FRIDAY EVENING, DEC 15, 1882. AME. MODJESKA'S STRANGE VISITOR.

Warning the Actress of lier Husband' Threatened Danger. A young lady yet in her teens called upon Mme. Modjeska yesterday at the Clarendon botel, in New York, and ungently requested an audience, saying that she had credentials from the Polish friends of the Chlapowski family (the family of Mme. Modjeska's husband). Mme. Modjeska received her and found this statement to be untrue. The girl admitted that it was only a subterfuge to procure an audience, but at the same time admitted that she had something important to Mme. Modjeska (who was then with ber maids in private.) Mme. Modjeska dismissed her attendants and listened to the young girl's story. She said that she knew that Count Bozenta, Mme. Modjeska's husband, was connected with a Nihilist plot and that he had accepted a dangerous mission that would lead to almost certain death, and was about to depart to Europe to execute it, and that being herself heart and soul in the movement, and hav ing no one to regret her death, she had come to offer her services and save Mod-jeska's husband. With great tact and delicacy Mme. Modjeska talked to the girl, and at last sent her away fully convinced that Russian freedom was not suffering on account of her inaction. Count Bozenta is stopping with his wife at the Clarendon.
