The potter stood at his daily work, One patient foot on the ground : The other with never slackening speed Turning his swift wheel round,

Watching the restless knee, Till my friend said low, in pitying voice How tired his foot must be!" The potter never paused in his work, shaping the wondrous thing; Twas only a common flower-pot, But periect in fashioning.
Blowly he raised his patient eyes, with homely truth inspired;

No. marm ; it isn't the foot that kicks ;

The one that stands gets tired !"
-Alice Wellington Rollins, in The Continent

A BEUGAR UN MORSEBACK. Vinginian Who Bas Supported His Family by Begging Far and Wide. dent writing from Washing ton, Va., says: In a log cabin under a spur of the Blue Ridge mountains and near the village of Washington, in Rappahan-nock county, Va., lives a man whose server has been a remarkable one. For many years of his life he was literally a page on horseback. gar on horseback. Born of the shift es race to be seen in those mountains he found himself soon after reaching his majority the head of a family, consisting of a wife and a numerous brood of chilen, for whose maintenance such labor as he was willing to perform was utterly in adequate. In this state of affairs he naturally sought assistance from the country folk around him, and to such good purpose that he was encouraged to extend his field of operations and no man became more regular in attendance on the quarterly terms of the superior court than "Kit Jenkins." By dint of earnest solicitations he managed ollect enough from politicians, lawyers ind clients assembled on these occasions to purchase a somewhat aged and attenu ated steed and the second year after the close of the war found in him "A Beggar on Horseback." In the first company of infantry that marched from the neighbor-hood to the battle field of Manassas under the command of Capt. T. B. Massie were enrolled two scions of the Jenkins family.

One of them was either killed in battle or died in some hospital, and "Kit" did not fail to reinforce his appeals for help by recounting this fact. At first his circuit was within a radius of probably five miles and every farm house within that distance of his mountain but received a visit from him at least twice a year. He went pre pared generally with a bag large enough to hold a side of bacon and half a bushel of meal, with room also for such favors in he could obtain. Always respectful and presenting a countenance calculated to soften the stoniest heart, he was seldom sent away empty. By degrees he enlarged his bounds, and in the last year of his peripatetic career was often heard of in towns fifty or sixty miles away. Once he crossed the Potomac river into Maryland and returned to his home by way of Washington, in which city he was duly honored by notices in some of the newspapers. But it is of his last trip that he speaks with great pride, for it was then that he had the honor of ringing the bell at the front door of the gubernatorial mansion in Richmond. Just what hap-nened to him after the bell had sounded "Kit" has never clearly related; however, the next morning found him astride the old bay nag whose head was pointed towards the home of Jefferson at Charlottsville. There he created no little merriment and acquired much from the students of the university. His appearance on his return is said to have resembled that of one Mosby's scouts after a visit to the house of some loyal Dutchman in the valley. His wants for the coming winter were supplied, but at the expense of the life of his faithful companion. After the having promised his vote for a candidate no soft words or proffered bribes have been found powerful enough to shake the loyalty of this prince of beggars.

tled, "Kit's" small figure may still be seen, and if his little eyes have lost some what of their keenness, and if the black of his beard has given place to gray, he is none the less ready to bandy jokes or return flattery for kind words or deeds. On election day he never misses, and once ystem must go and that before riends, if it ever had any ex n in office, are becoming fewer new advocates for its aboli-ling forward. County officers to be exacted they should be paid into the county treasury. But if we could have our own way about the matter, we would abelish fees entirely, and throw open all the county offices to the people free of cost. There is no necessity for a longer continnance of this tax. The various duties of the judge, commissioners and county treasurer, are discharged without cost to the people, and fees can be just as readily ed with in the other county offices. If there be no necessity for the county commissioners to exact fees for the business they transact in their office for the public, there can be none for the register or recorder. There can be no objection, that we can see, to the abolition of all fees, and to throwing open the courts to a'll "without money and without price." Down with the fee system.
