Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

table this morning he faced as many of his constituents as could thrust themselves into the court room. For half an hour they had thronged the halls outside and surged against the doors every time an employee of the court passed in or sut. In five minutes after the doors were thrown open every seat was filled and the crowd pressed forward, four abreast, down the aisles to the railing. There was no great secret to be revealed, such as kept expectation at a feverish pitch during the long days of the Mollie Maguire trial, when Captain Linden sat at the counsel table, the incarnation of mystery. This on in the room, whereas Feathers had was but a vulgar curiocity to hear horrible testified that he had. was but a vulgar euriosity to hear horrible particulars of a twice-told tale told again or to feast their ears upon the obscene letters which all expected would be read. There were the steady going old farmers who had deposited their money in Nutt's hands at the bank; inside the bar were the lawyers who had tried cases with Dukes, the politician who had nominated him for the Legislature, and outside the railing some hundreds of the voters whose hands he had shaken and whose babies he weight of the testimony arrayed against him yesterday and the reading of the letters to-day seemed to somewhat break mrs. "No; I tried to, but-." Her voice faltered and counsel for the defense objected to her proceeding.

Clark Breckenridge, who had got the letters from Mrs. Nutt and given them to the counsel for the commonwealth, also identified the letters, and M. H. Bowman, cashier of the bank, identified the signatures. Mr. Playford then offered the letters in evidence, "to prove animus and motives of Dukes, his position with respect to the Nutt family and to explain how Captain Nutt came to be in Dukes'

Mr. Boyle argued that the letters did not contain a single point of interest, indicated no desire to injure Captain Nutt or his family, and its only effect could be to prejudice the jury unjustly against the petent testimony. The widow and sister of Captain Nutt withdrew from the court room. There was a momentary rustle as the crowd wriggled itself into a listening attitude. Dukes dropped his head upon his hand, and Attorney Playford read the two letters to the jury. No one in the court room seemed to move a muscle while the strong voice of the lawyer brought out the full indecency of the letters. When he sat down there was a leaning of heads together and whispering and looks of contempt and loathing at the writer. The letters made a stir. A full and correct summary of them was published in the Times of Monday.

THE DEFENSE BEGUS.

After the letters had been read the tak een Dukes loitering near the house about the 1st of October. "Did you see him drop a letter near the

"Yes," the witness answered, quickly. "I object," cried Mr. Boyle, angrily, but he was too late. The answer was in the ears of the jury to indicate that the anonymous letter reflecting upon Miss Nutt, which Dukes alluded to in his second letter, was written by himself. The commonwealth here rested its case, and R. H. Lindsay opened in the prisoner's behalf.

The main points dwelt upon in the ppening for the prisoner were that the shooting was done in self defense, in Dukes' own room, where Captain Nutt had come, doubly armed with a heavy cane and a large revolver, after writing him a letter, threatening to take his life. Julius Shipley, who made a plan of Dukes' room last week, went upon the stand and explained the position of the various pieces of furniture—the bed, beside which Dukes stood when he fired; the mantel, upon which Captain Nutt was leaning, etc. Mrs. Jennings, wife of the proprietor of the hotel, detailed with fem-inine elaboration how she was sitting in the sitting room and saw the Breckenridge, Nutt and Feathers group. Then she heard the souffle in the room above. It seemed to be going on near the door and shook the whole house. It lasted about two minutes and then she heard the shot. She ran up stairs with her husband and a colored man and two girls from the dining room. When she reached the door of Dukes' room she saw Captain Nutt lying in the corner by the wardrobe, with Breckenridge bending over him. Dukes was standing near the window at the opposite side of the room, beside the bed. Feathers, who was standing near Dukes, cried, "Go for the doctor!" She ran for Doctor Ewing, came back with him, and when she started out a second time for

He replied: "If I did I did it in self-defense." He gave the cane to Jennings and he placed it behind the door He identified a cane which was shown him as the one Dukes gave him. It was the cane carried by Captain Nutt that morning, a plain brown stick, about an inch and a half thick at the top. The witness had not testified anything at the inquest about the cane being in Dukes' hand, he said, because nobody ask at him about it. He also testified that Feathers had no hat

Mrs. Nutt of blood. She heard Mrs. Jennings, as was the first witness called to the stand this morning. She identified two letters from Dukes to her husband. The first plied: "I am sorry, too."

M. H. Bowman, cashier of the bank, identified the pistol taken from Captain Nutt's body, a self-cocking Colt's. He also identified Captain Nutt's handwriting in a letter sent to Dukes under date of December 17, 1882. Sheriff Hoover testified to Dukes coming to his office between 10 and 11 o'clock or the morning of the shooting. He found on Dukes' left arm a bruse, as if from a blow with a cane. Dr. Smith Fuller had also seen a bruise on Dukes' arm and thought it might have been made with Captain Nutt's cane. The defense then offered in evidence the letter from Nutt to Dukes in reply to Dukes' first letter. The court adjourned, with the testimony

DEAR SIE,—Feeling deeply grateful for the great benefits which I have received from the use of a very valuable article which has its origin and home in our beautiful city, and hoping that others who are afflicted as I have been may find like relief from its use, I beg the indulgence of a few lines in your valuable paper for the privilege of communicating to you a brief statement of facts, for the benefit of the multitude of sufferers to be met with that 1 have been very severely afflicted with heart disease for a number of years, and have suffered from it as only those can suffer who have that disease; it reduced my strength so low that I could scarcely walk across my room, and the least exertion rendered me so short-breathed that I dared scarcely move, and life seemed very burdensome. I was treated for my malady by the best physicians, and derived no benefit from their treatment or prescriptions until I was advised by my family physician to use Hunt's Remedy, as my trouble was cause by inaction of my kidneys, which affected very seriously the action of my heart.
