STATE POLITICS.

PATTISON'S AND CASSIDY'S VIEWS.

An Interesting Interview With the Next Governor and His Prospective Legal Adviser.

Governor-elect Pattison spoke freely to the correspondent of the New York Herald in regard to his cabinet, particularly referring to the attorney-generalship. The interview, as given in the Herald, is as follows: "Controller and Governor-elect Pattison was found in the public building in a comfortable room, a foot high. His hair is jet black, and his forehead is well shaped and fairly developed. He wears a mustache, looks you straight in the eye and talks with emphasis in rather a loud voice. There is no nonsense about him, and there is certainly no trace of affectation and no suggestion of 'beastly pride' of position or success. In response to a question, Controller Pattison said: 'I have made no official announcement of my intentions in the matter of appointments, nor would it be proper for me to do so until my inauguration on the 16th of January. Then in a communication to the Senate I shall send the names of my cabinet appointments, and that body has five days in which to confirm or reject them.' "Appeared he generally and candidly that Mr. Cassidy is to be in your cabinet as attorney-general. Is it so?" "I have at no time said so. In fact, I am in no position to say anything about it."

Assuming, however, that such is the selection, is it not somewhat strange in view of Mr. Cassidy's relations as counsel to many great corporations in the state?"

"No man who is counsel for any corporation whatever, for an instant, be at the same time attorney-general of this Commonwealth during my administration, and," rejoined Mr. Pattison--and he meant it--"I would remove him as quickly as I would the humblest official."

But Mr. Cassidy is counsel to so many corporations and is so interested in the affairs that it is difficult to see how he can deal with them disinterestedly. "Well, that might be said of any of the leading lawyers of this state. They are all at some time engaged as counsel to corporations, but for all that, I said before, no man can be attorney-general in my cabinet who has any relations at the same time with any corporation; I would dismiss him instantly. And there is another view of this feature. The experience which a man who has been counsel for these corporations has would be of inestimable value to the state. He knows how to deal with them; understands the equities as well as the legalities of the cases, and is much better qualified to serve the Commonwealth than any other lawyer could possibly be."

"You regard the corporate litigation here as very important, do you not?" "Certainly do."

"It would seem as if the Western Union telegraph company in traversing the law of the state in the matter of absorbing another corporation would be a test of your intentions and sincerity?" "I see it."

"Shall you consider these matters in your inaugural address?" "Not in my inaugural, but in my message. The inaugural will be brief--a few words to the people of the Commonwealth. The message will be sent to the Legislature later, and in that I shall review the general condition of affairs."

"When you are present in Mr. Cassidy's law office?" "Yes."

"And he has always been your friend?" "Always."

"Then under ordinary circumstances the fact that he is a member of the bar, and the fact that you have appointed him attorney-general, would be a strange thing?" "No, and I don't say yes or no. I say with entire frankness that I don't think it would be proper for me to announce my selections before I sent the names to the Senate, where, by the way, a two-thirds vote will be needed to confirm them."

"Isn't Mr. Cassidy identified with the Camerons?" "Like all the prominent lawyers of the state, he is more or less intimately associated with corporate interests as counsel."

"But I mean politically. They are looked upon as the bosses and you were elected because of your hostility to them?" "Well, that is rather personal. I never met either the Camerons, who I understand are perfect gentlemen, but my hostility to the Cameron method is as intense as ever, and that is what you mean."

With some variation of phrase the foregoing is what the governor-elect repeated during a conversation of some length, at the close of which the correspondent retired. In the clubs, on the street and in newspaper circles there seems to be but one opinion as to the wisdom or policy of the selection of Mr. Cassidy. Republicans hoping for Democratic defeat encourage the idea, and the opposition Democrats look on with ill concealed exultation at what they believe is a surrender of reform to gratitude. The probabilities are that Mr. Cassidy will be attorney-general and ex-Congressman William S. Stenger secretary of state.

Mr. Cassidy Speaks. The interviewer then turned his attention to Mr. Cassidy with the following result:

In view of the importance attached to the foregoing rumors by politicians in general, and the interest in particular, and in fairness to Mr. Cassidy, who is regarded as the leader of the Pennsylvania bar, I called on him this evening and explained in full the allegations made concerning him in connection with corporations and political bossism. He raised himself at once and with great vehemence of manner answered each and every question. I began by saying:

"You are to be Governor. Pattison's attorney-general?" "I prefer not to reply to that, preferring to leave the government free to change his mind at the last moment if he so desires."

"In view of your connection with the great corporations of the state, especially the Standard Oil company, how could you faithfully discharge your duties to the Commonwealth?" "Let me tell you what that connection was, for it exists no longer. Some years ago the members of the Standard Oil company were indicted for a conspiracy to make a 'corner' in oil to force up the price and also to change the law of the state of Ohio. The case was brought up, and after long consultation was amicably adjusted. That ended that. Another case came up about a year ago. A board--composed of the attorney-general, the auditor and the treasurer--claimed the right to tax the entire capital of the company and demanded back taxes to the extent of $3,000,000. I was again engaged. We claimed that out of that part of the capital was taxable here that was used, and on that we were willing to pay. The court decided that we must pay $700,000. We refused and a mode case was arranged of facts about which there was no dispute, which the court considered and decided we were to pay $35,000. That ended not only the case, but my connection with the company. In other words, I have been employed by them to defend them in a criminal suit and also to protect them against a handsome case of extortion, and in no other."

"Now about the Western Union telegraph company and its attempt to override the constitution of the state? Would you be free to act in that?" "Let me tell you that I shall do my duty absolutely in that case, and if I were attorney-general and private parties had not filed the present papers for a dissolution of its charter I should do so."

"It looks now as if that matter would confront you on the very threshold of the next administration and public observation is certain to be focused upon it?" "I know it and I am prepared for it. Is it possible that people think I sit with my eyes shut to the fact that Pennsylvania looks with apprehension and disgust at the encroachment of corporations? I believe in corporate rights, but I will never tolerate corporate tyranny. My sympathies are entirely with the people. I speak from them, I am one of them, and I intend to serve them."

"Now say I am a candidate for the United States Senate, so I am; but shall I make my going there any easier by disregarding the will of the people? It surely is no uncommon thing for men to recognize and reciprocate kindness and help. I have known Robert Pattison since he was a boy in my office. He has taken no step of any importance without my consent and advice. Has he done well or ill? I am content to stand by his record as controller, and shall I help myself any now by going back on the advice I gave him?"

"He will go into his new office absolutely untrammelled and unpledged, and will execute his duties fearlessly and honestly. I have no fear, no doubt of that, and if my advice is asked in the future as it was in the past, it will be given free, as it always was. All I ask is a chance to show how I can discharge the duties of my office. By whom am I opposed? By men who haven't a dollar in the world that wasn't made in the service of the great corporations. I told you I can handle their support as United States senator if I will get out of the way as attorney-general, but surely I am not fit to be attorney-general. Let me have a chance to deal with the great questions, and if I do not fill the measure of the office put me out."

"To change the thought a moment, Mr. Cassidy, is it not a fact that you secured a Democratic judge vote to make Colonel Mann prothonotary, and obtained a part of his income from that office?" "No, sir, with great emphasis; I haven't had any connection or relation with Colonel Mann since 1876. I had nothing whatever to do with his election, and as to his letting me have any money, the book is on the other foot. There were two Democratic judges, to one of whom I do not even speak."

"It is also alleged, Mr. Cassidy, that largely owing to your counsel and advice to Sheriff Wright his term of office was so corrupt and unpopular that the party was compelled to nominate to a great defeat at the following election?" "That was because this is a Republican county. Now, the fact about Wright's administration is that when he left the office there was $70,000 to his credit in the treasury. During over five years not a cent was made, and not a sheriff's office was indicted, and not a judge had occasion to find fault. All the suits against him can be compromised for $20,000, and as a rule our sheriffs have to pay at least $20,000. I had always supposed that the corporation and policy of Sheriff Wright's affairs was creditable rather than otherwise. At the same time, to draw attention to itself, a certain paper in this city saw fit to talk about 'the sheriff's gang' and 'the sheriff's gang' until people began to think there must be something in it, but, as I said before, not a single sheriff's officer has yet been indicted."

"Nevertheless, Mr. Cassidy, all this gossip has produced an effect in the public mind, and there seems to be an impression that you will be bothered by your corporation affiliations?" "I am delighted to have this opportunity to crush that lie. I am a man's man. I own myself and will do justice to myself. The public will judge me by what I do, not by what they say. I have no howlers say. The very fact that I am opposed by people who own all they have in the world to the Pennsylvania railroad company is an evidence that they don't believe what they say."

"Again, I say in regard to the Western Union telegraph company, that I shall vote to let that section of the constitution which forbids the consolidation of one corporation with another corporation shall be enforced, unless the courts are manipulated. Therefore special legislation has enabled them to evade it. I believe the constitution enforces itself, and I shall be found ready and prepared to attend to my duties under it. It would be strange, indeed, if I didn't see how year by year the people dread more and more the encroachments of these corporations and policy alone, if there was no principle involved, would suggest that I stand with the people."

"Have you any public utterances on the subject--any little pamphlet, for instance, with a speech or so?" "No, sir, I am a hard-working lawyer and have had no time to prepare anything. I say what I think on the inspiration of the occasion. I don't care to attempt to conciliate the men who have started this attack upon me. It is their pet hobby, and I suppose they will ride it. But I should dislike to have a great paper like the Herald owned by no one, under obligations to no one, afraid of no one, lend its potency and influence to break down a man before he has taken hold of an office, the duties of which are in line with his profession, and the honest and fearless discharge of which will be the pleasure of his life. I thank you for the opportunity."

Wasn't no time; delay was dangerous ends; if a member of your family is suffering with a 'light cough or cold, don't wait until it develops into influenza, but procure at once a bottle of Dr. Bitts' Cough Syrup and cure that cough."

"Better be wise by the misfortune of others than by your own." Take warning in time. A cold or cough, if not cured, will develop into influenza, and you will be a victim of the disease. Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Often we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt; satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

West of south entrance to main building.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made?

1303 Chestnut.

Black satin rhademaes and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?

Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50--no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
