SPRING WORK

Cleaning the Trunks of Fruit Trees. Germantown Telegraph.

Now, before the warm weather gives life and motion to many insects who use the barks of trees for their winter quarters, is a good time as any—and before active outdoor work begins—to clean off all the moss and superfluous or old bark from the trunks of trees. Not only the insects, but their millions of eggs, and the seeds of various blights and mildews are sheltered in the crevices and rough places of the old barks, moss, &c. It should be taken for granted that the appearance of the vegetable organisms on the stems of trees, as well as upon the bark of the trunks, shows that something has already gone wrong. Something has prevented the tree from thriving as it should have done, and because it did not thrive the moss followed. When, therefore, we make up our minds to look after the moss, it will be as well to find out what is the matter with the tree, and if possible place it in a position to throw off as it grows the dead bark on which the mosses and sickness feed.

The stunted condition of the trees which induces mossy and hide-bound bark is more frequently the result of starvation than anything else. When a tree does not expand fast the bark is not thrown off but remains on the tree to slowly decay; but with a rapid expansion it is thrown off as a tree swells and thus keeps its ownself clean. Starvation keeps the tree from growing. A liberal supply of good food making a tree thrive and expand rapidly, is one of the best means of keeping a tree clean and clear of moss.

When a tree has got once into this hardened condition, mere manuring will hardly get it out of it alone. In such cases orchardists make use of a liberal application of the pruning knife—cutting away all the branches which may seem to be pretty well hardened or stunted. This brings on a free grown of foliage the next season, and a free growth is one of the best ways to keep the main stems clean.

Much can be done in the early spring with those old starved and stunted trees towards getting them to do better. The loose bark may be scraped off, and even washed with weak potash water or soft soap. The branches which seem gone beyond recovery, or are too weak or so much stunted as to promise little in the future, may be cut away, and some good fertilizing material may be hauled and spread under the trees.

As to what is a good fertilizer for fruit trees much has been written, but we believe for the apple and pear almost anything that comes conveniently to hand is good. We knew years ago one very successful apple raiser who used no thing whatever but ashes from the kitchen. These were always saved expressly for his apple orchard and spread evenly on the ground under each tree. It is commonly said that there is no nutrition in anthracite coal ashes, and perhaps there is not; but it is a fact that these trees grow amazingly, and bore large crop of the most beautiful fruit. It may be that the wood ashes from the "kindling," and perhaps some kitchen refuse among the rest, were the chief fertilizing ingredients. Be that as it may, this orchard was a grand success. The bark was always smooth and healthy looking, without any washing or scraping. Nothing in the orchard line could look better. We have known others who used simply ditch cleanings, or good top soil from wet places, and always with considerable increase in the apparent health and vigor of the tree.

Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and HALL & RUCKEL, New York. jun6-lyd,eod&w
