Jeanette's Hair. "Oh, loosen the curls that you wear, Jeanette, loosen the curls that you wear, Jeanette, let them tangle my hand in your hair, my pet."

It was brown with a golden gloss, Jeanette, it was finer than the silk of the dress, my pet. 'Twas a beautiful mist falling down to your wrist.

'Twas a thing to be braided and jeweled and kissed. 'Twas the loveliest hair in the world, my pet. My arm was the arm of a clown, Jeanette. It was shrewy, bristled and brown, my pet. But warmly and softly it loved to caress.

Your round white neck and your wealth of tress. Your beautiful plenty of hair, my pet. Your eyes had a swimming glory, Jeanette. Revealing the old, dear story, my pet: They were gray with the clasped tinge of the sky.

When the trout leaps quickest to snap the fly, And they match with your golden hair, my pet. Your lips—oh! I have no words, Jeanette. They were fresh as the twitter of birds, my pet.

When the Spring is young, and the roses are wet. With the dew-drops in each red bosom set. And they smiled your gold-brown hair, my pet.

Oh, you tangled my hair in your hair, Jeanette. 'Twas a golden and golden share, my pet. But so gentle the fondling, my soul did inspire.

The right to continue your slave evermore. With my fingers enmeshed in your hair, my pet. Thus ever I dream what you were, Jeanette. With your lips and your eyes and your hair my pet.

In the darkness of God's love I mean, And my tears fall lightly over the stone That covers your golden hair, my pet. —Charles G. Dalrymple ("My O'Neil.")

CHICKEN FEED. The Way to Raise Poultry. A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, after forty years' experience in feeding chickens, has found nothing so good in the morning as corn and oats ground together and wheat bran. These two kinds of meal must be mixed into a stiff dough with boiling hot water. For about seventy-five Brahmans, mix when the weather is very cold, six quarts; put in one teaspoonful of salt, and three or four times a week put in as much red pepper as you can put on the point of a pocket knife blade, or say as much as a snuff taker would take in two pinches. Give this as early in the morning as the chickens come of the roost. For dinner give three or four quarts of whole corn and oats mixed, or buckwheat instead of oats in winter. In summer they do not need any noon feeding. For the last meal at night give as much whole corn and scraps as they will eat. Always keep broken oyster shells and dry ashes or gravel where the chickens can get to them. For green food give anything you may have, such as cabbage, turnips cut up fine, or anything of this kind. Turnips and potatoes, cut and mashed at the morning feeding are excellent. If you add these you do not require so much meal. Give the mash in the morning as hot as they can eat it; if you can put your finger into it without pain, you need not fear to give it to the chickens. Any kind of cooked food, such as molasses, or a little of meat, potatoes, all kinds of vegetables—in fact, almost anything which is cooked for human beings, is good for chickens. Chickens must not be over fed; if they are, they will produce many eggs. The best time to feed is in the evening, to give no more than they will eat up clean, without stopping to go away and come back. Chickens fed in this manner and kept in a dry place (not too close; better with open than closed up so that there is not a close air) will give you eggs from the first of December straight through the winter, and nearly all summer.

A FATAL PRACTICAL JOKE. A Stan Street's Gun in West and Kiska Little Girl. Tuesday evening a little girl named Letitia, daughter of Charles MacNamee, living in Appleton row, North ward, Phoenixville, was shot dead by Matthew Hartigan, a neighbor. The girl had been to the residence of a neighbor at the eastern end of the row; she left there, passed her home and proceeded to the residence of Hartigan in the western end of the row. Exactly as she entered the yard in front of his house a shot was fired through the front window. The girl fell crying "Mamma." She was picked up dead and carried to her home.

It appears there was a party of young people spending the evening at Hartigan's, who were in one room while he was in another. He called his wife, told her he was going to fire his gun through the window to frighten the visitors, and that she should not be frightened. He told a young man in the room that the gun was loaded with a marble. He fired, as he said he would, and shot the little girl, purely accidental.
