THE BELMONT DINNER.

A GREAT ASSEMBLAGE OF DEMOCRATS.

A Deserved Tender of Respect to the Young New York Congressman--Chairman House's Speech.

The dinner given to Perry Belmont, member of Congress for the First district of New York, on Sunday night, at Belmont's residence, was one of the scenes of the evening. It is an event also full of interest and of significance for the future of the Democratic party and of good government in New York, for it testifies to the genuine interest in public life, its duties and its opportunities, which is felt by the rising young men of the metropolis. The gentlemen who co-operated in this movement represent the most active and respectable classes of our citizens. They are New Yorkers of New York, and the testimonial of the friends and political regard offered by them to Mr. Belmont gives expression to a widespread and growing feeling among the intelligent young men of the present generation that the time has come when the great civil, industrial and financial issues which belong to the present day must come to the front of our public affairs and be dealt with practically and intelligently.

At 7:20 p. m. the doors of the large dining room were thrown open, and Mr. Belmont, leaving upon the arm of Mr. J. P. Prince entered the room, followed by the rest of the guests. The room was tastefully hung with flags and shields, while over the chairman's head there was a picture of Jefferson, copied from that in the City hall. There were four tables. At the head of the room there were on the right Mr. J. P. Prince, the chairman, Mr. Belmont, the Rev. Edward Clark, Lieut. Gov. David B. Hill and Mr. Clarke Bell. On the left of Mr. Prince sat Mr. Nelson J. Waterbury, jr., Mr. W. U. Hense, chairman of the Democratic state committee of Pennsylvania, Mr. Bayard Stockton, of New Jersey; Mr. Francis H. Woods, of Albany, and Mr. A. E. MacDonald. About 145 guests were present. The first toast to the guest of the evening was responded to by Mr. Belmont in a speech of some length, at the conclusion of which letters of regret were read by Governor-elect Cleveland, of New York, Patterson, of Pennsylvania, and Lieutenant Governor-elect Black, of Pennsylvania. At the conclusion of the letters the chairman rose and proposed the following toast:

PENNSYLVANIA.—In former years side by side with New York in the battles and triumphs of the Democratic cause; we compete with her in honorable rivalry, and rejoice in her redemption from the wrong and thralldom of a tyrant.

Mr. Hense, the chairman of the Pennsylvania Democratic state committee, rose in reply and said:

"MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN: I presume the Democratic state of Pennsylvania is what you mean. (Laughter and applause.) The morning after the election in our state I met a gentleman who had been associated with me in the state central committee. I spoke of our triumphs and asked him if he was not satisfied with the result. He replied that he was, but that the voters from New York had dwarfed Pennsylvania's work. (Applause.) And as I went home I could not help feeling that he was right. I had a feeling of humility when I thought that Texas had sent the Democratic banner to the Empire state. (Applause.) They got your invitation to attend this dinner I felt that we would all meet here to celebrate the Democratic victory in New York and Pennsylvania and all over the union; to celebrate what you and I believe to be the special fitness in our meeting together to honor the guest of the evening--(applause)--because he more particularly represents the young Democracy of the country. To me the fact that he is the guest whom we delight to honor is the pleasanter because my own state is under special obligations to him; he it was who manifested special interest in our fight. And so it was my duty as it was my pleasure to come here to night. (Applause.) It was the privilege of the Democracy of Pennsylvania to illustrate the forces, the power and the influence of the young Democrats in the country. The accusation was freely made against the candidate for governor that he was young. We did not reply as a great English statesman once did to a similar accusation, that it was a fault which would mend with time. (Laughter.) We were content to answer back that in every stage of the world's history the vigor of youth has been as necessary to the wellbeing of the body politic as the wisdom of age. We might have said that our candidate was no younger than David when he met the Philistine, no younger than Paul when he preached against the follies and corruptions of the Ephesians. He was older than Alexander when he sighted the towers of the shadow of the Pyramids, older than Pitt when he was prime minister of England, older than Thomas Jefferson when he wrote the Declaration of Independence, older than Alexander Hamilton when he became secretary of the treasury, older than Calhoun and Clay when they like giants banded into the political arena, older than Perry Belmont when I went down the aisle in Congress and gallantly touched his lance upon the shield of the plumed knight of Maine and lowered his plume to rise no more. (Great applause.) He was six years older than he was when he began his career as reform controller of Philadelphia, and he will be four years older still when he enters his first term as reform governor of Pennsylvania. His administration will be like the genial summer rain to the parched earth in the corrupt political life of my state. (Applause.) I do not hold in light esteem the wisdom of those who founded the party to which we all belong. But I have read that a party can only live on its traditions when it lives up to these traditions. (Applause.) If the Democratic party has under bad leadership strained the rights of the states, or if it has too far deprived the general government of power, it has done wrong. If the Democratic doctrine is to keep the proper balance between the two, exalting neither above its proper place. (Applause.) If the Democratic party has been false to the hard money principles of Jackson (applause), if it has given countenance to a bad system of taxation, it has been false to the principles of the fathers of the republic. If it has favored corporations above the law it has gone against the fundamental principle of Democracy that in the people lies all the power (applause), that the creature cannot be greater than the creator. Oliver Wendell Holmes has said that there are only two classes in American society, the men on horseback and the men in their shirt sleeves. If this be true, then the Democratic party are always on the side of the men in their shirt sleeves. (Applause.) The Democrats of New York, of Pennsylvania, of the whole country hold in grateful memory the men who have held Democratic principles in the past. Far distant be the day when Democrats will turn a deaf ear to the calm conservatism of such men as Seymour (applause) or slight the wisdom of such men as Samuel J. Tilden. (Cheers and applause.) Before such men the young Democracy can well feel that they sit and learn. But no men know better than these that when the time comes when they must lay down their weapons it is to the young men of to-day that those weapons must be bequeathed as when the veterans took them up. (Applause.) The best hope of the Democratic party to-day is illustrated in the late elections. I believe with Governor Cleveland (applause) that Democratic principles, honestly applied, will furnish the best and only remedy for political evils. All honest men are looking for such a remedy. It seems to me that the Democratic party, which is the party of local self-government, is coming into power by local victories. In gaining states we can hope to gain control of the general government. (Applause.) By honest exercise of the control we have got we can show that we are worthy of the presidency in 1884. By carrying out the promises we have made we can show that we will carry out those we make. Our victory now enables us to anticipate the victory we will win. This dinner is a stone which marks our course, an event which we will all recollect as being one of those which points out to us the gains we have made as well as those we have yet to make. (Loud and continued applause.)

Mr. Bayard Stockton responded to the toast of New Jersey, and when Governor-elect was proposed a letter from Governor-elect Waller was read.

Lieutenant Governor Hill responded to the toast of the state of New York, and speeches were also made by Francis H. Woods, of Albany, Dr. MacDonald and Col. Clarke, of Kentucky.

MEDICAL.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whisky, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whisky and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. O. W. RICE, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin. O., Nov. 15, 1881. Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and it applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Often we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Next-door etre, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

West of south entrance to main building.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made?

Black satin rhademaes and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?

Next-door etre, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50--no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
