LIFE IN TEXAS.

AS VIEWED BY THE FUNNY MAN. Stray Notes of Daily Events in Austin Picked up by the "siftings"

Reporter. An Austin journalist put in an appearance at the inaugural ball. There was a mob there, it is true, but the journalist's coat was so shabby that one of the committee whispered in his ear, "Haven't you got another coat at home?" "Yes, I have another one." "Why didn't you put it on?" "Because it ain't near as good as this one."

He Passed Two gentlemen, one of them a legislator, strolled carelessly past a saloon. After they had passed twenty steps beyond the saloon, the ligislator stopped and

"Let us go back and get a drink." "I thought you promised your wife not to drink while you were in Austin?' "No, I didn't promise that. I promised when I came to a saloon I would go past it, and I have kept it like a man. I have passed the saloon; now let us go back and get a drink as a reward for keeping my promise.'

"Do you know Bill Simpson?" asked one legislator of another, as they met in an Austin bar room. "Know him? I should say I did! He tried to take my life when I lived in New Journalistic Intelligence.

" Did he try to shoot you?" "He made a worse attempt on my life than that. I was editing a paper, and hadn't eaten anything for a week. I was nearly starved to death. I asked him for a quarter to get something to eat, and he refused to let me have it. He ought to have been arrested for attempting to deprive a prominent journalist of his life.'

Putting on Style. A legislator noticed a brother legislator on a very cold day without any overcoat, so he asked: "Where is your overcoat?"

"It's at the pawbroker's shop. I have had bad luck at monte." "Well, if you cau't wear the overcoat, why don't you pin the pawn ticket on your back, and let the people know that they are fooling themselves when they think you haven't got one. You should remember that you are expected to maintain the dignity of the state of Texas while you are here in Austin."

A Bad Hand. An Austin merchant, who writes an in famously bad hand, recently employed a young man to act as copying clerk. The first letter given the latter to copy was so utterly illegible that he took it back to the merchant to have it deciphered. The merchant, who is very irascible, snatched the letter out of the clerk's hand, remark-

"Why, any fool can read that. Just give it to me and I'll read it." He made several attempts to read his own handwriting, but failed, whereupon he said with great dignity: "I didn't write that letter for me to read it myself. I wrote it for you to copy it, and if you haven't got sense enough to do it, I'll get somebody who has " False Delicacy An Austin colored lady, who occupies the position of cook in an aristocratic family, on her way to see her mother, met another colored female. The first party had a basket half-full of pilfered meat she had stolen from her employer.

" How am you comin' on wid dem white folks whar you is hired out?" "I'se gwine ter leab em. Dey hasn't paid de butcher in sich a long time I'se ashamed ter go out ter his wagon when he fotches de meat. Take one ob dese steaks home wid you, and give it ter your ole mudder wid my compliments," and the conscientious creature handed out one of the unpaid-for steaks she had stolen from her employer. Some Austin amateurs recently got up a theatrical performance called the Captive Crusader. Gus De Smith and Kosiosko Murphy took leading parts. Between the acts, behind the scenes, Murphy, who was the Captive Crusades, begged Gus to Nearly all grew, and they became year by lend him a quarter.

"How much?" and open road has become an avenue "Only a quarter," where people resort for pleasant drives. "Can't think of it. You know well enough that in the next act I have to raise a ransom of 100,000 piastres to pay the sultan before I will be allowed to return to Jerusalem. 6. That settles it," responded Murphy gloomily. The following conversation between two Austin inebriates was overheard a few "I wish the summer would come, so the nights would be short; it would be money in my pocket," remarked the worst looking one of the two. "How would you save money by the nights being shorter?" "Well, you see, time's money," and I lose a heap of time in winter by the saloons not opening until half past six. In summer I can begin work an hour sooner." A hack was going up Austin avenue, when two boys, one white and the other black, jumped on the seat, but somebody on the sidewalk signalled to the driver, who reached around at them with his whip. The darkey jumped off, but the white boy kept his seat. The driver, however, kept on reaching around with his whip, and every once in awhile the lash would hit the legs of the white boy, who wanted to ride, no matter what happened. Finally, he could stand it no longer, and standing up on the seat he called out :

"You confounded fool, don't you know I am here? Don't you know that nigger jumped off ever so long ago?" The Logic of Childhood. An Austin family recently purchased a cow. Heretofore the family had got the milk for their coffee from the milkman, and little Johnny, like many other people, had no very well defined idea how the milkman got the milk. The cow happened to be a white one, and after Johnny had watched the milking process for some time, he remarked meditatively: " Pa, you get milk from the white cow. but where is the black cow?" "What do we want a black cow for, Johnny?" "To squeeze the coffee out of her, pa."

Garrett Boice is thinking of going to Mexico, so he asked a gentleman just roturned from that country about the bad feeling existing between the Americans and the natives. "How do the Americans and Mexicans on over in Mexico? Do they have n over in Mexico? Do they have much intercourse with each other? Do they agree?" asked Garrett.

"Is the feeling between them so bit-on speaking terms."

Col. Simeon Belmuddy was elected to an office, and of course he was very proud of being a public man, but his wife, who is not particularly well educated, is perfectly carried away with enthusiasm at the idea of his being a public official, and takes all the honor of his election to her-

Mrs. Belmuddy was present, shortly after the election, at a social gathering on Austin avenue. The elite of the city were also present. Somebody happened to remark to her : "You go out a great deal more since the election than you did before, do you not, Mrs. Belmuddy?' "O, yes," replied Mrs. Belmuddy; "now that I have become a public person, I am out on the streets a great deal.' Tableaux.

The Wise Man of Arkansaw.

Probably the politest and most cosiderate man who ever lived was Gen. Bradsbale, of Arkansaw. Some time ago, boarding a train, he perceived his son, whom he had not seen for twenty years, occupying a seat, reading. The old centleman sat down immediately behind the young man. After the train had gone about thirty miles, the young man laid aside his newspaper, and, discovering his father, seized the old man

"Why didn't you let me know that you was on the train, father?" "Because," replied the old gentleman, 'I saw that you were reading, and I did not wish to disturb"— with affectionate warmth.
"That would have made no difference."

"And besides," continued the father, I thought that you might want to borow a few dollars.' "You'v got me there, guvner, but it's not too late yet, as I'm clean broke, and don't know how to get my next drink. You're the kindest, liberalist, dearest old father any son ever bad," as the old gentleman was slowly taking out his pocket. book; "and, as I may not see you for days and weeks again, oblige me by makng it fifty." But the crisp, rattling paper, instead of being a fresh bank note, turned out to be a receipt for one dollar and twenty-five cents, which he had paid a pawnbroker where, for this sum, the graceless scamp had pawned his father's overcoat, worth forty dollars !

The hens scratch in this for the bard, white pieces of ashes thus keeping the droppings loose and dry, This mixture spread on the meadows in the spring is an excellent manure. The using of coal ashes in the hen house is of great benefit, as it takes the place of shells, and also furnishes a dusting place for the hens. Western farmers annually lose thou-

A prominent Chicago dealer in products recently made the following significant remarks about the manufacture of oleomargarine: "I tell you oleomargarine will next season give the butter manufacturers of the West lively competition. You know a few years ago we were making a hard fight against oleomargarine and were demanding that laws be enacted to compel manufacturers of that and similar compounds, to brand their products, accomplished what we desired; but I believe we have now in it a stronger compatition with creamery butter than we ever had. The manufacturers were, by the enforcement of the laws we prayed for compelled to improve their products, and they have improved them to such a degree that they can sell them for what they are, and compete now with all but the very choicest grades of butter. It looks to me as if we are to be forced, sooner or later, to recognize oleomargarine as a legitimate competitor with the product of the cow.' What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpectable one, go to Wanamaker's." The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it. Oftener we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.

Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-andfelt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt prettily trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value,

If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps thisit is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the
