"TERASI TERAS!"

The Legend of the wrigin of the Nam A writer in a Philadelphia paper relate the legend of the origin of the name "Texas," as told to her by General Sam Houston when she was a little girl. Gen. on had it from an Indian chief, as follows: "A long time ago, when the spaniards overran and plundered Mexico, some of the red men left them and came towards the rising sun. They crossed the Rio Grande and not knowing what lay before them, entered upon the great salt marshes. They traveled many days, and found but little sweet water or game. The weather grew hot and the little streams dried up and the grass withered and many old men and women and children died of thirst. One day, after many weeks of weary walking, a party of young braves, who had been sent ahead to reconnoitre, came running back and said: 'We have found water; come on!' This good news put new life into their veins, and although nothing could be seen but a dry, flat, bald prairie, the scouts were standing still, calling and beckoning to them and pointing towards something apparently at their feet. At length they reached the spot where the braves were standing. Fifty feet below them the limpid waters of the Colorado eang a melody to heaven. Beyond, far as stretched a green expanse. The tall mesquite grass, yielding to the breath of the gentle south wind, rolling in vast billows of verdure under the ardent summer sun. Little 'islands' of mesquite trees dotted this grassy sea, and herds of buffalo and deer grazed in peaceful ignorance of an enemy's approach. Forgetting hunger, fatigue and even thirst in this delicious vision the red men fell upon their knees and cried out: 'Tehas!' Tehas!" "Tehas" is the nearest approach in English to the correct pronunciation of Texas, and it means—so the narrator explains-Paradise.

A Beauty Milkmald. London Society.

Among the brilliant coterie of beauties that surrounded the Prince of Wales at Brighton in the early part of the present century was Lady Haggerstone, whose charms had at first sight attracted the admiration of the amorous Florizel. But not content with the general admiration which his royal highness was disposed to grant to all pretty women, her ladyship was ambitious to completely captivate the heart of the heir apparent. Accordingly a fete champetre was announced to come off at her pretty little villa near the Spa, and her ladyship was determined to charm the prince by assuming a rustic dress that would have satisfied the taste of a Watteau. At her residence she had a miniature farmyard and three pretty little Alderneys. When the prince with his friends and attendants had arrived the fair hostess came forward from a side wicket dressed as a milk-maid, for the purpose of making a syllabub for the prince. She had a silver pail in one hand and an ornamental stool in the other. Thus equipped she tripped along, with ribbons flying fom her dainty little milking hat that hung on one side of her graceful head, and the smallest little apron tied WALL PAPERS and WINDOW SHADES below her lace stomacher, till she came opposite his royal highness, to whom she dropped a carefully-studied, bewitching rustic curtsy. Then passing lightly over the beautifully plaited straw, her tuckedup gown showing her neat ankle as well as her colored stockings, she placed her stool and pail conveniently for use Leaning against the flank of one of the crossestlooking of the Alderneys, she was about to begin her pretty task; but, not relishing this new and strange companion, the animal at once commenced kicking out. upsetting stool, pail and milkmaid, and then trotting coolly away. Lady Haggerstone rose covered with confusion and beat a hasty retreat into her little dairy, whence she did not emerge again that day

Decency Towards Horses.

For the INTELLIGENCER. A horse cannot be screamed at and cursed without becoming less valuable in every particular. To reach the highest degree of value the animal should be perfectly gentle and always reliable, but it it expects every moment that it is in the barness to be "jawed" at and struck, it will be in a constant state of nervousnes and in its excitement is liable, through fear, to do something which is not expected. It is possible to train a horse to be governed by the word of mouth as is to train a child, and in such training the horse reaches its highest value.
When a horse is soothed by the gentle words of his driver-and we have see him calmed down from great excitemen by no other means-it may be very fairly concluded that he is a valuable animal for practical purposes, and it may be certainly concluded that the man who has such power over him, is a humane man and a sensible one. But all this simply means that the man must gain the animal's confidence. Only in exceptional instances is a horse stubborn or vicious It he understands his surroundings and what is required of him, he gives no trouble As almost every reader must know, if the animal when frightened can be brought up to the object, he will become calm.

The reason is that he understands that there is nothing to fear. So he must be taught to have confidence in the man who handles him, and then this powerful ani mal, which usually a man could not handle, if it were disposed to be vicious, will give no trouble. The very best rule, therefore, which we would lay down for the management of the horse, is gentle ness and good sense on the part of the driver. Bad drivers make bad horses W. A. D.
