HUNGARIAN TRAGEDY.

A peculiar and shocking domestic tragedy is reported from the town of Buda, in Hungary. A keeper of a crossing on the East Hungarian railway near that town happened to win a few days ago some hundreds of florins in a lottery. The poor fellow, who had never seen such a large sum of money in his life, took the bank notes home and amused himself in turning them over, forming a plan upon plan for their disposal. All at once a train was signalled, and he rushed to his post, leaving the precious roll behind him. As all luck would have it, his little daughter was playing in the room at the time. Struck by the peculiar appearance of the notes, having rarely if ever seen one before, and not knowing anything whatever of their value, she proceeded to use them as a plaything, and presently flung them into the fire, where they were burned to ashes. Just then the father returned, missed the notes and learned what had become of them. In his fury he struck the child a violent blow which stretched her lifeless on the floor. The mother who was giving a bath in an adjoining room to her second child, an infant, rushed in on hearing the disturbance, picked up the little girl and tried to restore her to consciousness. Her efforts were vain; the child was dead. She flew to the bath in which she had left the infant. Another shock awaited her—the child was drowned in its bath. The childless mother, distracted and desperate, rushed out of the house and hanged herself on the branch of a tree. The wretched father, overwhelmed with his fortune—his fortune gone, his wife and children gone—seized a revolver and put an end to his existence. The artistic completeness of this tragedy gives it a certain air of unreality, but the Hungarian journals vouch for the exact truth of these details.

CRIME AND CAPACITY.

The Record of Recent Robberies. A wheel on a car of a down-train train on the New Brunswick railroad broke on Saturday at the Muncie bridge, breaking down the bridge, and precipitating seven or eight cars loaded with potatoes and starch into the stream twenty feet below. Loss, $5,000.
