatch to the Times.

A gentleman just returned from Salina, a little town on the West Penn road, six miles west of Salisbury, reports the place as a fever of excitement over the tragic suicide of a young lady. The suicide took place in a boarding-house kept by a man named Heiner. The victim's name is Stoop, and her residence is on the West Penn railroad a short distance below the scene of the tragedy. She has been acting in the capacity of housekeeper for Mr. Heiner and, it is said, had formed an intimacy with a married man who boards at the house and who, it is reported, has a wife and family in Allegheny City. Miss Stoop was heard in earnest conversation with this man in the morning at 10 o'clock in the morning, at which time she retired to bed. An hour later a report of a pistol was heard. It aroused several of the boarders, but it was supposed at the time that the shot had been fired out of the house and an attempt was made to investigate. When Miss Stoop failed to make her appearance at the usual hour in the morning suspicion was aroused, and after a fruitless effort to arouse her her door was broken down and she was found lying dead in her bed, with a revolver clutched tightly in her hand and a bullet hole in her head. A butcher knife and a large-bladed penknife were found under the pillow. The revolver was identified as that of the married man who had sat up with her the night before and he was called upon to make an explanation. He denied all knowledge of the contemplated suicide. He declared that he had lent the young lady his revolver a couple of weeks ago for an entirely different purpose as he supposed, and he had no suspicion of the fatal use to which it was to be put. An inquest on the remains will be held, and the advisability of placing the owner of the revolver under arrest to await its results is suggested by some of the residents of Salina.

A RUINED OIL SPECULATOR.

Fleeing From His Family and Creditors, Accompanied by an Abandoned Woman.

Considerable excitement has been occasioned in Western New York and throughout the oil country by the disappearance of Albert Richardson, a resident of Bolivar. He has been a heavy speculator in oil and was generally on the winning side. In the late deal he worked with the bull interest from $25,000 up to $120,000, carrying several hundred thousand barrels two or three days and realizing handsomely thereon. Then he unloaded and went short for all he was worth, losing even more rapidly than he had previously gained. He was obliged to borrow $35,000 in one day, but this did not afford permanent relief, and when the market had really reached the top and was ready for the sharp break, Richardson was not clear headed enough to fall in with the tide. Everything that he did seemed to go wrong, and in a short space of time he was almost bankrupt. He sold his real estate at a sacrifice for cash and fled. He leaves a beautiful and accomplished wife, who has no definite knowledge of his whereabouts. Creditors at once employed a detective to trace the fugitive. It was discovered that Richardson went to Bradford, met a notorious woman and started westward in her company. He was last heard of in Cleveland. It is not likely that he will be apprehended. It transpired that he has for a long time spent money liberally upon the woman with whom he left Bradford.

DRY GOODS.

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Often we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give our news.

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as it making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made? The Chestnut.

Black satin rhadameas and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50—no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
