A Terrible Story of Cruelty-Clinging for Years to a Man Who Treated Her twenty. Charles Stiles, the son of Gen. E. B. Stiles, once prominent in Illinois politics, was thirty-two. His career was boy and returned with a knowledge of the wickedness of the gay capitals. He was an adventurer, a gambler and at the age of twenty-one was a leader among the fast men of Chicago. Although moving at first in high society circles he voluntarily made himself an outcast. He speculated in the board of trade, and, tiring of this, started on the Grand Eastern circuit as a pool seller. This was seven

The incantations indulged in by the girl when suffering from Stiles' ill treatment have been used to show the candles, road letters to her friends, cry over them and talk incoherently. She would stick pins through photographs and stand them on their heads and make pin holes in all sort of things. She was alshe would sing and cry and laugh alternately and then would throw herself on the floor, talking to herself first in Italian and then in English. She finally came to believe that whisky was the cause of his cruelty to her and she resolved to scare him. Sle did her own work and appeared to be the happiest woman in town. But it did not last long. Stiles' father, the old general, came to Chicago from his home in Dixin, Ill., to do some business and boarded with her. He was taken sick at her house and she nursed him. He grew worse and died in her arms. After this Stiles' relatives persuaded him to leave her and one of them ene day ordered her out of the home which she had made. Stiles himself resumed his persecutions of her. So low had Stiles fallen while outwardly maintaining the appearance of respectability that no expedient seemed too desperate or infamous if it promised to result in money. When it suited his purpose to be kind to her he overpowered her with affection. When money could not be got in this way he would knock her down and kick her prestrate form. If under these circumstances she still clung to the home in which they lived he would order her, beg

THE STURLA TRIAL.

THE PRISONER GIVEN BUT ONE YEAR. Like a Brute.

The trial of Theresa Sturla for the murder of Charles Stiles ended at Chicago on Friday in a verdiet. The jury came into court at 10:30 a. m, and declared her guilty of manslanghter and the punishment was fixed at one year in the penitentiary. Few people are surprised at the leniency of the sentence. Those who have watched the trial would have been better satisfied with a verdict of acquittal, but the sentence is as light as could have been made consistently.

There has not been a murder case for many years that has developed so much interest. For several weeks the court room has been crowded daily, the ladies in sealskin sacques have vied with each other for desirable seats This trial has developed a remarkable case of blind dcvotion on the one hand and of brutality on the other. From the first sympathy has been with Miss Sturla, and the recital of her wrongs at tie hands of Charles Stiles, gambler, had brought the tears to many an eye. There had been no attempt to disprove the shooting of Stiles by Miss Sturla. In fact, she herself described the fatal meeting on the witness stand and fell to the floor in an attack of bysterics. The defense has been that she was driven crazy by the brutality of the man to whom she clung and that the act was that of an insane person.

Theresa Sturla is a beautiful girl of years ago. It was while engaged in this occupation that Stiles fell in at Baltimore with the Dyes woman who killed him. She was then a young but singularly beautiful girl, whose real name was Theresa Sturla. Ste was engaged to be married, but, meeting he did with her, and they lived together thereafter as man and wife. ' Coming to of the call board, at a salary of about $5,000. His ungovernable propensity for habits, absorbed all this, however, and he was head over heels in debt ten months give a standing on the board of trade other way, but there was very little in He began to abuse Theresa soon after he and he knew it, but he seemed to enjoy she was his willing slave. Wherever he went she followed. When he got out of her clothing more than once went to the When the meney was delivered to him he adapted to car conductors and knocked her down and on one occasion kicked her in the side. the trial, stands hardly without a parallel, after Stiles had beaten, despoiled and tem-porarily abandoned the girl, she suffered intensely from hysteria, and in some cases showed numistakable signs of insanity. knowing this, worked upon her fears to ccomplish his ends. When out driving with her at night he would take her into some neglected or abandoned graveyard and fill her ears with ghostly romances until she would scream with terror. One night he drove to the old cemetery at from the carriage. The horses took fright and ran away and she hid behind a vault of agony she made her way to a neighboring house and related her wrongs to a sympathetic family, certain members of which have appeared at the trial to corroborate unsettled condition of her mind. At times she would surround herself with ways burning incense and burying things in a box of dirt. When suffering physically or mentally from his cruelty application. But at last even Theresa Sturla rabelled. On Sanday night, July 9, Stiles took her to ride to Sunnyside. She paid for the refreshments. He went out for the horses and drove away. A furious storm set in and she was obliged to tramp through the rain and mud back to the city. This was the last straw. Stiles had a room at the Palmer house. The next morning she went to the hotel before he was dressed. People in an adjoining room heard a few high words and then two pistol shots. Rushing into the hall they found Stiles lying dead in the doorway and the young woman kneeling by his side stroking his hair and passionately kissing his colorless lips. She was promptly removed to the county jail, where she gave her name as Madeine Stiles, aged twenty one years.

"I wanted to be a good wife to him,"

said the girl the other day when reciting the story of her wrongs to the jury. " He was welcome to all I had But the more I loved him the more he beat me." was this brutality which the lawyers for the defense have claimed made her irresponsible for her actions. They called a number of eminent physicisms, who de-clared on oath that they believed Theresa Sturla to have been insane on the day of the shooting. They believed that even now she was not in her right mind, The scene the other day, when the witness broke down in hysteries, was claimed by the prosecution to have been a bit of acting. Physicians swore differently, "She might seream," said one, "but she could not stop her pulse." The pulse had ceased entirely and her form was as cold as death. She has been ill ever since.

Mr. Trude made the closing appeal for the defense on Wednesday. The judge delivered his charge on Thursday and the Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpectable one, go to Wanamaker's." The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Oftener we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-andfelt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps thisit is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made?
