FREMAY FVENING JAN. 5, 1883,

THE CONSPIRACY LAWS.

Labor May Unite for Protection as Well a Capital. ino cars ago D. R. Jones, president of the Miners' Association, was arrested at the matance of the Waverly coal company and used in Westmoreland county for con phacy. His offense was that, in com pany with other miners and a brass band, he visited the works of the Waverly coal company for the purpose of inducing the miners to strike for higher wages. Jones was convicted and sentenced to a day's imp. semment in the Westmoreland county it! Since then the Waverly coal compart, has preferred another charge of respiracy, based on the same grounds against Jones and the proprietors of the National Labor Tribune, claiming $70,000 damages. The case is set for trial next month. Jones wrote to Hon. Jere Black for his views and received the following

"I cannot promise to be present at your trial because I have other engagements which are likely to make it impossible. I must therefore decline any tender of fees which would bind me to act as your counsel. I do not see any constitutional question in the cause, as you state it : but it involves some points of criminal law, which, though interesting, are easily

"Any number of employers may combine together and act in concert to reduce the wages of their workmen, and nobody has ever called that a conspiracy; but if the laborers in a shop unite to increase their wages and threaten to quit unless they are better paid, this, according to the old decisions in England and America, is a criminal offense.

"More recent cases, however, lay down the rule that a body of laborers may as lawfully say what they will take as employers may determine what they will give. Somewhat slowly, and with evident reluctance, capitalists have suffered the judicial mind to reach the conclusion that the employer does not exactly own the workmen. If, therefore, the aim of your asociation was nothing worse than to put up the price of your labor to a satisfactory standard and to counteract the natural tendency of other interests to reduce it, you are innocent people and the court will say so.

"I infer from your letter that you solicited others to join with you and make a demand for wages as high as your own, or else stop work. That was not wrong either. If you had a right to form the association, you had an equal right to get as many into it as you could, so that outsiders might not defeat its purpose by cutting under, but you did not confine your membership or your influence to your immediate fellows working together with you in the employment of the same master. You went to another mine owned by other parties and persuaded or tried to persuade the underpaid coal diggers there that justice to themselves, as to you, required them to lay down their tools unless they got the rates generally received in the neighborhood. At first blush this looks like intermeddling with a matter which did not concern you; but in truth you had a fair interest in it, because the acceptance of smaller compensation by one always tends to depress that of another. Your resistance to low wages was, no doubt, weakened by the submission of others near you. 'This principle is un derstood by employees. If Scott and Garrett and Jewett would agree to reduce the wages of the laborers on their railroad 20 per cent., Vanderbile's refusel to do likewise would be a thing of evil example in their eyes, and they would exert all their influence to make him come down to their level. " Persons engaged in a common cause whether it be to raise or lower wages, are entitled to the support of others i they can get it by fair mean. They charge, you, however, with getting or attempting to get the concurrence you wanted rict armis, that is to say, by force and with arms. If your association went to the other mine in a body or sent a very large delegation, it was not worse than any other big meeting, unless you behaved with unlawful violence. Our institutions and habits rather encourage the peaceable show of numbers as a means of pursuasion, All organizations, political, religious and charitable resort to it, but you went there, or said you would go, with a brass band. I do not think this implied violence or any threat of violence. A trumpet or a trombone is not a deadly weapon, and music is not essentially wicked, or else it would not be used as it always is in church and camp meetings. In addition to these charges of conspiracy and riot you are accused, as I understand, of bribery. The miners whom you were trying to convert to your way of thinking, had agreed that they would forfeit $10 apiece if they did not work a full year at the rate of wages previously agreed upon between them and their employers. This penalty of accepting your doctrino, and acting upon it, they could not pay without assistance. Your association offered to give them the necessary material aid. This does not come within any common law or statutory definition of bribery that I know of.

"I may have misconceived this whole case. If I have, it is your fault, I take the facts as I gather them from your statement, which does not profess to be perfect or full. But, assuming it to be proximately correct as a general outline, you are certainly in no danger of even being tried, for the district attorney is a gentleman much too sensible to ask a conviction on such grounds."

" Did She Die?

No: she lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time, for years, the doctors doing her no good; and at last was cured by this flop Bitters the papers say so much about. Indeed! indeed! how thankful we should be for that medicine."
