SATURDAY FVENING, MARCH 8, 1868 BERNETT'S YAORT CRUISE.

Merry Doings in the Mediterranean Chronicled by a Cook. The cook who went with James Gordon lennett on a yacht tour around the world tells a World reporter what doings there were on the vessel: "Sometimes as many as twenty gentlemen would sit down to table of an evening, and, while that same German band was a playing airs on the deck till it would make you sick, they down in the cabin were eating and drink-ing. Each day there would be a new bill of fare and as many as ten courses—some-times more, according to the occasion and the company. Before they got fairly down to the coffee they were a prettly lively set, cutting up all sorts of capers. Then they would come up on deck and sing some more. Mr. Bennett used to call all the men up on deck and have them dance the sailor's hornpipe. Then when they got through he had champagne served to them all around like a prince. All the time we were at Gibraltar I had a mighty hard time getting any sleep at all, what with the cooking and the rest of it. Then Mr Bennett was all the time playing tricks like a student. One night, very late, he went down into the hold and filled a big pan full of some sort of burning stuff and set it on fire. There was a big flame and a great deal of smoke at once, and he was delighted, and sent a boy rushing around the ship shouting 'Fire!' 'Fire?' at the top of his voice like a madman. The guests down in the saloon and the sailors and all on board came up on deck terribly fright ened and most of them only half dressed Some of them jumped overboard and boats had to be lowered to pick them up. They were very sheepish when Mr. Ben nett told them it was only a joke. He only wanted to get them up so that they might have some fun with him. No, I tell you most of those fel lows were pretty mad, but you see they didn't say a word because they were all his guests and didn't want to offend him. He ordered up fizz and of cold water into all the beds where the men were sleeping. That time they were hopping mad and did some tall swearing. but in the morning nothing more was said about it." A Father ess Country. A certain editor recently received : woodcut of George Washington, and pinned it to the wall near the office door. One day while at work his little girl came into his room, and spying the picture, started the following dialogue : "Who is that picture of, papa?" . "Washington."

"Who was Washington?"

" Father of his country." "Why was he called the father of his country, papa?"

" Because he fought for her independand was a great and good man." "Is be alive now, papa? "When did he die ?"

" December 14, 1799."

"Who is the father of this country now, 'No one : it's fatherless." The little girl was silent a few moments and then inguired : "Was he the little boy who couldn't tell a lie?"

"The same." "Well, this country will never have another, will it, papa?" And the conversation was concluded with the empeatic remark :

Not even a step father." An American Joke in Paris.

The feast was set, the guests were met, when a young man entered in. " said he to the master of the "I have come to you upon a very important mission. Were it otherwise, I should have not ventured to call upon you upon this auspicious day, when, as I perceive, you are about to celebrate the betrothal of your fair daughter. Still, as it may save you $10,000—but if you are engaged I will retire."

"By no means, my dear sir, by no means," said the father of the bride ex pectant, warmly; "we are just about sitting down to dinner, but join us, and, after dinner, we can discuss matters." The young man allows himself to be induced to join the jovial company, where he eats for two and drinks for three. At the conclusion of the feast the father escorts him to a private apartment and begs him to reveal his business. "I think, sir," he says to the stranger, offering him a cigar of prime quality, "that you observed that you could show me how to save $10,000."

"Precisely," says the stranger, lighting the cigar. "Now, you intend marrying your daughter to that amiable but some what weak-minded youth down stairs, and giving her a marriage portion of $20,000. Give her to me, sir, and I'll take her with half the money. That'll leave you $10,000 ahead !"
