FARM AND GARDEN.

HUSBANDMAN AND HOUSEHOLDERS

Timely Notes for Agriculturalists—Hints for Poultry Raisers—Literary Miscellany

H. P. Clarke in Germantown Telegraph.

Take hens of any breed and let them "shirk" for themselves, both summer and winter, and it will be found the profit is not large. In summer they will do very well if they have the free range of a farm, but when winter comes they will only lay once in a while. Now take the same breed and the same fowls, and care for them as fowls should be cared for both winter and summer, and you will be delighted at the difference in egg production. Extra care and feed not only pay in eggs but better eggs.

In the first place hens must be free from lice and in good health. Construct your houses well and warm, so as to avoid damp floors as half and a third of sunshine—sunshine being better than medicine. Provide a dusting and scratching place, where you can bury wheat and corn, and thus induce your fowls to take needful exercise and keep warm by these chilly winter days. Give plenty of fresh water or milk daily, and never allow the fowls to go thirsty. Water or milk that is a little warm is the best at this time of the year. Feed them systematically two or three times a day and scatter the grain so that they cannot eat too fast or without proper exercise. Do not feed more than they will eat up clean, or they will get tired of that kind of feed. Give soft feed in the morning and grain at night. Cooked meal or vegetables, mixed with bran, a teaspoonful of charcoal, and a little red pepper is a good morning meal; and three-fourths corn and one-fourth wheat or screening is a good evening meal for this time of year.

Those breeders of poultry who have cows can supply their fowls with milk, and it is very good for laying hens. Most of the refuse milk, if not all of it, generally goes to the pigs, and no doubt benefits them greatly; but it would pay better to turn it into chicken flesh instead of pork, unless there is enough for a liberal supply of both. Whether sweet or sour, thick or not, the fowls and chicks relish milk, and should have a fresh supply kept in a clean and convenient trough, where they can take what they want and when they want it.

It is not absolutely necessary that fowls should be thus taken care of; if a person has fowls of a good hardy breed (and all farmers should have), the fowls may be left out doors to roost on trees or fences, and they may get along all right; but it is always best to be sure your fowls are all right.

Don't Agree.

Germantown Telegraph.

In a cotemporary out West we notice a recommendation to farmers, in order to secure their wheat against severe frost and the freezings and thawings of early spring, to roll it while the snow is a few inches deep. We regard this advice as not merely a mistake, but dangerous. Every practical farmer ought to know that the pecking of the snow closely upon the grain is liable to shut out the air, and is just the thing by the simplest of means to do. We venture to express the opinion that there are few farmers of forty years of age in any part of the country where the temperature falls to zero but who can recollect that when heavy snows have fallen, followed by a freezing rain or sleet, completely coating the snow, they have proved, from the same cause—want of air—most disastrous to the wheat crop. On the contrary, we would suggest that instead of rolling the snow, roll the wheat in the absence of snow, as early in the spring as the ground will admit of it. This will force the roots, which the alternate thawings and freezings may have spewed out, back into their natural position, firmly re-establishing the plant and restoring the crop, which otherwise might be seriously damaged by the exposure of the roots to the drying process of the atmosphere, and the lack of support to the growing stalk. We have known this method to be tried repeatedly and always when necessary and the opportunity offers, with the most encouraging results; and we again suggest to others who have not experimented to do so, and we are confident that they will feel it a duty to report the result for our columns in order that a fact so important to every farmer may be fully known.

Keeping Pears and Apples.

Germantown Telegraph.

Being asked a few days ago, on handing a friend a couple of fine yellow Lawrence pears just in condition to eat, how we kept the pears so long in such an excellent state, we replied that the surest way to begin was not to eat them all up; but there must be a suitable place in which to prepare them, in order to have them to eat in the depth of winter. We told him there were several modes, which we had from time to time published, in which apples and pears, of the right varieties, could be kept until spring. Our way, however, is different from most people, but the arrangement was somewhat expensive. We dug a cave through the wall of the cellar into the solid ground; arched it over with brick; run a three inch pipe outside to admit of the pure air; arranged lattice shelves around; inclined the bottom of the cave to the centre, where a three inch pipe with a wire screen on top was inserted a sufficient depth to reach the sand, which, draining off all the water, left the cave at all times perfectly dry. Whether perfect darkness had anything to do with the preservation of the fruit we cannot say; but last year we had Lawrence pears, of good flavor and condition, the last week of April.

By the way, we think that our method of draining the cave could be equally applied to cellars of whatever size. This is simply to carefully incline every part of the ground to a common centre, where a three inch tile-pipe should be inserted to a sufficient depth to reach sand or rock, and protecting the top of the pipe with a wire screen, and the work is done at about one-fourth or one-eighth the expense and double the efficiency of an outside drain, and would provide no harbor for rats as the outside drains do.

Grape Vines Upon Trees.

Germantown Telegraph.

What folly it is to discuss the propriety of running grape vines up trees and let them run there at will, instead of pruning them carefully and tying them to a trellis, as every intelligent grape grower does. One writer says that he has succeeded admirably in getting "an abundant yield of grapes" by letting the vines run over his trees, "just where they like, and let them climb higher and higher," &c. No doubt he gets "an abundance of grapes." We did so too when we tried this plan, but they became "poorer and poorer" with every succeeding year, and "higher and higher" from the ground until they become difficult and dangerous to pick, and utterly worthless when they were picked. We fancy this writer is without a palate—many persons are—and with him a grape is a grape all the same, though scarcely fit for the hogs; but if he expects to convince others that this lazy, do nothing way of raising grapes or any other crop will be imitated by anybody of more sense than himself—and we should say they are still a few left—why he is at least liable to be disappointed. Five and twenty years ago, when this mode was strongly recommended, we tried the Isabella, Catawba and Powell grape after this miserable fashion, and the result was we had plenty of fruit, but certainly none fit for human consumption. We now have a Concord running over a pear tree all to itself, with like result. We do not dream of gathering the grapes, as they are not worth the trouble.

SOUND TALK.

Although From an Unexpected Quarter.

Harrisburg Telegraph.

Is there a member of either branch of the Legislature who does not know in his heart that he is not promoting honesty when he rides on a free pass? Is there a judge of the supreme or lower courts who, when he accepts a free pass, does not know that the pass was given to him as a specious bribe? You cannot serve two masters. If you are the legislators of the people you have no right to use a free pass. If you are the servants of a railroad you have no right to hold the office of legislator. If judges accept passes they must give an equivalent for it or they cheat the railroad that gave it to them. If as judges they give the railroads an equivalent for a free pass, they are untrue to the people whose judges they are... Every Republican member of both branches of the Legislature should declare himself at once and emphatically in favor of honest legislation, and exert himself to secure it. If the people of Philadelphia want a better city government they should have it. If they want legislation which will enable them to oust those who have plundered the city they should have it. The better element not only in Philadelphia but throughout the state should govern. The political ringsters of both parties who in the city and county government have combined to live off the people should be relegated to the back ground and better and honester officials should be selected. It will require legislation to secure this and there should be no difficulty in obtaining it. The Telegraph will vigilantly watch the course of legislation this winter, and will fearlessly and promptly expose any member who attempts to betray the interests of the people, be he Republican or Democrat. The Telegraph believes in honest government and those who shape legislation this winter may just as well take warning now, as hereafter, that it will only support those who endeavor to secure honest government. The Telegraph can afford to speak out because it has nothing to fear. No official lash can be held over it to awe it into silence. While it is unfaltering in its devotion to Republican principles and the success of the Republican party, it believes that true success can only be secured by honest measures and honest men, and it will support no other.

The Bible in Japan.

Recent letters from the agent of the American Bible society in Japan convey intelligence which is indicative of the rapid progress of Christianity in that empire. It is also the first that a number of Japanese Christians had presented a formal and earnest appeal to be allowed an active part in the work of translating the Old Testament. They speak of the translation of the Bible as a great work and far-reaching in its consequences; of the blessings which had come to them through the New Testament which was been already published and widely circulated; of the severe evils which would ensue if the remaining work was not wisely done; and of the want of uniformity in style which would be sure to mark a translation which was produced by the labors of many different scholars working apart. They therefore submit a plan, the substance of which is as follows:

1. That the whole work be given to one translating committee instead of the different books to individual translators.

2. That the committee be composed of eight members, four of whom shall be foreigners and four Japanese.

3. That the Japanese members be chosen by Japanese Christians.

4. That the foreigners and Japanese members have equal rights in voting.

5. That means be furnished to enable the members to devote their whole time to the work.

When it is remembered that it is only a few years since Christians were permitted even to enter Japan, such action as this is truly astonishing, and must awaken the most profound gratitude.

Wanamaker's.

Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpectable one, go to Wanamaker's."

The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.

Oftener we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Next outer circle, south entrance to main building.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.

West of south entrance to main building.

Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as to making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this it is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made? 1763 Chestnut.

Black satin rhademaes and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?

Next outer circle, south entrance to main building.

Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50—no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.

Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
