His Adventures and Misadventures. The other night Daniel Lefevre, who resides near Neffsville, drove to Lancaster to take the cars for the west. Unknown to him his dog, of the shepherd breed, followed him. Mr. Lefevre put his team and dog in charge of Fred Brimmer, liveryman, to keep until he came back. The dog was locked up in a stall, the door of which is made of flooring boards. During the night the dog gnawed a hole in the boards, large enough to premit him to escape, but as his master's team was on the premises he remained with it. On Friday Edw. WORD TO MY FRIENDS AND PATRONS Since our great reduction in the prices of our heavy weight goods we have closed out some of our best styles. We have left a few very choice patterns of overcoating, to which we direct especial attention. We are selling daily to persons who never pattentized us before; an evidence of our sincerity. Many no doubt called to see whether we are in carnest doubt called to see whether we are in earnest and mean what we say, or whether it is all humbuck. All who thus far called on us are convinced we mean business and are determined to sell off our heavy weights at any sacrifice to make room for our new spring stock. Last week a friend of mine called to pay me a friendly visit. He remarked he read my card in our daily papers and concluded to take a look through the stock to see whether he could find anything to please him for a sait. It didn't take him long to decide. After offer-It didn't take him long to decide. After offering him a fine French Casimere suit worth $45 tor $30, I said to him (a la Sam'l of Posen,) "Don't you want to buy an elegant overcoat cheap?" "Oh," he said, "the one I am wearing is good yet; you made this one 12 years ago, and I wore it hard." "But," says I, "you below the base of our great shanghter should take advantage of our great slaughte in prices; here is an overcoat worth $ 0. lines all through with slik. put up in the highest style of art, I will sell you for $30." The sale was immediately effected. Yesterday a strat-ger passing by, saw this overcoat displaced in my store window, and stepped in to ask the price of it. When he found it was sold he offered $40 for one like it. But these goods cannot be duplicated, as they were imported for me direct to special order. Now my friends and patrons, don't find fault with me for giving these bargains to strangers. They are open for all. Place your orders at once, or the very styles you may want may be gone. We are having a great boom in our English Trou-erings at the prices we are selling them. Re member, they range in prices from $3.50 to $10

RUSHING WATERS.

THE GREAT DAMAGE DONE IN OHIO Killed-The Ice in the Susque

hanna River.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 5.-Dispatches

from points in this state show that the floods had not abated last evening. Several railroad bridges have been swept away. A freight train on the Valley railroad was derailed yesterday near Canton in consequence of a wash out and John McAllister, foreman, was killed, and Frank Ingersoll, engineer, fatally injured. Between Akron and Orrville a passenger train ran into a wash-out and another following dashed into the wreck. The sleeping car porter was killed and half a dozen passengers injured. The Lake Shore bridge at Fremont went down before the rush of ice yesterday carrying a freight train with it. Isaac Parker, conductor, and a brakeman, were killed. Fremont is flooded and several persons are reported drowned. Much damage is reported in the valleys in the northern portion of the state.

Further Details.

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 5 .-- Fuller information received to-day increases the previous estimates of the losses by the floods. The New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad has trains running between Kent and Galion. The Cuyahoga Valley road cannot be operated for several days to come. The Connoton Valley road will send a trial train from Canton this afternoon. On the Tuscorawas Valley road trains have been abandoned. Drawing the water south from Summit Lake to save the city carried away the bridge on the Cleveland, Akron Columbus railroad, just as a crowded Fort Wayne express train got across. A Connoton coal train has been litched at Brimfield in a washout, and the brakeman, James McAllister, was killed.
