AT REDUCED PRICES.

We have fifteen different qualities of Scarlet Shirts and Drawers, ranging in price from $1.00 to $4.00 for single pieces, or $2.00 to $8.00 for suits. And from these we have four special bargains which cannot be bought anywhere else. An All-Wool Scarlet Shirt for $1.00, which for weight and warmth has no equal. Drawers to match.

21. Scarlet Medicated Shirts and Drawers, purchased by the dozen. These would be cheap at $1.00, but we have marked them at a very close price, an easy selling item at $1.25.

22. Scarlet Medicated All-Wool Shirts at $1.25, worth $1.50. We have only a remnant lot of this quality, and for that reason they are reduced to less than cost, to clear them out.

23. All-Wool Medicated Shirts and Drawers at $1.50 (seconds). We have sold three cases of these goods already this season, and the opinion of everyone who has seen them is that they are equal to any $2.00 shirts in the market.

"BLACK DEATH"

THE GOLDFINDER'S TERRIBLE TRIP.

Plague Stricken and Tempest Tossed—A Horrible Tale of the Sea—Written by a Short Cruise.

The brig Goldfinder, ice shrouded and with tattered sails showing pain and death, is now at anchor in the breakwater. The dead body of one of its crewed crew is stretched upon her decks awaiting a visit from the Sussex county coroner. Captain E. B. Dennis left Lewes for New York on Friday afternoon, and the vessel of the voyage has been left in the port with kind hearted and sympathetic newspaper. The vessel is owned in Port-au-Prince, and flying the Haytian flag, sailed from Miraguanay with a cargo of log wood on the 19th of December, with two white men and a crew of four, mostly American. The crew consisted of Captain Dennis, one mate and five seamen. When a few hours out a stormy weather his appearance from the hold of the brig. The horrors of the voyage began to show when the vessel was overtaken by a heavy fog. The day after leaving port the crew was attacked by a terrible epidemic fever, which resembled the famous "black death" of Charles II's time. His ravages were dreadful, and the poor wretches, after suffering for several days, died one by one. The day after the vessel was overtaken by a heavy fog, and their bodies were thrown overboard by the vessel. Their bodies were seen on the 19th of December, and the captain, his mate and one sailor, an old man, were left to manage the vessel. Their experience has seldom been surpassed in horror even by the storm-tossed adventures of the Arctic seas. Scarcely had the last of the fever victims been thrown overboard when the brig and its little crew encountered a heavy sea, and the tremendous sea made the work of keeping the vessel from swamping almost impossible. The situation grew more critical as the days passed. Night and day, with only a few hours rest at a time, the crew labored in the every jaws of death, not knowing as the winds became stronger and at times almost reached a hurricane, but that any moment would be their last of life. One dark night, when the tempest was howling like mad through the masting rigging, the vessel was overtaken by a heavy sea, and the vessel would capsize, a instant the rushing of a great monster of the sea caused the captain to wonder what horror was coming upon them. The next instant the dark object passed within a few feet of the vessel. It was a huge ocean steamer, which had narrowly escaped out of the fog in time. The vessel at that time the steamer had been so weak that he could scarcely pull a rope, and as it was the only vessel in the vicinity of the steamer, a freezing breeze was encountered, which was accompanied by a terrible tempest. The topsails were blown away like so many ribbons, and the vessel was split in several places. The vessel began to leak, and in a few minutes was covered with a thick layer of ice. The sails were as stiff as boards, and the decks were as slippery as a skating rink. The ropes of the rigging were heavy with icicles. The vessel was in a perilous position, and the captain, Dennis, believed that the vessel would be wrecked. "Our feet, hands, ears and faces soon presented a pitiful spectacle. They were terribly frost-bitten and we endured all this in a cold and a snow storm. So terrible was our condition that we could not stand. We could not cook food, and were threatened with starvation. All we could do was to keep the brig on her course, and wait for assistance. We encountered a snow storm on last Saturday, which soon almost buried the decks, and we were covered with it. We could not see a foot, however, over the night through the old sails were becoming so wet and heavy every day. The breeze increased in violence as we neared the cape, and the cold was the most terrible ever experienced. The ice was so thick that we had to be lowered. The old man was finally ordered to go below, but could not walk, and actually froze to death before our eyes. We had not even strength to throw him overboard, and his stiffened body was allowed to remain on the deck, when it was covered with a winding sheet of snow. At last the two of us left my mate and I gave up all hope of ever reaching port alive, and with our last strength dropped the anchor, not knowing where we were, and laid our heads down.

On Monday the brig drifted to her anchor at the rate of three miles, and the vessel was picked up about eleven miles southeast of Cape Henlopen by the brig North America, which towed it into the Delaware breakwater. I saw and heard the most terrible experiences of the frightful night," said the captain. Captain Dennis has gone to Boston to report to the agents of the Goldfinder, Messrs E. P. Wilder & Bro. The crew of the brig were shipped at Boston.

DYING CONFESSIONS.

Which Came Too Late to Save Innocent Men.

Reader Moore's dying confession in Erie county, Pa., in connection with the trial and conviction of Charles Stafford has caused a reaction of public feeling greater than existed at the time of the commission of the crime, while the sheriff and a posse had to resist an armed band of indignant citizens, bent upon lynching Stafford. Cummings, the man sent for by the suicide to be the repository of his secret, will not yet give the particulars of the confessions given by the trial Moore's story, but Moore's belief that Stafford believed that Moore confessed to having perjured himself on the trial. It is not believed he was the actual perpetrator of the deed, for about two years ago an Erie county man, living in Michigan, confessed the crime a few months before he died. As the official report of the trial Moore's confession was taken by the board of pardons and the public, generally relying upon the testimony of Reader Moore, given at the trial, discredited the story.

Moore and Stafford were known to be enemies, and at the trial Moore swore that Stafford had in confidence admitted he was the masked man who committed the crime. Stafford stoutly denied such an admission, and in open court he called on heaven to record as rank perjurer the evidence given by Moore. The jurors said they could not believe Moore's testimony, or they could not believe Stafford's testimony. Stafford upon the circumstantial evidence had the scale and convinced them of his guilt. Stafford was sentenced to twenty years in the Western penitentiary and has served six years.

The particulars of the crime for which Stafford was convicted are as follows: In August, 1876, Miss Alice Woodward, a girl of eighteen, and so popular in the village of Cambridge that she was called the Flower of Cambridge, was by a letter decoyed to a distant part of the borough, near the edge of a dense wood, where she was confronted by a man wearing a white mask, who seized her, dragged her into the woods. Her clothes were torn from her and the life was almost choked out of her to stop her screams. When the fiend had reached a certain part of the woods he released her and made known the object of her abduction. She besought him for the love of her mother and sisters to desist from his wicked purpose and let her go home. The only answer was a violent blow on the head, which felled her to the ground and deprived her of consciousness. She was discovered later in a terrible condition. The villagers turned out on a mass and beat the woods for the fiend, but without success. A week later young Stafford, of Erie was arrested. He was confronted by the victim and made to speak. Miss Woodward could not identify him positively, owing to the mask for assistance, but she thought she recognized his voice. This circumstance came near causing Stafford's death at the hands of the populace. Petitions were drawn up for signatures and when the board of pardons met in February next, petitions and some other lines of hope were presented by Lawyer Henry Butterfield, to whom Stafford's case has been committed.

The Dying Confessions of a Murderer.

In Concord, N. H., Charles W. Cook, who was committed to state prison in 1879 for the murder of Susan Hanson, in November, 1874, died of consumption on January 9, aged twenty-five. On the confession of Cook Joseph Buswell was hanged for hiring Cook to shoot Miss Hanson. At the time of his arrest Cook was considered half-witted, but learned to read and write in prison. He left a confession which admits of being a murderer, but he testified falsely concerning Buswell being present when the deed was committed. He says that after Buswell got to Wolfborough, on the day of the murder, he related, and show back at a brick neck speed to Bradford's prison. From there he fled, but after twenty months he got back to his home, the woman and child as he said, as Buswell had done.

FOUR PLAYS SUSPECTED.

A Wealthy Widow of Troy, Conn., Dead in 80.

In Troy, Mrs. Abigail Jones, a widow of 80, and reputed to be very wealthy, was found dead in the living room in her residence. She was very recently clothed and had no shoes and only one stocking on. When her face first passed the floor the neighbors were called, and a doctor was summoned. The body was removed by Emma Loomis, a lady living in the basement. Mrs. Jones was possessed of considerable property consisting of real estate in the vicinity, but she lived alone and was the victim of insane delusions. She was found dead by her neighbor who was a married lady, and the post-mortem examination showed that she had died of heart disease. Her body was found in the living room, and she was found with her face to the wall. The doctor who examined the body said she had died of heart disease. Her husband was a wealthy builder of Troy, and has been dead twenty-five years.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

Brown's Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved His Child.

17 N. Eastw. St., Baltimore, Md. Feb. 12, 1883.

Gents—Upon the recommendation of a friend I procured Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was having convalescing from a severe attack of consumption, and she has been cured by the use of your medicine. I was much surprised to find that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but to my great surprise she has been cured. I had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, but she had to be taken now and is quite restored to former health. A fifth course began to show signs of consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "tonics were required," and when informed that the older sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

AGORAM DRUGS.

Brown's Iron Bitters effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.

Brown's Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

17 N. Eastw. St., Baltimore, Md. Feb. 12, 1883.

Gents—Upon the recommendation of a friend I procured Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was having convalescing from a severe attack of consumption, and she has been cured by the use of your medicine. I was much surprised to find that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but to my great surprise she has been cured. I had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, but she had to be taken now and is quite restored to former health. A fifth course began to show signs of consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "tonics were required," and when informed that the older sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

AGORAM DRUGS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

Brown's Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.
