SOCIAL SPLENDORS. A BOTAL SILVER WEDDING.

Gorgeous Procession That Defiled Through The Schless as Berlin-Magnificent Pageans and Jubilant Cole-

The historical pageant at Berlin on Thursday night, in connection with the celebration in the old schloss of the Crown Prince's silver wedding, presented a scene of festive splendor hitherto unriv-alled even in the pageant-loving court of Berlin. The White saloon was lighted with 10,000 wax candles and 160 electric lights, the combination producing a re-markably lustrous effect and enhancing the brilliant richness of the magnificent the brilliant richness of the magnificent costumes and jewels of those present. At 9 o'clock the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" burst forth and the royal persona, es entered the saloon, the emperor es a sing the queen of Saxony, and the crown prince, dressed in the white uniform of a Pomeranian cuirassier, escorting the crown princess. She wore a magnificent dress of white damask, a coronet of diamonds and a ribbon across the breast woven with the colors of the eight orders she holds, including the Eng-lish order of the star of India. The Prince of Wales was in the crimson uniform of the Blucher hussars, of which regiment he has been recently appointed colonel. After them followed the duke and duchthe limbs; frequent attacks of biccough; inability to void the urine and great fatigue in attempting it—you are suffering from some the bid the suffering from some attempting it—you are suffering from some attempting from some attempting fr grown prince and grown princess took their seats on the throne, the other person-ages being ranged according to rank with punctilious care. While the illustrious spectators were taking their places the picture galleries and other saloons adjacent to the White saloon were thronged by a brilliant crowd of nearly six hundred nobles, ladies and gentlemen, attired in

JOE SEMET'S ROME.

Where " Frits " Lives When off the Stage

Where "Fritz "Lives When off the Stage, A reporter who took a look at Joe Emmet's house, between Troy and Albany on a high bluff overlooking the Hudson river thus describes the place : The house stands or a spreading lawn several hundred yards from the roadside, on slightly elevated ground. An expansive lake reaches from a point near the front entrance to the road, and spreads out two arms which are spanned with bridges near the upper and lower entrances to the arms which are spanned with bridges near the upper and lower entrances to the grounds. Midway between the two gates and at the edge of the lake, there is a curious frame building, above which swing the long arms of a windmill. A large wheel, similar in appearance to the paddle-wheel of a steamboat, is hung on one side. Most astute philosophers have been known to stand for hours looking at this odd structure in a wind miles are the odd structure in a vain endeavor to make it out. The interior disclosen elaborate it out. The interior disclosen elaborate arrangements for bathing in the lake, the depth of which is regulated within the building by means of a partly submerged float. There are several retiring rooms about the size of seaside bathing-houses. The building can only be reached by means of a rowheat. The grounds are means of a rowboat. The grounds are graded and terraced. A deep ravine, in which there are waterfalls, extends along one side, and a dense grove of wood forms a background to the picture. The walls of the house are brick ; but there is much woodwork about the cor-nices and roof. There are balconies and plazzes on all sides; but it is the interior of the house in which the whimsical owner takes more pride, and which is most novel in its design. From cellar to garret it is a curious structure. In the middle of the house, on the ground floor , is an octagonal room with open doorways, so that a view is obtained in this apartment of the interterior of four others. The doorways are hung with rich portiere curtains. This central apartment is called the music room. An organ stands in an alcove at one side, or rather is built in it ; an up an ode to the flower of England, which right piano stands in another corner, and the spreading Hohenzollern tree. The music again sounded as the stately procession representing the time of the Emperor Frederick, who ruled the holy Roman Empire from 1440 to 1493, entered the White saloon Empire from 1440 to 1493, entered
